

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL YEAR BOOK was first issued in 1885, with the special object of supplying a demand which had often been made by Conservative speakers and writers, and by politicians generally, for a cheap and handy reference-book of political information, containing facts and statistics of public interest, such as are often only obtainable after laborious search among Parliamentary Blue Books and other official documents. The success which attended its issue has justified the continuance of the publication in an enlarged and improved form.

The Constitutional Year Book does not claim to compete in variety of general information with the numerous and valuable Almanacks at present in circulation. While, however, its scope is chiefly political, there will be found in its pages much of the information usually contained in an Almanack, in addition to features which are believed to distinguish it from any existing work of the kind.

Special attention is drawn to the complete information relating to Parliamentary Constituencies, Members, Candidates, and Elections from 1885 to the present time; to the Parliamentary Summary for 1905, in a special and convenient form; to the statistics bearing on the General Election of 1900; and to the condensed Tables of Statistics on almost every subject of national importance, which have been carefully revised and brought down to the latest possible date.

The Editor will be glad to receive any suggestions or corrections from correspondents.

Also to Adrianople, Beyrout, Constantinople, Smyrna, Panama, Tangier, certain places in Asia Minor and the Levant, and to nearly all British Colonies, Possessions and Protectorates.

Money up to £40 may be transmitted by Telegraph Money Orders between all Post Offices in the United Kingdom authorised to transact Telegraph and Money Order Business. Commission at the ordinary Inland rate, in addition to a fee of 2d. and the cost of telegram.

TELEGRAMS.—The charge for Inland Telegrams is 6d. up to twelve words, and id. for each additional word. Addresses are charged for. The amount paid for transmission covers the cost of delivery within three miles from the terminal office; beyond that limit porterage is charged at the rate of 3d. per mile or part thereof, calculated from the office door.

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANKS.—Any sum from one shilling upwards (excluding pence) will be received at all Money Order Offices in the United Kingdom. Not more than £50 may be deposited in one year, nor will interest be paid on more than £20 when the amount of a depositor's account reaches that sum, inclusive of interest. The rate of interest paid is 2½ per cent., or 6d. per complete pound per annum (it will probably be reduced to 23 per cent.).

The Post Office also undertakes the investment of small sums in Government Stock, for depositors in the Post Office Savings Bank. Not more than £200 Stock can be credited to an account in any year, nor more than £500 Stock in all. A small Commission is charged for investment or sale, including receipt of Dividends.

(The Post Office Guide, 6d. quarterly, and the Handbook, 1d. half-yearly, obtainable at all Post Offices, contain the regulations under which the business of the Department is conducted).

THE CONSTITUTION.

The term, "The English Constitution," is commonly so used as to include both the form of public Government u der which we live, and the constitutional rights and privileges of private citizens. Considering the various forms of Government as either "absolute," or "pure, or "mixed," the English Constitution belongs to the latter category. By this is meant, that the voice of the ultimate sovereign power, which is the constituent body of the nation, is so obtained as to give expression to the various classes and interests of the collective community. Again, constitutions being either "written" or "unwritten," the English is "unwritten," i.e., Constitution although it results, in some m-asure, from the decisions of judges, and the provisions of statutes, such as Magna Charts, the Petition of Right, or the Bill of Rights, such decisions and statutes are avowedly declaratory merely of the preexisting law. Whereas, then, in the case of written Constitutions, such as that of the United States, the question of the bearing of proposed changes upon the Constitution of the State is one of mere interpretation, and to be decided by the ordinary tribunals; in England, on the contrary, "unconstitutional" conduct on the part of a Minister can only mean a violation of the spirit of the Constitution, and can only be reached by the extra rdinary proceeding of impeachment, which is defined as "a judicial trial by the House of Lords of a person accused by the House of Commons of grave offences, which the ordinary law cannot reach, through its insufficiency or uncertainty." This proceeding has, in modern times, become rare, but in extraordinary cases might still be resorted to. The Constitution of England is a

LIMITED MONARCHY,

the supreme political authority being vested in a King or Queen, and two Houses of Parliament. It being conceded that in every constitution which is the growth of ages, and which exercises sway over mixed populations, "there must be two parts, first, that which excites and preserves the reverence of the population the dignified parts—and next, efficient parts, those by which it in fact works and rules," the distinctive merit of the English Constitution is, that while its "efficient part" works more easily and simply and better than any instrument of government which has yet been tried, its "dignified parts" are still as capable of exciting and sustaining enthusiasm as when the King was his own Prime Minister. The secret of the efficiency of the English Constitution lies in the close union of the executive and legislative power. The connecting link is

THE CABINET.

By that word, which is technically unknown to any Act of Parliament or in official proceedings, is meant a committee of the legislative body, selected to be the executive body; a committee, however, which has the power of advising the dissolution of the assembly which indirectly appointed it. Though appointed under one Parliament, it can, with the permission of the Sovereign appeal to the It is nominated by the Crown, but being also responsible to Parliament, it consists exclusively of statesmen whose opinions agree in the main with the majority of the House of Commons. Among the members of this committee are distributed the great departments of the Administration. Each Minister conducts the ordinary business of his own office without reference to his colleagues; but the most important affairs of every department, and especially such matters as are likely to be the subject of discussion in Parliament, are brought under the consideration of the whole Ministry. When Lord Salisbury's third Ministry came into office in 1895, a Cabinet Committee for National Defence was constituted, under the Chairmanship of the Prime Minister. The functions of this b dy, now called the COUNCIL OF IMPERIAL DEFENCE. have been remodelled. It consists of the Prime Minister, the Secretaries of State for War and India, the First Lord of the Admiralty, Earl Roberts (late Commander-in Chief), the chief of the General Staff, the first Sea Lord, the Directors of Military and Naval Intelligence; and other high officials are called into council as occasion requires. Perennial records are kept of its conclusions and of the reasons on which they are based. While the Committee in no way limits the responsibility of the Cabinet as a whole, it provides a machinery by which the military policy of the country shall be as far as possible, continuous, and shall be based upon the authority of the most competent experts. The establishment of the Committee was formally approved by the House of Commons on March 5th, 1903. In Parliament, the

are bound to act as one man in all questions relating to the Executive Government. If one of them dissents from the rest on a question too important to admit of compromise, it is his duty to retire. While the Ministry retains the confidence of the Parliamentary majority, that majority supports them against opposition, and rejects every motion which reflects on them or is likely to embarrass them. If they forfeit that confidence, or if the Parliamentary majority are dissatisfied with the way in which affairs are conducted, they have merely to declare that they have ceased to trust the Ministry, and to ask for a Ministry which they can trust. By the system of Party, an organised body of men will be always found ready to succeed them; "His Majesty's Opposition" being as much a part of the polity as the Administration itself Cabinet holds its deliberations in secret, and the King's permission is necessary if any Minister desires to make public what passe 1 therest. Mr. Gladstone, whose experience was unrivalled, held that the Privy Councillor's oath applied to its proceedings, and that no one was entitled even to make a note of them except the Prime Minister, who reports to the Sovereign. No official record or minute of any kind is kept. The chief of the Cabinet is or Premier. Besides being a Privy Councillor, he usually, though not necessarily, holds the office of First Lord of the Treasury. He has no legal primacy over the other members of the Cabinet; this is, indeed, necessarily the case in a body which has itself no legal status.* In official precedence the First Lord of the Treasury ranks below many of the other Ministers. The Prime Minister is selected by the Sovereign, whose choice, among natural-born subjects, is nominally unrestrained, but is, in fact, limited to the leaders of the party which can command a majority in the House of Commons. When charged by the Sovereign with the task of forming an Administration, he proceeds to the selection of occupants for the various offices, and submits their names for the approval of the Crown. The old Constitutional maxim, that "the Kingcan do no wrong," is now literally true, for his acts are really the acts of his Ministers; and his Ministers are responsible to the House of Commons, not merely as of old for any breach of the law, but for the general course of their policy, which must accord with the opinions of the majority of that House, or else, in conformity with Constitutional usage, practically as binding as a legal enactment, the Ministers are bound to resign office.

THE SUCCESSION.

The Succession to the Crown is regulated by an Act of Parliament passed in A.D. 1701, and usually called the "Act of Settlement." This Act limited the right of succession to the Princess Sophia of Hanover, grand-daughter of James I., and to her heirs, being Protestants.

All the property which once formed the main revenue of the Crown is now treated as furnishing part of the general State revenues, and the management of it is directly controlled by Parliament. At the commencement of every reign, Parliament fixes the yearly sum which shall be payable to the Crown for all expenses not directly of a public kind. (See under "The Civil Lists and Royal Grants;" post.)

THE

SOVEREIGN AND PARLIAMENT. The King (acting by the advice of his Ministers) can prorogue Parliament whenever he pleases, and no Parliament can be assembled, prorogued, or dissolved without his express command. He can also dissolve Parliament at his pleasure; but, since the passing of the Septennial Act in 1716, no l'arliament can last longer than seven years. Its annual meeting is secured by the necessity of obtaining from it a grant for the yearly supplies. The assent of the Sovereign is indispensable for any Bill (or proposed law) to become The legislative power is actual law. vested primarily in the two Houses of Parliament.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

The House of Lords consists of the first and second Estates of the Realm, viz.: the Lords Spiritual and the Lords Temporal. It comprises a varying number of English peers (princes of the blood, dukes, marquiser, earls, viscounts, and barons), two archbishops, 24 bishops, 16 representative peers for Scotland chosen for each Parliament, and 28 representative peers for Ireland, elected for life. The Sovereign can make as many new peers as he chooses. His Ministers usually recommend (especially at the time of their giving up office) the grant of peerages to some of their most active and distinguished supporters. When once a person has been summoned to Parliament to sit in the House of Lords. or has actually taken his seat, or when a person has been created a peer by the King's "letters patent," his succeeding heirs inherit the right to sit, except in the case of certain law Lords created peers for life under the provisions of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876. Women cannot sit in the House of Lords, though women may be peeresses by Royal grant, or in a few cases even by descent. The Lord Chancellor, who is always, though not necessarily, a peer, presides over the debates in the House of Lords. Any bills can be proposed in the House of Lords except such as affect taxation.

^{* &}quot;The Treaty of Berlin (1878) is the first European instrument which formally describes the Prime Minister of England by that title."—Times, Nov. 11th, 1904.

bills, on coming up from the Commons, are never altered in the Lords, though they may be thrown out. (See under "House of Lords," post.)

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The House of Commons (the third Estate of the Realm) consists, since the Redistribution Act of 1885, of 670 members, elected by "constituencies" of counties, boroughs, or universities. places represented have varied a great deal from time to time, according to their changing size and importance; through all changes the principle has been maintained that every member represents the interests of some definite locality or place. The main qualification entitling a person to be registered and to voteboth in counties and boroughs—is the inhabitant occupancy of a dwellinghouse, on which rates are paid, for twelve months preceding July 15. In counties, the possession of freehold property is an ancient alternative qualification. particulars of the qualifications for voting will be found under the article "Parliamentary Franchise.'

The main function of the House of Commons is one hardly recognised by common speech, but may be sufficiently described as the maintenance of the Executive Government. Without a House of Commons divided into organised parties, the carrying on of Government by the Cabinet system would be in a free country impossible. The House of Commons has also what has been called "an informing function." Formerly it was accustomed to inform the Crown of the grievances and complaints of particular persons, and the Sovereign took action at the petition of Parliament. At the present time the function of Parliament is rather to inform public opinion of such grievances and complaints. The practice of asking questions in the House, though often carried to extreme limits, is, it cannot be doubted, a valuable safeguard against abuses of power by the Executive. It is, further, the office of the House of Commons to give expression to the real opinion of the nation on all matters which come before The time spent in a debate on some question of foreign policy, apparently without result, may in reality have been employed in the manner most profitable to the general good. Lastly, the House of Commons is the most important branch of the Legislature. The principal measures are generally brought forward by the Ministers of the day, but private members are equally entitled to introduce Bills, only that it is more difficult for them to carry such through. There is one important exception, however, to the rule just stated. No private person can propose a Bill having for its object an increase of taxation. By this rule is secured the responsibility of the Cabinet for the national finance; without it, the nation might be continually enlarging its expenditure, the blame for such increase attaching to separate and irresponsible private members.

PRIVILEGES AND SAFEGUARD3.

The right of public meeting and the right to petition Parliament are important Constitutional privileges. The maintenance of what is called "The liberty of the subject" forms a valuable part of the English Constitution. Its chief safeguards, independently of the mode of making laws, are (1), the administration of justice on the trial of accused persons; (2), the general prevention of illegal imprisonment; (3), the definition and limitation of the duties of the police.

To the first category belong (a) the institution of "trial by jury," which secures a fair trial by twelve persons chosen at random from the body of the people, having nothing to hope or fear from the Executive; (b) the protection accorded to jurymen, by which they cannot be made civilly or criminally responsible for their verdicts; also the protection of their functions from possible encroachments by judges; (c) the independence of the judges, secured by the enactment which makes their commission "during good behaviour," and renders them irremovable, except upon a joint address from both Houses of Parliament.

An example of the second class of safeguards is the rule which secures that anyone whose liberty is restrained shall have an opportunity, under the writ of Habeas Corpus, of having the ground of his restraint judicially investigated; of being speedily brought to trial if accused, and of suffering his imprisonment at fixed places, not at the discretion of the Executive. The right to claim damages in a civil action for illegal detention, and the rule that "excessive bail must not be required," belong to this class of safeguards.

The last class is concerned with the definition and regulation of the duties of the police, especially in respect of subjecting suspected persons to a preliminary judicial investigation. Depending, as these safeguards do, on fine distinctions as to when a "warrant" is necessary in bringing an accused person before justices, they cannot be here discussed: though, in concluding, we may notice the Constitutional principle under which "general warrants," or warrants to apprehend all persons suspected, without naming or describing any specially, or to apprehend all persons guilty of a crime therein specified, are illegal, and will not, like legal warrants, protect the officer who executes them.

THE CROWN.

POWERS AND FUNCTION OF THE SOVEREIGN.

The durability, the regularity, and the popularity of the English Monarchy are curiously illustrated by the statement made by more than one writer on the Constitution, that from Egbert (802 A.D.) to Edward VII., the blood of Cerdic, the first King of Wessex (519 A.D.), has run in the veins of every English Sovereign, with the exception of Sweyn, Canute, Harold, and William the Conqueror. (See p. 18.)

In Saxon times the Crown was essentially dependent upon the popular will. It was not strictly hereditary. Preference would be given cæteris paribus to the son of a deceased king, but the chief object was to obtain a leader capable of maintaining the defence and the order of the realm. It was held that the Witenagemot, or national council, had power to depose an unworthy sovereign, and to revoke grants of public land unwisely made by The privileges and the powers of the King were nevertheless consider-He was entitled to maintenance for himself and his retinue on public journeys, and to the produce of wrecks, tolls, mines, fines, and forfeitures. He was the leader of the national forces. He was the fountain of justice, a court of appeal in the last resort, with arbitrary powers both of mercy and of punishment. The grounds mercy and of punishment. The grounds upon which William and Harold respectively laid claim to the Crown of Saxon England illustrate the position of the Monarchy. Harold urged that his oath of allegiance to William had been extorted by force, that he could not promise a Crown that was not his, that he had been elected by the free will of the people. William relied on the oath of Harold, who had sworn fealty upon the sacred relics, and on the choice of Edward the Confessor.

After the Norman Conquest, the power of the Crown was greatly augmented. This arose from the stern character of William, from his authority as a military conqueror, and from the change in the tenure of land. At Salisbury, in 1085, William received the fealty of all landtenure of land. holders, both of those who held in chief and of their tenants. All held from the One of the peculiar attributes of the feudal compact was thus infringed and altered. The Crown became despotic for 130 years, and its exactions were tremendous. At last, in 1215, Magna Charta laid the foundations of English liberty. appears that this great Statute was confirmed no less than thirty-two times, for whenever money was required by the King its renewal was demanded. It now stands on the Statute Book as 25 Edward I. (1297).Section 29 of this Act is the keystone of English History. "No freeman shall be taken or imprisoned, or be disseised of his freehold or liberties or free customs, or be outlawed or exiled, or any otherwise destroyed; nor will we pass upon him nor condemn him but by lawful judgment of his peers or by the law of the land. We will sell to no man, we will not deny or defer to any man either justice or right." Personal freedom, security of property, and liberty of movement, thus became the essential rights of every Englishman.

The Crown was not strictly hereditary until the time of Edward II. It was declared to be hereditary by a Statute in the 25th year of Edward III.

From the time of the confirmation of the Great Charter (1297) to the accession of the House of Tudor (1485), the prerogative of the Crown was often exercised in an arbitrary manner, though there was a constant assertion of privilege on the part of the Commons. Parliament met irregularly, at the King's pleasure. The right: of purveyance, the sale of pardons, thefines demanded on the accession or marriage of an heir, gave occasion for exactions that were heavy and uncertain. Windsor Castle was built in the reign of Edward III., under the right of purveyance, by which writs were issued to sheriffs of counties to furnish such workmen as might be required.

Under the House of Tudor, 1485—1603, the Crown had great power. The country was weary of civil war, and dreaded above all things a disputed succession; the nobles were exhausted, and had lost much of their power, and the Commons had not learned to use their strength. Henry VII., by means of the Star Chamber, treated with great rigour the nobles, the members of Parliament, and the jurors who offended him.

Henry VIII. was almost absolute, and his proclamations had the force of law. The reign of Edward VI. was marked by a milder rule, and by a repeal of the Statute giving to the King's proclamation the force of law.

Elizabeth, strong, despotic, and self-willed, yet had the wisdom so essential to a great ruler. She knew when and how to yield, without loss of dignity or of power. She was the first Sovereign under whom the constitutional right of Parliament to grant supplies was recognised; and the loans that were raised were punctually repaid.

The Stuarts were a very different race (1603—1688). Through good and through ill fortune they clung to the idea of the absolute power and privilege of the throne.

They forgot the great truth of the English Constitution, that English law ought to guide and to protect the highest and the lowest in the realm alike. Yet great Constitutional progress was made during the reigns of the Stuart Kings, and the power of the Commons was asserted and established. The Petition of Right presented to Charles I. in 1628 by the Commons, prayed—(1) That no loan or tax be levied except by consent of Parliament. (2) That no man might he imprisoned but by legal process. (3) That soldiers and sailors should not be billeted in private houses. To these demands the King, after some delay, replied, "Soit droit comme il est désiré." In 1641 the Star Chamber and the Courts of High Commission, the engines of arbitrary power employed by the Tudors, were abolished, and the King's Council was deprived of the power of arbitrary imprisonment. In the reign of Charles II. (12 Car. 2, cap. 24) the old feudal rights of wardship, purveyance, and other exactions were abolished. The Act of Habeas Corpus was also passed in this reign (31 Car. 2, cap. 2), 1679.

The "Declaration of Right" drawn up by Parliament and accepted by William and Mary on their accession in 1688, may be said to have terminated the long struggle between the Crown and the The most essential articles of this declaration are the following:-"The King cannot dispense with laws without the consent of Parliament. He cannot erect any tribunal of his own will. He cannot levy money without a Parliamentary grant. No standing army to be kept in time of peace without consent of Parlia-Excessive fines and immoderate punishments prohibited." The Revolution of 1688 also established the important principle that the Sovereign shall profess the Protestant faith, and shall be bound to maintain the Protestant religion as by law established. In the Coronation oath he swears that he will "maintain the true profession of the Gospel and the Protestant reformed religion established by law." The Bill of Rights (1689) and the Act of Settlement (1701) further enact that no person professing the Popish religion, or who shall marry a Papist, is capable of inheriting or possessing the Crown, and the people are released from their allegiance in such case.

The Royal Prerogative in 1688 was described as follows in a pamphlet written in that year—"The King has no prerogative but what the law gives him. We must not therefore presume a prerogative, and then conclude it law, but first find the law, and by it prove the prerogative, and when we have found the prerogative it must be measured by what the public good will bear. The King is supreme in the legislative part as well as in the executive part, but has not the whole supremacy in the legislative part as in the executive."

The following portion of the Coronation oath, as settled at the Revolution, is also interesting and instructive:—

"Question—Will you solemnly promise and swear to govern the people of this United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions thereto belonging according to the Statutes in Parliament agreed on, and the respective laws and customs of the same?

Answer—I solemnly promise so to do. Question—Will you to your power cause law and justice, in mercy, to be executed in all your judgments?

Answer—I will."

During the reigns of the four Georges, the respective rights and duties of the King, Lords, and Commons were gradually settled and acknowledged. King, however, exercised a far more active and direct authority than accords with the custom of the present day. George III., indeed, at the commencement of his reign, endeavoured to assert to the utmost extent the influence of the Sovereign. He permitted Lord Bute to hold a position of confidential adviser, independently of the Ministry and of Parliament. At a later period, during the administration of Lord North, the King assumed to himself the right of interference in all the details of administra-As soon, however, as Mr. Pitt tion. was enabled, by the assistance of the Crown, but with the support of the country, to defeat the Opposition in the House of Commons, and at the General Election of 1784 to secure a majority for himself, he became the Minister in fact as well as in name, and the relations between the Sovereign and the Minister gradually approximated to the existing system.

Although many of the powers of the Royal prerogative are dormant, the influence of the Crown is nevertheless deservedly great. And in the modified sense of the prerogative it has been said that the Crown has three rights—the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, and the right to warn.

Yet even now the power and prerogative of the Crown, and also its duties, are considerable. The King can prorogue or dissolve Parliament, even before it proceeds to business, and he can create peers without restriction as to numbers. He can veto laws, and is the irresponsible head of the Executive. The Sovereign is the "Fountain of Justice"; that is, with the advice of his responsible Ministers.

he appoints directly, or by delegation, all judges and magistrates. All criminal prosecutions are conducted in his name, and he can, with a few exceptions, pardon all offenders, either before or after conviction; though this prerogative is in practice seldom exercised. He is the head of society in the kingdom. All degrees of nobility are or have been derived by grant from the Crown. All titles of honour are in the gift of the Crown, and all corporations owe their charters, either directly or indirectly, to the same source. The Sovereign alone can coin money, impress what stamp he chooses upon it, and impart to it its legally current value. The Sovereign. being "Supreme governor as well in all spiritual or ecclesiastical things or causes temporal," appoints all archbishops and bishops of the Established Church. In respect of external affairs, the Sovereign appoints all ambassadors and diplomatic agents to foreign governments, receives foreign potentates and ambassadors, and conducts all negotiations with those States; appoints Commissions of enquiry; concludes treaties, and makes war or peace; has the supreme command of the army and navy, and appoints all the officers of those services; appoints the viceroys of Ireland and India, and the governors of Colonies and foreign possessions. In the case of certain of the Colonies he prescribes the form of government, and in all of them his assent is essential to the validity of all acts of colonial legislation.

But the old times of arbitrary power and the irresponsible use of it have passed away. The tyranny of Norman, Plantagenet, Tudor and Stuart Kings has disappeared. The power of the great nobles is only a subject for romance. The power of the Commons remains strong, rigorous, and restless: yet there is a sentiment that has controlled, and ought still to control, the dominant element in the State—an unswerving regard for British freedom and British law, the security of property, and the safety of the person.

THE CIVIL LIST AND ROYAL GRANTS.

The Civil List of King Edward VII. is exceeded in amount by the revenue of several foreign monarchs. The income of some of the foreign sovereigns is stated to be as follows:—Russia, unknown, but generally believed to be upwards of £2,000,000; Austria-Hungary, £780,000; Prussia, £770,000; Italy, £614,000; Spain, £380,000. The King's Civil List is also considerably less than that of previous British sovereigns. The Civil List of George III., in 1815, amounted to £1,030,000; and William IV. received £510,000.

In his speech from the Throne on February 14th, 1901, His Majesty stated that he placed the Hereditary revenues of the Crown, as his predecessor had done, unreservedly at the disposal of the House of Commons. The Civil List Act, 1901 (1 Edw. VII., cap. 4), was passed in recognition of the fact that these revenues belonged to the Crown.

It is directed, therefore, that the Hereditary Revenue specified in the Civil List Act of 1837 (which were then declared to be due and payable to Her Majesty Queen Victoria) shall be carried to the credit of the Consolidated Fund, and that the clear yearly sum of £470,000 shall be paid out of the same as a provision for the honour and dignity of the Crown.

The manner in which the Royal income is to be applied is strictly defined, as follows:—

Their Majesties' Privy Purse*£110,000 Salaries of H.M. Household

Royal Bounty, Alms, and Special Services 13,200 Unappropriated Mon·ys 8,000

His Majesty also enjoys the revenues arising from the Duchy of Lancaster estates, amounting in 1904 to £63,000.

The above arrangement lasts during the present reign and for six months afterwards. It is not unfavourable to the nation, since the Crown estates have produced an annual rental almost equal to, and sometimes greater, than the amount of the Civil List.

The net income of the Crown Lands in 1904-5 was £470,000, and the smaller branches of the Hereditary revenue produced £29,400.

TAXES ON THE ROYAL INCOME.
Income Tax is paid upon His Majesty's private estates, upon the Civil List for Their Majesties' Privy Purse, upon the sum allotted to the expenses of the Household, and upon unexpended and unappropriated moneys arising out of the remaining classes of the Civil List.

[•] The amount assigned by His Majesty to the Queen was stated in Parliament (10 June, 1901) to be £33,000.

There is an exemption under the Act 5 and 6 Vict., c. 35, Section 88, in favour of Government Stock or dividends belonging to the Crown, and property belonging to and in the virtual occupation of the Crown is not assessed.

Duty is paid in respect of the Estate of a member of the Royal Family, but not upon that of the Sovereign.

The Royal Family are exempt from Legacy and Succession Duties, under the provisions of Acts of Parliament (35 George III., cap. 1, and Schedule; and 16 and 17 Vict., c. 51, Sec. 18); and also from the necessity for taking out Establishment Licences (32 and 33 Vict., c. 14, Sec. 19).

GRANTS TO THE ROYAL FAMILY.

The grants made by Parliament, and now payable annually for the support of the Royal Family, in addition to the income granted to His Majesty, are as follows:—

Provision is also made for a contingent annuity of £70, (00 for Her Majesty Queen Alexandra in the event of her widowhood, and of £30,000 for the Princess of Wales in the like event.

The principles upon which the grants to the younger children of the Sovereign have been made in the past were clearly stated by Mr. Gladstone during the debate on the annuity to the Duke of Connaught, July 31, 1871. He reminded the House that Parliament had assented to an arrangement by which, instead of attempting to make a general provision at the commencement of each reign for the possible issue of the Sovereign, each particular case had been dealt with as it arose. That arrangement had some disadvantages, inasmuch as it was liable to be misunderstood out of doors, and that, being so misunderstood, it was apt to cause unjust remarks to be made upon the Royal Family and the Sovereign. He considered, however, that there were recommendations of a high order attaching to the present plan. In the first place, it was the one by far the most agreeable to the spirit of a free Constitution; it established a considerable degree of moral control which Parliament might otherwise lose. If the Sovereign were to be responsible for realizing out of his annual income funds sufficient to endow a family, however numerous, in a manner becoming their station, it would be necessary to enlarge the allowance at the commencement of the reign; and, further, the arrangement would lose all its elasticity. because, whether the Sovereign had issue or not, the sum at his disposal would remain the same. The present method of provision also tended greatly to promote and confirm harmony between the great powers of the State. It placed the conduct of the Sovereign and of the Royal Family, especially of its junior members, in view of the public and the Legislature, and, whil: preserving a salutary Parliamentary control, it likewise preserved in the hands of the Sovereign an important control over the younger branches of the Royal Family. Supposing the Sovereign were granted what was necessary for annual expenditure, but that every Royal Prince and Princess, on arriving at full age, or at marriage, should receive a fixed annuity, this moral and general control would be relaxed or destroyed. Mr. Gladstone said that, in his opinion, the nature of the provision was excellent, as long as it was worked in a spirit of liberality, of prudence, and of attachment to the Sovereign; but it undoubtedly would be grievously marred, and might become hardly practicable or secure, were it unfortunately to be dealt with in a different The arrangement between the Crown and Parliament was made by no written covenant, nor would it be possible to frame one without fettering the liberty of the people and Constitutional control. But there were other engagements besides written words, and it was recorded, beyond doubt, that Parliament was morally liable to deal with these cases when they arose. He referred to the terms of the Civil List Act, and the Report of the Committee of 1837, as showing that the income was bestowed upon the Sovereign after a careful investigation of details, and an exact appreciation of what each of the burdens would require in order to maintain the dignity of the Sovereign, and with it the dignity of the nation. As showing the moral liability of Parliament to provide for the junior branches of the Royal Family as they come to mature age, there was not, either in the Report of the Committee, nor in any debates of Parliament, the slightest claim, or the faintest expectation, that out of that income savings could be made adequate to a due provision for them. There was, moreover, positive evidence that upon every previous occasion Parliament had, without question, by an overwhelming vote, admitted the virtual bond of honourable obligation to make such provision. After referring to numerinstances in previous Mr. Gladstone concluded by as erting that a long and unbroken series of practical acknowledgment by Parliament for generations, embracing every possible case to which the principle could apply, constituted a state of just expectation on the part of the Sovereign, from which it was impossible for Parliament to recede, and which it would be utterly unworthy of it to disregard .- Hansard's Debates, vol. 208, p. 571.

Additional Grants in 1889.

In July, 1889, Queen Victoria communicated to Parliament the approaching marriage of Princess Louise of Wales to the Duke of Fife, and requested that Parliament would make provision for her, and slso for (the late) Prince Albert Victor.

A committee was thereupon appointed, with instructions to inquire into the former practice with respect to provisions for Members of the Royal Family, and to report upon the principles which it is expedient to adopt in the future. The Report of the majority of the Committee was to this effect:—

"That since the accession of the House of Hanover there is precedent for provision for every child of an Heir Apparent, and no precedent for the omission of such a provision; and there is also precedent for provision for the children of every child of every younger son of a Sovereign, and for provision for a younger son of the Heir Apparent.

"The Committee cannot find that any notice has ever been given to the Crown by any resolution of the House of Commons, or in any declaration on behalf of a Government by a Minister of the Crown, that the practice which has heretofore prevailed in reference to making provision for members of the Royal Family would be changed; or that Her Majesty has had any ground for supposing that it was necessary for her to make provision for the members of her family. In view of these facts the Committee are of opinion that Her Majesty would have a claim on the liberality of Parliament should she think fit to apply for such grants as, in accordance with precedent, may become requisite for the support of the Royal Family. But the Committee have been informed that Her Majesty does not propose to press this claim for the children of her daughters and younger sons; and with regard to the daughters and younger sons of future Sovereigns, the Committee are of opinion that at the proper time arrangements should be made under which no future claim of a similar kind can arise.

"In order to prevent repeated applications to Parliament, and to establish the principle that the provision for children should hereafter be made out of grants adequate for that purpose which have been assigned to their parents, the Committee recommend the creation of a special fund by the quarterly payment, during the present reign, of £9,000 out of the Consolidated Fund. Out of this the Prince of Wales, with the sanction of Her Majesty, and the assent of the First Lord of the Treasury and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, would be empowered to make such assignments, and in such manner, to his children as he may think fit."

In accordance with this Report a Bill was passed through Parliament, receiving Royal assent on August 12th, 1889, by which an annual sum of £36,000 was assigned to H.R.H. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, for the support of his children, in the manner recommended by the Committee. This grant expired on July 22nd, 1901.

REVISED GRANTS IN 1901.

On His Majesty's accession the question of provision for the younger children of the Sovereign and the children of the Heir Apparent was considered by the Select Committee on the Civil List, who reported as follows:—

i'In the first place they recommend that an annuity of £20,000 shall be paid out of the Consolidated Fund to His Royal Highness the Duke of Cornwall and York (now Prince of Wales) who has succeeded to the Revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall. They also recommend the grant of an annuity of £10,000 to Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cornwall and York (now Princess of Wales) during the continuance of her marriage with His Royal Highness.

"Your Committee have carefully considered whether it would be advisable that any provision, whether immediate or contingent, should be made at the present time for those children of the Heir Apparent who may reach an age at which they may require separate establishments; but in view of the youth of their Royal Highnesses and the consequent uncertainty of the future, they do not recommend that any such provision should be made on the present occasion, and content themselves by recording the fact that nothing for this purpose is included either in the Civil List or in the annuities proposed.

"Your Committee have already called attention to the fact that the annuity granted by the Prince of Wales's Children Act, 1889, ceases on 22nd July, 1901. It is, therefore, necessary to make fresh provision for their Royal Highnesses Princess Louise (Duchess of Fife), Princess Victoria and Princess Maud (Princess Charles of Denmark). Your Committee accordingly recommend that an annuity of £18,000 for their joint lives, diminishing by £6,000 with each death, should, in accordance with the precedent of the Prince of Wales's Children Act, 1889, be paid to Trustees by quarterly payments out of the Consolidated Fund. Out of this fund the Sovereign, with the assent of the First Lord of the Treasury and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, should be empowered to make such assignments and in such manner to their Royal Highnesses as in his discretion he may from time to time think fit."

In introducing the Bill to give effect to these recommendations, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer, explained that whatever remained from the private fortune or savings of Queen Victoria had been devoted to the benefit of her younger children, and that, therefore, the King had no personal fortune, and was dependent upon the revenues of the Duchy Lancaster and the Parliamentary grant. Basing his calculations on the increase in the value of the surrendered hereditary revenues of the Crown, he estimated that during the next sixteen years the average annual cost of the Royal family to the taxpayer would not be more than £33,000. The proposals of the Committee were agreed to by Parliament, and were embodied in the Civil List Act of 1901, referred to above.

DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT.

[The following pages describe the main functions exercised by the principal Departments and Officers of the Executive Government. Several Offices are included which, though not, strictly speaking, Government Departments, are intimately connected with them. In modern times, if a Department is represented in Parliament by two officials, one, as a rule, is in each House. The Home Office is generally an exception (both Secretary of State and Under Secretary being in the House of Commons), and occasionally the Board of Trade and the Local Government Board. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, and usually the heads of the great spending Departments are in the House of Commons. The Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, and the great Officers of the Household, are always Peers.]

ADMIRALTY (Whitehall, S.W.), is under a Board, who, since the reign of Queen Anne, have been appointed as "Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland." The Board consists of eight members, viz.: the First Lord of the Admiralty, the First and Second Sea Lords; the Third Sea Lord, who is also Controller of the Navy; the Fourth Sea Lord, the Civil Lord, the Parliamentary Secretary, and the Permanent Secretary.

The First Lord of the Admiralty is responsible for the general direction and supervision of all business relating to the He also deals personally with all matters relating to promotions and removals from the Service of naval and marine officers; honours and rewards; Royal Yachts, including appointment of all officers; appointment of Admirals and officers in command, including Engineer Rear Admirals, Inspectors and Deputy Inspectors of Hospitals and Staff Appointments of Royal Marines; Chaplain of the Fleet, appointment of, and entry of naval chaplains and instructors; Civil appointments and promotions, except as provided under Controller and Civil Lord; nomination to Naval Cadetships and to Assistant Clerkships, R.N.

The First Sea Lord advices the First Lord on preparation for War, and on all large questions of naval policy and maritime warfare. He is responsible for the fighting and sea-going efficiency of the Fleet, its organisation and mobilisation; the distribution and movements of all ships in commission or in Fleet Reserve; the control of the Intelligence, Hydrographical and Naval Ordnance Departments. Questions of importance relating to discipline are also referred to the First Sea Lord.

The Second Sea Lord is similarly responsible for the manning and training of the Fleet, which includes complements, barracks, training and educational establishments, also all mobilisation regulations for the Personnel; service and appointments of officers of all branches (except as reserved to First Lord); Royal Marines; Coastguard and Reserve Forces; hospitals; discipline and signals.

The Third SeaLord and Controller of the Navy answers for the entire administration of the Dockyards and Dockyard Reserve, Dockyard Craft, the Departments of the Director of Naval Construction, Engineerin-Chief, Director of Dockyards, Superintendent of Contract Work, Naval Stores and Expense Accounts; also the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors, and of all dockyard foremen, inspectors, subordinate officers and workmen (except promotion of officers above the rank of constructor); naval and technical inspecting staff at contractors' works; naval ordnance questions affecting construction of ships or involving structural alterations in weights, &c.; purchase, disposal, salvage or loan of vessels, and engagement and fitting of armed merchant cruisers; inventions relating to ships, machinery, &c.; electric lighting and machinery of alldepartments, &c., other than those controlled by Fourth Sea Lord; naval stores for building and repairing of ships and for maintenance of dockyards, including moorings.

The Fourth Sea Lord is responsible for matters connected with the transport service, including hired auxiliary vessels other than armed merchant cruisers; passages; the entire control of Fleet coaling and victualling services; naval stores for the Fleet and for all other purposes, and all questions relating thereto (except as provided for under Controller); ordnance and medical stores, &c., and all questions relating thereto; full and half pay; allowances and compensations, including table money; prize questions; pilotage and surveying; pay and freight of treasure and all extra payments; debts of officers and men, naval and marine pensions and widows' pensions; character, conduct and badge questions; naval savings banks; medals; uniform regulations; naval prisons; deserters - rewards for apprehension; removals of "R."; general salvage money questions and money demands for salvage of naval stores; collisions.

The Civil Lord has charge of works and buildings, including contracts and purchases of stores and land; coast guard buildings, sites and leases; civil staff of naval establishments, including classification, appointment, promotion. pay, allowances and pension (except in London establishment, and of professional officers of Controller's department at the dockyards and medical and nursing staff of naval hospitals); dockyard police; Greenwich Hospital business, including appointments (except of naval chaplains to livings, superintendent of the Royal Hospital school, curator of the Painted Hall, and appointments to Greenwich Hospital pensions); charitable fund, compassionate allowances, subscriptions, &c., and allowances to ministers of religion and grants in aid of churches and schools; marine and dockyard schools and civil appointments connected there with; special questions affecting retirement and pay of naval and marine officers and men, when discretionary power is specifically provided for by Order in Council.

The Parliamentary Secretary deals with finance, estimates and expenditure generally; and all proposals for new and unusual expenditure; accounts — cash, store and dockyard expense; purchase and sale of ships and of stores generally; payment of hire of ships as armed merchant cruisers, troop ships, colliers, freight ships, &c.; questions involving reference to the Treasury financially, except as provided for under Civil Lord; questions connected with exchequer and audit department.

The Permanent Secretary has control of the discipline of the various Departments of the Admiralty; recommendations for appointments and promotions in the Admiralty office; correspondence; communications with foreign naval attachés; communications with ministers of religion (other than Church of England); appointment of messengers.

In any matter of great importance the First Sea Lord is always consulted by the other Sea Lords, the Civil Lord, and the Parliamentary or Permanent Secretary, and refers to the First Lord for any further action considered necessary. All members of the Board communicate direct with the First Lord, in accordance with immemorial custom, whenever they wish to do so.

AGRICULTURE and FISH -ERIES, BOARD OF (4, Whitehal) Place, S.W.). This Department, established by an Act of 1889, consists nominally of the Lord President of the Council, the principal Secretaries of State, the First Lord of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the Secretary for Scotland, and such other persons as His Majesty may appoint. The President is a Privy Councillor, and a member of the Ministry for the time being; and if a member of the House of Commons, has to undergo re-election on appoint-The Board has control over the ment. administration of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts, and the Destructive Insects Acts, formerly exercised by the Privy Council. It superseded the Land Commission, taking over their functions in regard to the Tithe Rent-charge, Copyhold, Inclosure of Commons, and Allotment Acts, as well as their general duties connected with the drainage and improvement of land, agricultural holdings, glebe and settled lands. The powers and. duties of the Commissioners of Works under the Survey Act, 1870. were vested in the Board of Agriculture; and the collection and preparation of agricultural and. forest statistics, as well as the inspection and assistance of technical agricultural. schools, were also transferred to it. It has power to make, and assist, enquiries ard experiments for the promotion of agriculture and forestry; to prescribe rules for preventing rabies in dogs, and to regulate the seizure, detention, and disposal of stray dogs.

The control of the Fisheries was transferred from the Board of Trade, and that of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew from the Office of Works, in 1903.

ARMY COUNCIL (Pail Mail). The Army Council was constituted in 1904 under His Majesty's Letters Patent. It is composed of seven members, whosefunctions were defined by Order in Council of August 10th, 1904, as follows:

The Secretary of State is to be responsible to His Majes'y and Parliament for all the business of the Army Council.

All business, other than business which

the Secretary of State specially reserves to himself, is to be transacted in the following principal divisions:-

(a.) The First Military member of the Army Council (the Chief of the General Staff), the Second Military member of the Army Council (The Adjutant-General), the Third Military member of the Army Council (the Quartermaster-General), and the Fourth Military member of the Army Council (the Master-General of Ordnance), to be responsible to the Secretary of State for the administration of so much of the business relating to the organisation, disposition, personnel, armament and maintenance of the Army as shall be assigned to them or each of them from time to time by the Secretary of State.

(b.) The Finance member of the Army Council to be responsible to the Secretary of State for the finance of the Army, and for so much of the other business of the Army Council as may be assigned to him from time to time by the Secretary of State.

(c.) The Civil member of the Army Council to be responsible to the Secretary of State for the non-effective votes, and for so much of the other business of the Army Council as may be assigned to him from time to time by the Secretary of State.

The Secretary of the War Office will act as Secretary of the Army Council, and will be charged with the interior economy of the War Office, and the preparation of all official communications of the Council, and with such other duties as the Secretary of State may from time to time assign to him.

SECRETARIES OF STATE FOR WAR

At the same time the Office of Commander-in-Chief was abolished, and an Inspector-General of the Forces appointed, whose duties were thus defined:—

The duties of the Inspector-General of the Forces are, under the orders and direction of the Army Council, to review generally, and to report to the Army Council on, the practical results of the policy of that Council, and for that purpose to inspect and report upon the training and efficiency of all troops under the control of the Home Government, on the suitability of their armament and equipment, on the condition of fortifications and defences, and generally on the readiness and fitness of the Army for war-

ATTORNEY-GENERAL, (543, Royal Courts, W.C.), is the chief Law Officer of the Crown, and is appointed. by letters patent under the Great Seal. He is a member of the Government, and almost necessarily must be in the House of Commons. He represents the Crown in the courts of law, prosecutes by himself or by his nominee in criminal cases, exhibits informations in revenue cases in the Exchequer, and takes proceedings on behalf of those who come under the protection of the Crown as parens patria, such as lunatics, or the objects of a charitable trust. Legal questions are constantly referred for his opinion by the different Government offices. When the House of Lords is sitting as a Committee of privileges in peerage cases, he is present in a judicial capacity to express the views of the Crown on any point which may arise. Letters patent for inventions are considered to be issued under his general superintendence, and under the patent laws appeals from the Comptroller may in certain cases be brought to him. He is the official head of the Bar, and to him all questions of professional etiquette are referred.

Under an arrangement made in 1895, the Law Officers are precluded from appearing on behalf of private clients, and a clerical staff is assigned to them.

CHAMBERLAIN, LORD. — The office of the Lord Chamberlain (St. James' Palace, S.W.), is a department of His Majesty's Household, and its head, who is always a Peer of high rank and a Privy Councillor, is a member of the Ministry for the time being. He superintends all the officers and servants of the Household above stairs (see Lord Steward for below), the department of the Wardrobe, the Jewel House at the Tower of London, and the licensing of plays in the metropolis north of the Thames. He has the direction of the details of State functions such as coronations, Royal marriages, public entries, and funerals. In his department are the Royal Physicians, the Chaplains, the Chapels Royal, the Sergeants-at-Arms in Parliament, and the care of the Royal swans on the Thames. His Deputy, the Vice-Chamberlain, is usually a member of the House of Commons, and until recently has also been a Privy Councillor.

CHAMBERLAIN, THE LORD GREAT (House of Lords, S.W.).-This is an hereditary office, at present held by the Marquess of Cholmondeley as the delegate of the joint heirs, who were declared in 1902 to be the Earl of Ancaster. Earl Carrington, and himself. Admission to the House of Lords when Parliament is not sitting is granted to strangers under regulations made by the Lord Great Chamberlain. On all State occasions he has the charge of Westminster Hall, as when it is used for a trial or a coronation. At a coronation he has functions of a numerous and varied character. When the Sovereign goes to Parliament, this officer walks on the right of the Sword of State, next to the Royal Person.

CHANCELLOR—THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR of GREAT BRITAIN is the highest judicial officer in the Kingdom, and ranks next to the Sovereign. He is ordinarily appointed by the delivery of the Great Seal into his custody. He is keeper of the Royal conscience, custodian of the Great Seal, visitor in right of the Crown of all hospitals and colleges of Royal foundation, and patron of between 600 and 700 Crown livings and twelve canonries. Representing the Sovereign as parens patriæ, he has the general superintendence of all charitable trusts, and he is the general guardian of all infants, idiots, and lunatics. As a judge, he is president of the High Court of Justice, and of the Court of Appeal, besides presiding, if present, when the House of Lords is exercising its appellate jurisdiction. He is a Cabinet Minister and a Privy Councillor, and is usually, though not necessarily, a Peer. He presides on the woolsack as Speaker (or Prolocutor) of the House of Lords, and when in office takes precedence of every temporal lord. When Royal Commissions are issued for opening the Session, for giving the Royal Assent to Bills, or for proroguing Parliament, the Lord Chancellor is always a Commissioner, and reads the King's Speech. He appoints the justices of the peace in every county, usually, though not necessarily, on the recommendation of the Lord Lieutenant; and directly in every Borough (except in Lancashire, where the Chancellor of the Duchy exercises the patronage). Lord Chancellor nominates to many important offices connected with the administration of justice. Letters Patent under the Great Seal are passed by him, and all writs for the commencement of civil proceedings in the courts of law are "tested" The Lord or witnessed in his name. Chancellor's jurisdiction is confined to Great Britain.

CHARITY COMMISSION (Gwydyr House, Whitehall, S.W.) is

superintended by a Chief Commissioner, a permanent official appointed by the First Lord of the Treasury, assisted by three other commissioners, one of whom is a member of the House of Commons, and represents the Commission in Parliament. Their duties are to superintend the preparation of schemes for the general administration of charities, and also of Endowed Schools and the City of London Charities, under special Acts of Parliament. Under the Board of Education Act, 1839, some of the duties of the Commission in regard to educational charities have been transferred to that Board.

COMMISSIONERS—Sir George Young, Bt. (Chief); D. R. Fearon, C.B. (Second); C. A. Cook (Third); A. S. G. Boscawen,

M.P. (Fourth, unpaid).

SECRETARY-R. Durnford.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION (Burlington Gardens, W.) is administered by two permanent Commissioners, appointed by the First Lord of the Treasury.

Their duty is to examine all candidates for the Civil Service in respect of age, health and character; they also make arrangements for all literary examinations for the Home Civil Service, for the Indian Civil Service, and for the admission of candidates to the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst.

COMMISSIONERS.—W.J.Courthope, C.B. (First); Lord Francis Hervey (Second).

SECRETARY—S. M. Leathes.

COLLEGE OF ARMS, OR HERALDS' COLLEGE (Queen Victoria Street, E.C.), not strictly a Government Department, is presided over by the Hereditary Earl Marshal (the Duke of Norfolk). Its officers carry out Royal proclamations, grant coats of arms, direct public funerals, and transact genealogical and similar business. Attached to the Department are three Kings of Arms, bearing respectively the titles of Garter, Clarenceux, and Norroy; six Heralds (Chester, York, Windsor, Somerset, Lancaster, and Richmond), four Pursuivants, and a Registrar.

COLONIAL OFFICE (Downing Street, S.W.) is presided over by a Secreof State (changing with the tary Ministry), assisted by one Permanent, one Parliamentary, and four Assistant Under-Secretaries. In the Colonies having responsible Government, the Colonial Secretary recommends the Governors to the Crown for appointment, and has power to advise the disallowance of laws passed by Colonial Legislatures, where they conflict with Imperial legislation or touch on Imperial interests, but otherwise exercises little interference. In the Crown Colonies, on the other hand, he exercises direct executive action, and all important officers are appointed by the Crown on his recommendation. Their legislation is subject to revision, and the Colonial Secretary exercises considerable control over their expenditure.

COURTS OF JUSTICE, THE ROYAL (Strand, W.C.)—The Courts of Justice, though not, strictly speaking, part of the Executive Government, are now maintained out of the Imperial funds, and may properly be noticed here. The Supreme Court of Judicature for England was constituted by the Act 37 and 38 Vict., cap. 66. It consists of two permanent divisions, "His Majesty's High Court of Justice," with both original and appellate jurisdiction, and "His Majesty's Court of Appeal," mainly exercising appellate jurisdiction. The High Court of Justice is divided into three divisions, and now consist of (1) The Lord Chancellor and six Justices of the Chancery Division, (2) The Lord Chief Justice of England, and fourteen Justices of the King's Bench Division, and (3) the President and one Justice of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division. The Court of Appeal consists of four ex-officio Judges, viz., the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice of England, the Master of the Rolls, the President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division; and five Lords Justices of Appeal, who are all Privy Councillors. The various offices of the Courts were amalgamated in 1879 and a "Central Office" was constituted, under the superintendence of the Masters of the Supreme Court, now seven in number. In its various departments is transacted the general business of litigation leading up to the hearing of cases in Court, including the machinery for recording the Orders of the Courts. The six Chancery Judges, working in pairs, have, in addition, sets of Chambers, and four Chancery Masters are assigned to each pair for dealing with questions affecting property, &c., over which the Chancery Division has jurisdiction. There are also eleven Taxing Masters, whose duties are to tax the costs of solicitors. The salaries of all the officers of the Courts are defrayed from moneys voted by Parliament, with the exception of the Judges, whose salaries are charged upon the FOREIGN OFFICE (Downing Street, S.W.) is presided over by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who changes with the Government, assisted by a Parliamentary and a Permanent Under-Secretary of State, with three Assistant Under-Secretaries. All negotiations with, and despatches to and from foreign Powers pass through this Office; and all diplomatic and consular representatives abroad are appointed by, and report to, the Foreign Secretary. A very important branch of work is transacted in the Commercial Department, which collects, through our Consuls abroad, information likely to be of use to the commercial community in this country, and circulates it among Chambers of Commerce, &c. Commercial agents, distinct from Consuls, have been appointed in some few countries for the purpose of promoting British trade interests.

HOME OFFICE (Whitehall, S.W.) is presided over by the Secretary of State for the Home Department (changing with the Ministry, but always in the House of Commons), assisted by one Permanent and one Assistant Under-Secretary, and Parliamentary Under-Secretary. This department is charged generally with the maintenance of order and the repression of crime in Great Britain. has complete control over the Metropolitan Police (outside the City), but only certain statutory financial powers over the provincial police. It controls all prisons, whether convict prisons or those transferred from local authorities under the Prisons Act, 1877, and is in this work assisted by Boards of Visitors appointed locally. The prerogative of mercy vested in the Crown is exercised upon the advice of the Home Secretary, except as to Ireland and Scotland, where it is exercised by the Lord Lieutenant and the Secretary for Scotland respectively. The direction of Public Prosecutions is an important branch of the Home Office work, but is transacted at the Treasury by the Solicitor to that Department. Amongst other duties of the Home Office are the inspection of reformatory and industrial schools, of coal and metalliferous mines, of quarries, of explosives, and of factories. and workshops. It administers the Burial Acts, the Inebriates Acts, the Vivisection Act, the Cruelty to Animals Act, the Housing Acts (in London), and other statutes. The Home Office also prepares the Criminal and Judicial Statistics for England and Wales, and the Mineral Statistics for the United Kingdom.

He is Public Prosecutor for Scotland, and in his duties as such is assisted by the Solicitor-General for Scotland, four principal Advocates Depute, and one Assistant Depute. His political functions in the management of Scottish affairs are of importance, many discretionary powers and a considerable amount of patronage being entrusted to him. Prior to the Union, he held a seat ex-efficio in the Parliament of Scotland, and the Office has still the title of Right Honourable attached to it, in respect of its holder being ex-officio a member of the ancient Scottish Privy Council. Since the Union he has almost invariably had a seat in the House of Commons, where he answers questions relating to the legal business of Scotland, and assists in conducting Scotch legislation, the Government Bills being drafted under his superintendence. The Lord-Advocate is counsel for the Crown in all Crown civil cases, and also practises ordinarily in the Scotti-h Courts, having the privilege of sitting on the right of the table within the bar. He is usually appointed a Privy Councillor and a King's Counsel. The STEWARD, LORD HIGH, is an officer appointed only for a specific purpose, as for a coronation, when he walks next before the Sovereign, bearing the crown of St. Edward, or at the trial of a peer for high treason or felony, when he presides. In the latter case modern custom usually assigns this office to the Lord Chancellor.

SUPREME COURT PAY OFFICE.
See under Paymaster-General.

TRADE, THE BOARD OF (Whitehall Gardens, S. W.).—The Board is merely a nominal body, entitled the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, and has not met for many years. It is administered by a President, who changes with the Government, and is as isted by a Parliamentary and a Permanent Secretary. A Government Bill, introduced in 1905, proposed to raise the status of the President to that of a Secretary of State. All matters relating to trade and commerce fail to its charge, except certain functions exercised by the Home Office and the Commercial Department of the Foreign Office.

Under the Conciliation Act of 1896 the Board has powers of intervention, inquiry, and arbitration in trade disputes, which have been frequently exercised with great benefit.

The powers of the former Commissioners of Emigration are now vested in the Board of Trade. (See also under Colonial Office.)

The various departments of the Board of Trade are:—

Marine (54, Victoria Street, S.W.). — Under the Merchant Shipping Acts the powers of the Board include the survey and detention of unseaworthy or over-laden ships, the provision of local Mercantile Marine offices for the engagement and discharge of seamen, th-inspection of boilers, the conduct of inquiries into shipping disasters, and the supervision of expenditure out of the Lighthouse Fund.

The General Register and Record Office of Shipping and Seamen (Carlisle Place, Westminster, S.W.) is also a branch of the Board of Trade.

RAILWAYS.—With regard to Railways, many duties are imposed upon the Board by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act of 1888, and subsequent statutes, such as the Hours of Railway Workmen Act, 1894, the Light Railways Act of 1896, and the Prevention of Accidents Act, 1900. Its powers of inspection are also in all respects very wide. No line can be opened without a certificate from the Board, cases of accident are investigated, and all bye-laws are submitted for the Board's approval.

HARBOURS.—The control and supervision of Harbours, and the protection of the rights of the Crown in foreshores, are under the Board of Trade.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING. — The Electric Lighting Acts give great powers to the Board as to granting licences and provisional orders for the supply of electricity, and as to inserting conditions for the public safety.

Bankruptcy (1, Horse Guards' Avenue, S.W.) and Companies (8, Deluhay Street, S.W.).—The Bankruptcy and Companies' Winding-up Acts also give large powers to the Board, involving practically the supervi ion of every bankrupt estate or company in England and Wales, and the appointment of all the official receivers.

COMMERCIAL, LABOUR & STATISTICAL (Commercial Department, 7, Whitehall Gardens, S.W.; Commercial Intelligence Branch, 73. Basinghall Street, E.C.; Labour Department, 44 and 50, Parliament Street, S.W.; Statistical Department, 1, Whitehall, S.W.)—A "Labour Bureau" was organized by the late Mr. Mundella in 1885, the object being the collection and dissemination of statistical and other information as to the rate of wages, the cost of manufacture, and the selling prices of produce at home and abroad. This work was further developed in 1893, when a separatedepartment was organized. entitled the "Labour Department," having distinct offices and a special staff. Labour Department has a staff of correspondents in the larger towns, whose duty it is to inform the central office of important events affecting labour in their districts, and to conduct local investigations. The Labour Guzette (monthly, 1d.) issued by this Department for supplying information on subjects of special interest to workmen and workwomen, such as trade disputes, important industrial negotiations, sliding scales, &c. The Department also publishes digests of reports of the inspectors of mines and factories, of proceedings under the Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation Acts, of action taken by local authorities with regard to the sanitary condition of workshops, the housing of the poor, the provision of allotments, &c. Important meetings and conferences are noticed, and statistics are given of pauperism, immibanks. gration, savings education especially in its industrial aspects), exports and imports, and the prices of the chief articles of consumption by workmen, as well as comparative tables of wholesale prices of leading articles in the chief markets of the world. A large number of copies is gratuitously dis-tributed to Free Libraries, workmen's organisations, Mechanics' Institutes, Commerce, and other Chambers of institutions. An annual report is issued. The Board of Trade Journal (weekly, 1d.) is issued by the Commercial Department, and sets forth tariff changes, movements in foreign markets, foreign commercial legislation, port and harbour regulations, &c.

STANDARDS (7, Old Palace Yard, S.W.).

—The custody of the primary standards of TRADE, THE BOARD OF-contd. length and weight, and the duty of verifying local standards, devolve upon the Board of Trade. The Permanent Secretary is the "Warden of the Standards."

MISCELLANEOUS. — Important tions relating to gas and water companies, tramways, assurance and other companies, also devolve upon the Board; and it has the main charge of the collection of our national statistics, the management of the Imperial Institute (q.v.), the superintendence of the Patent Office (q.v.), and the financial control of Trinity House (q.r.).

"The Commissioners for executing the offices of Treasurer of the Exchequer of Great Britain and Lord High Treasurer of Ireland" are a body comprising the First Lord of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and three members of the Government, usually called Lords of the Treasury, all changing with the Mini-try. The Treasury is the highest financial Department of the State. It is charged with the preparation of all financial measures, and the provision of money to meet the requirements of the Im: erial service throughout the world. It is entrusted, in the interest of sound finance, with a power of check over the public expenditure, and its assent is, for that object, required for all measures increasing, or tending to increase. the public expenditure. This power of check has from time immemorial been given to the Treasury, and it is in the possession of this power that the Chancellor of the Exchequer differs generally from foreign Ministers of Finance. The Board very seldom meets, and the real work of the Treasury is done by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who introduces the Budget, and exercises a supreme supervision over questions affecting the public Revenue and Expenditure; but for the details the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, with his colleagues, the Permanent Secretaries. are responsible. These officers practically control the financial affairs of the country, with the occasional assistance of one or The First Lord is other of the Lords. usually the Prime Minister, but in recent years the custom has been frequently detarted from. Unless he is also Chan-cellor of the Exchequer he does not ordinarily take much part in the management of the department, of which, however, he is the supreme head. He acts rather as final arbiter between the different Departments of the Government, and is occupied chiefly in the direction of the general policy of the Government, and in exercising the large and varied powers of patronage which are vested in the office. The l'arliamentary or Patronage Secretary to the Treasury, with two of the Lords, and sometimes the Paymaster-General, Vice-Chamberlain, Treasurer, or Comptroller of the Household, act as "whips" of the Party in office, and manage its affairs in and out of Parliament.

The Financial Secretary, besides his business at the office, is also responsible for the arrangement of the business of the House of Commons. The Treasury controls the Revenue departments, and isresponsible for them to Parliament (the Post Office excepted, when represented by a Minister in the House of Commons). The control of the Treasury over expenditure in Ireland is represented by the Treasury Remembrancer at Dublin Castle, and in Scotland by the King's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer (Exchequer Office, Edinburgh).

The Solicitor to the Treasury has the direction, under the Home Secretary, of Government prosecutions, and acts as Public Prosecutor, as Crown Nomince for intestates' estates, as King's Proctor in the Divorce Court, and legal adviser to the Treasury and other Departments.

TRINITY HOUSE, THE (Trinity Square, E.C.).-This ancient Corporation, which is self-elected, consists of a Master (unpaid), a Deputy-Master, twenty-s'x Elder Brethren (thirteen of whom are honorary, two being Royal Naval, and eleven Merchant Service officers), and some Junior Brethren. It is entrusted with the control of all lighthouses, buoys, and beacons, and the examination of masters and pilots. In Scotland and Ireland other bodies of Commissioners work under the supervision of the Trinity House for this purpose. Financial control is vested in the Board of Trade, the funds being mainly derived from tolls.

ROYAL COMMISSIONS.

ROYAL Commissions, as the Commissions of Enquiry instituted under the authority of the Crown are commonly designated, are constituted either by Special Act of Parliament, by an instrument under the Great Seal, or by Warrant under the Sign Manual. They have power to examine witnesses, and to send for persons, papers, and records, but in ordinary cases have not powers of commitment or indemnity. A Special Act of Parliament is necessary if it is desired to confer unusual powers. Ordinary Commissions now almost invariably issue under the Sign Manual. In Ireland, Commissions are appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, on behalf of His Majesty.

The Reports of Royal Commissions are forwarded to the Secretary of State to be laid before the Sovereign, by whose command they are subsequently presented to Parliament.

The powers of Commissions expire with the presentation of their Final Report, unless subsequently continued by authority. In addition to Commissions of Enquiry there are others of a more or less permanent nature, such as the Royal Commissions for the Exhibition of 1851, Army Purchase, Horse Breeding, the Universities, and for various home, foreign, and colonial Exhibitions. Others again, such as those for the Irish Land Acts, Lunacy, Public Works Loans, Railway and Canal Traffic, Light Railways, &c., &c., are virtually Departments of the Government or of the Judicature, and are noticed ante.

The following Temporary Commissions are at present in existence:-

* By proclamation, dated 5th November, 1800, the Members of the Parliament then sitting on the part of Great Britain (which had met in July, 1796), were declared to be Members of the First Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to meet on 22nd January, 1801.

RULES FOR PETITIONS TO PARLIAMENT.

EVERY Member presenting a Petition to the House must affix his name at the beginning thereof.

Every Petition must be written, and not printed or lithographed. Every Petition must contain a Prayer.

Every Petition must be signed by at least one person on the skin or sheet in which the Petition is written.

Every person signing a petition must write his address after his signature, or his signature will not be counted.

Every Petition must be written in the English language, or be accompanied by a translation certified by the Memb r presenting it.

Every Petition must be signed by the parties whose names are appended thereto by their names or marks, and by no one else except in case of incapacity by sickness. Disregard of this rule may entail serious consequences.

No letters, affidavits, or other documents may be attached to any Petition.

No erasures or interlineations may be made in any Petition. No reference may be made to any debate in Parliament.

No application may be made for any grant of public money, except with the consent of the Crown.

No application may be made for a charge upon the revenues of India, except with the consent of the Crown.

All Petitions, after they have been ordered to lie upon the Table, are referred to the Committee on Public Petitions, without any question being put; but if any such Petition relate to any matter or subject with respect to which the Member presenting it has given notice of a Motion, and the said Petition has not been ordered to be printed by the Committee, such Member may, after notice given, move that such Petition be printed with the Votes.

Petitions to the House of Lords should be headed-

"To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled."

Those to the House of Commons should be headed-

"To the Honourable the Commons of The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled."

A Petition should run as follows:-

"The humble Petition of" (the undersigned, or describe the body presenting it) sheweth: (Here set out the facts.)

"Your Petitioners therefore pray that (your Lordships, or your Honourable House) will be pleased to: (Here state the prayer.)

"And your Petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

"Signed Address..... A Petition, addressed to a Peer or a Member of Parliament at the Houses of Parliament, passes free through the Post. It should be enclosed in a cover open at the ends, and marked outside "Parliamentary Petition." If sent through the letter post must not exceed 32 ounces in weight.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

ORIGIN.

The House of Lords is by far the more ancient of the two Houses of Parliament, being derived from the King's Great Council as it existed in the reigns immediately following the Conquest. ()f this Council the constitution and powers seem not to have been precisely defined, and there is some difference of opinion as to what they really were in practice. It included magnates ecclesiastical and temporal, bishops, abbots, earls, barons, and apparently other persons of distinction, summoned by the king. In early times it seems likely that all tenants-in-chief of the king received the summons, which later was only issued directly to the greater tenants holding baronies, while the lesser, summoned through the sheriff of the county, and appearing by representation, were the germ of the knights of the shires in the Lower House. The creation of baronies by patent, apart from tenure, dates from the latter part of the fourteenth century. The effect of a summons by writ in creating a pee age in early times has been a matter of some question. It seems that some persons were summoned by writ for one parliament, and not again, others summoned individually, but not their The same irregularity, descendants. however, is found in the issue of writs to boroughs for the election of members of the House of Commons for some time after the commencement of its existence. so that it is difficult to draw the line in this matter between constitutional and arbitrary exercises of prerogative. was held in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. in accordance with what had gradually become an established custom, that a writ of summons conveyed a hereditary Such a peerage is considered to descend to heirs general; it goes into abeyance in the case of a peer so created having several daughters, until it is called out of abeyance by the Crown as the descendants of all but one co-heiress are It thus differs from the usual rule of English patents descending to heirs male only, and from that of some Scotch peerages descending to an elder daughter. In the case of the Earl of Arundel, in 1626, it was decided by the House that every peer of full age is entitled to his summons, and that the House should refuse to proceed to business in case such summons to any peer is omitted. That the Crown no longer possesses the right of creating a life peerage, conferring a seat and vote in the House, was decided in the well-known case of Lord Wensleydale in 1856. The only temporal lords sitting without hereditary peerages are the past and present Lords of Appeal created under the Acts regulating the appellate jurisdiction of the House, passed in 1876 and 1867. These lords hold the rank of Barons for life, and may sit and vote after resignation of their offices.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

The Appellate jurisdiction of the House has its origin in the practice of appealing for justice to the King in Partiament. Petitions of this kind were addressed to the King in the Great Council, but after the establishment of the Courts at Westminster, such petitions were ordinarily referred to the proper Court. The Lords and the Privy Council appear to have exercised certain judicial powers jointly. The Lords exercised a right of appellate jurisdiction down to the reign of Henry IV, and after some disuse, it was resumed in that of Elizabeth. In 1585. the establishment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber, as intermediate between the Common Law Courts and the House of Lords, definitely recognised its right. to hear appeals from those Courts. House of Lords in the following century claimed in some cases even an original jurisdiction. But two cases in the reign of Charles IL which created for the timea violent conflict between the Housesthose of Skinner v. the East India Company and Shirley v. Sir John Faggended by the defeat in the first case of the claim to original jurisdiction, and the establishment in the second of the right to entertain appeals from Courts of Equity as well as of Common Law.

This jurisdiction, originally exercised by the whole House, or any members who chose to attend, has, since the case of O'Connell's appeal (1844), been left to the Law Lords—that is, the Chanceller and other peers holding, or having held, high legal positions. By the more recent Acts, as before mentioned, the Lords of Appeal are especially appointed to exercise this jurisdiction, under the presidency of the Lord Chancellor. But any other legal peer, and, theoretically, any peer whatever, retains the right to attend and deliver judgment.

THE LORDS SPIRITUAL.

Before the Reformation, the Lords. Spiritual formed the larger part of the House. By the disappearance of the mitred abbots under Henry VIII, they were reduced to the twenty-six bishops—being then a minority of the House, which about that time included fifty-nine temporal peers. Their number in the first Parliament of his predecessor had been only twenty-nine.

Under the Union with Ireland, the Irish bishops sat by rotation in the House, but they are now excluded by the Irish Church Act of 1869. At present, twenty-four English bishops sit as barons, the junior bishops above that number for the time being having no seats. Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the Bishors of London, Durham, and Winchester are always members of the It has been supposed that the bishops' baronies arise from the tenure of their lands; the analogy, however, of other European kingdoms in early times favours the idea that the magnates of the Church were admitted to the national councils in virtue of their ecclesiastical dignities.

THE LORDS TEMPORAL.

The Lords Temporal comprise the dignities of duke, marquis, earl, viscount, The ducal title, although one and baron. of great importance in earlier times, was first recognized in England by the creation of the Black Prince as Duke of Cornwall by Edward III. The rank of marquess is originally derived from the office of governor and custodian of the marches or borders, and bears date as a title from the reign of Richard II. The earls derive their name from the Danish corle, signifying "noble by birth" (May), which was used as a title of dignity prior to the After that date the Norman Conquest. alternative title of count came into use until the revival of the original title. The rank of viscount also dates back to remote times, and was used to distinguish the degree next subordinate to count. The title, however, was not conferred in England until the reign of Henry VI. The rank of baron is the oldest dignity in the peerage, as the title is to be found in the records of the Saxon dynasties. Under the feudal system following the Conquest, the barons became the tenants in capite of the King, and were so summoned, as before stated, to Parliament. The oldest English baronics now existent are those of de Ross and Le Despencer, both dating from December 24th, 1264; but an Irish barony, Kingsale, was conferred by Henry II in 1181, and confirmed by subsequent kings in 1223 and 1397.

THE HEREDITARY SYSTEM.

The unlimited power of the Crown to add to the House of Lords has at times been looked upon as dangerous to its inde-

As long, however, as a peerage pendence. is necessarily hereditary, the permanence of the creation and the necessary succession of an heir who will be wholly independent, would restrain a Sovereign or Minister from any very lavish exercise of this power. In the reign of Queen Anne, the Ministry of Harley and Bolingbroke created twelve peers at once, to overcome the opposition to the Government in the House of Lords. After the accession of the House of Hanover, this opposition became the dominant party, and proposed, by the Peerage Bill of 1719, to make such abuse of power impossible for the future, by prohibiting all future creations except on the extinction of existing p erages. This Bill was rejected by the House of Commons, as calculated to convert the House of Lords into a clan oligarchy, severed from the rest of the nation, and no similar proposal has ever been renewed. The action, however, against which it was directed has never been rep ated, though threats of the kind were thrown out at the time of the Reform struggle of 1832.

The House of Lords is sometimes rather invidiously referred to as consisting wholly of great landowners. They necessarily form its majority, and it is well that they should thus be secured an organ in the But among its most prominent and active members are many who have been themselves raised to the peerage for public services or professional eminence. Of its present members, about one-fourth have had experience as members of the House of Commons. It is constantly recruited from the ablest men of the time (as is shown by the fact that only about one-fourth of the existing peers sit by virtue of peerages dating before 1800), from the law, the army, the navy, and the professional and commercial classes; so that a seat in the House is a possible inheritance for the descendant of any English family. Its constitutional position was well understood by the member of the House of Commons who said, with reference to the Peerage Bill of 1719, that while he had himself no aspiration to a Peerage, he would never bar his remote posterity from the chance of attaining to it. Those who constantly protest against any exercise of its powers in rejecting or modifying the decisions of a majority of the House of Commons, may be fairly challenged, unless they advocate the unlimited power of a single Chamber, to produce a solution of that most difficult of political problems, how to create a new Upper Chamber for the first time. late Lord Beaconsfield's speech at Man. chester in 1872 well illustrates the advantages afforded by the House of Lords, as it at present exists, and the difficulties which would attend any change. said-"For a century, ever since the establishment of the Government of the United States, all great authorities-American, German, French, Italian—have agreed in this, that a Representative Government is impossible without a . . The United States of America were fortunate in finding a solution of this difficulty; but the United States of America had elements to deal with which never occurred before, and never probably will occur again, because they formed their illustrious Senate from the materials that were offered them by the 37 Sovereign States. We, gentlemen, have the House of Lords, an assembly which has historically developed itself in an ancient nation, and periodically adapted itself to the wants and necessities of the times.'

PROCEDURE.

The usual hour of meeting of the House of Lords is at a quarter past four o'clock. It may proceed to business if at least three peers are present; but no question can be decided on a division unless thirty peers at least take part in the vote.

The stages through which a Bill has to pass in the House of Lords correspond with those in the House of Commons. But in the Upper House the first reading of a Bill is usually a matter of course; discussion is reserved for the second reading, when the principle of the Bill is decided upon. If the second reading be carried, it is not usual to raise the question again on going into committee, or by any amendment going to the root of the matter. But a Bill which has passed the House of Commons is often read a second time with the understanding that large alterations are to be made in Committee, limiting the scope of the Bill, though not defeating its object. A Bill after passing the second reading, or after passing through Committee of the whole House, may be referred to a Standing Committee, as in the House of Commons. These Committees are composed of not more than 40 nor less than 20 peers, and all are nominated by the Committee of Selection. The quorum is twelve, and the procedure is the same as in a Select Committee. When a decisive majority has declared in favour of a Bill, the third reading is not often opposed, unless in consequence of something that has occurred in Committee or on the report of amendments. But if the majority has been so small as to leave the real opinion of the House uncertain, there is nothing irregular in a fresh trial of strength on the third reading, which sometimes results in the loss of the Bill.

The Lords' amendments on a House of Commons Bill, and vice versi, may be accepted, rejected, or modified by the other House. If the two Houses cannot agree, a Conference may be held between members on both sides. For many years, however, such Conferences have been wholly formal, no discussion taking place. Written reasons are delivered for the course adopted. The difference, therefore, must be settled by concession on one or both sides. If both parties persist in disagreement, the measure is dropped.

The Lord Chancellor (who is usually, but not of necessity, a peer) presides in debates as Speaker, but without the authority of the Speaker of the House of Commons as guardian of order. His position as a member of the Ministry of the day would be incompatible with that of an arbiter between parties, and as heis frequently a new member of the House, he would not necessarily have the experience of a Speaker of the House of Commons. Order is maintained by the House at large, which decides by acclamation, or, in extreme cases, by vote, as to which of two speakers be heard. Since 1889, peers have been at liberty to refer to each other in debate by name.

The Chairman of Committees, who is elected for each Parliament, exercises full authority on points of order in Committee. The Lord Chancellor has not a casting vote when the House is equally divided. His vote is taken first on every division, but if the numbers be equal, he declares that the "Not Contents" have it, the rule being "Semper praesumitur pronegante."

Though Bills granting money to the Crown, or imposing pecuniary liabilities, pass through the same stages as others, the privileges of the House of Commons, have been, since 1768, held to preclude their origination or amendment by the

The restriction has now been so fully established, that in 1865 a proposed alteration by the House of Lords in the local authority which under the Cattle Plague Bill was to have power to assign pecuniary compensation for slaughtered, was withdrawn on the ground of privilege. In 1891, also, an amendment to the Education Bill, which might indirectly have increased the rates, and in 1904 an amendment to the Licensing Bill. were objected to in the House of Commons. The abstract right of rejecting a money Bill* is admitted; but the rejection, in 1860, of the Paper Duty Repeal Bill by the House of Lords led next year to the inclusion of all the financial measures of the year in a single Bill, which could only be accepted or rejected en bloc. This practice has since prevailed.

The House of Commons has sometimes endeavoured to force measures upon the House of Lords by "tacking" extraneous matters upon a Bill of Supply, which, if rejected, would cause public inconvenience. This practice is admitted to be unconstitutional, but was successfully resorted to under William III., and was also attempted later with regard to an "Occasional Conformity Bill." To mitigate some practical inconveniences, Bills of a partly financial character are occasionally passed through the House of Lords with "redletter clauses," explaining the money provisions intended. These are struck out before the Bill leaves the House, and are re-inserted in the Commons.

Private Bills, if opposed, are referred to committees of five members, nominated by a Committee of Selection, over which the Chairman of Committees presides. No peer is compelled to serve on such a committee, but if he consents to serve he must attend during the hearing of the whole case.

The House of Lords possesses, like the Lower House, power to commit for contempt of its authority, and to protect its officers from molestation in the execution of its orders. It has also power to punish by fine and imprisonment persons guilty of breach of privilege, or of libels upon the House or its members. In the exercise of these powers it claims all the authority of a Court of Record.

It exercises the right of deciding, by a Report to the Crown, on claims to sit or vote in the House, or to vote at the election of Scotch or Irish representative peers. The case, if disputed, is heard before a Committee of Privileges, at which any peer may attend, and on which some non-legal peers have often sat. The judgment is usually delivered by the Law Lords and the Chairman of Committees alone, though sometimes a lay peer who has heard the whole case has also delivered his opinion. A Select Committee of the House of Commons, to whom the question of the succession of Lord Wolmer, M.P., to the Earldom of Selborne was referred in 1895, reported as follows:—

1st.—That the succession to a peerage of England, Great Britain, or the United Kingdom, disables the person so succeeding from sitting or voting in the House of Commons.

2nd.—That as the calling up to the House of Lord by writ of summons is the best and safest proof of his succession, the general practice of the House of Commons has been to abstain from declaring the seat of the new peer vacant. But as, in the case of a Scotch Peerage, the succession does not entitle the holder to a seat in the House of Lords, and there is, therefore, no writ of summons, the House of Commons has been in the habit, in such a case, of declaring the seat vacant, upon good and satisfactory evidence of the death of the predecessor and succession of the member affected.

3rd.—That when a member who has succeeded to a peerage entitling him to a seat in the House of Lords refuses or delays to apply for a writ of summons, the House of Commons may ascertain the fact of the succession by such inquiry or evidence as it considers necessary.

The peers of Scotland and Ireland, since the unions with the two kingdoms, sit only by representation, the Scotch having sixteen, the Irish twenty-eight represen-The Scotch representative peers are chosen at the commencement of every The Irish representanew Parliament. tive peers are elected for life on the occurrence of vacancies. Many Scotch and Irish peers, however, sit by English titles. A Scotch peer, not a representative, cannot be elected to the House of Commons. An Irish peer may be elected for any constituency not in Ireland, but, like all other peers, is not entitled to be placed on the register of Parliamentary electors, or to vote at a Parliamentary election.

^{*} As bearing on this point a debate in the House of Lords on the Finance Bill, July 26, 1894, may be referred to. "The legal right of the House of Lords, as a co-ordinate branch of the Legislature, to withhold their assent from any Bill whatsoever to which their concurrence is desired, is manquestionable."—May's Parl. Practice, p. 550.

The difference arises from the fact that in the latest enumeration the Royal Dukes are included in the first column, and those Scotch or Irish Peers who sit by virtue of other titles have been enumerated according to their ordinary or superior titles, as shown on page 115. THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

HISTORY.

In the Sovereign and the three estates of the realm—viz., the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal, and the Commons, is vested supreme legislative authority in this country. The growth of the power of the House of Commons—the third estate—is a prominent feature in our history from the reign of Henry III downwards.

In early Saxon times, the Witenagemot (general council or assembly of wise men) exercised many of the functions which were afterwards assumed by Parliament. This assembly was not called together by Royal warrant, but met of its own accord. Every freeman possessed the right of taking part in its deliberations, although the expense of attending from a distance practically limited the exercise of the privilege to the richer nobility and the higher ecclesiastics. The Witenagemot in theory elected the king. It had a voice in the determination of war and peace, and in general matters of State policy. It acted as a court of appeal, and its authority appears to have been necessary for the imposition of extraordinary taxation.

After the Conquest, the Witenagemot gave place to the Great Council of the Realm, first summoned in 1070, and attended by twelve representatives from every county. This was no longer a meeting of the ordinary freemen, but representation was based on land tenure. and the Council became a court of the vassals of the Crown, composed of bishops, abbots, earls, barons, and knights, who held land directly from Under the first Norman the king. kings the authority of the Great Council was limited. It still, indeed, discussed questions of foreign and general policy, and enjoyed a certain legislative authority, but it had no power to join in taxation; and although its "Counsel and Consent" was necessary in matters of fiscal as well as of political importance, its functions seem to have become almost nominal. In the reign of Henry II (A.D. 1154 to 1189), its authority was considerably extended, and about this time it began to be summoned regularly, and the Commons admitted to its deliberations. Although it engaged in the discussion of taxation, yet the Crown resolutely maintained that the sole right to levy taxes on the subject was vested in the Sovereign. During the troubled times of John's reign, however, the authority of the Great Council increased rapidly, and in 1215, in the Magna Charta, its constitution was more clearly defined and its powers over taxation were first formally recognised, by the enactment that no burthen beyond the customary feudal aids might be imposed, "save by the Common Council of the Realm."

There was as yet but one assembly, but it is to be noticed that in Magna Charta, for the first time, an important distinction was made between the "greater" and the "lesser" barons; the former, it was enacted should be summoned to the Council personally by special writ, but the latter were to be called together by a general writ addressed to the sheriffs. In this, according to Mr. Freeman, lay the germ of popular representation.

Up to this time the towns had enjoyed comparative immunity from taxation, but their growing importance, and the increasing wealth of the mercantile class, which was not represented in the Great Council, made it desirable, as a means of making taxation more efficient, that the towns should be brought into contact with the central authority. Accordingly, in 1265, Simon de Montfort, in the king's name, summoned a parliament at Westminster, and besides requiring the attendance of two knights from every shire, he ordered the return of two citizens or burgesses from each town. The Parliament of 1265, therefore, was the first distinct foundation of a system of popular representation.

During the reign of the first three Edwards the assembly was in a period of transition, and at the close of the reign of Edward III the division into Lords and Commons had become apparent. In that reign it was the practice for the prelates, with the clergy, to consult by themselves: the nobles by themselves: and the knights and burgesses by themselves: but sending the result of their deliberations collectively to the king. The clergy and baronagethe official and hereditary element-gradually became an upper Assembly, while the union of the knights of the shire with the burgesses became known as the "Commons." Under the strong-willed Tudor dynasty the Commons displayed little independence (although they refused to accede to some of the demands of Henry VIII), and it was not till the accession of the House of Stuart that the long struggle between the Sovereign and the Parliament began. By making the grant of supplies contingent upon the redress of grievances. the House of Commons during the Stuart dynasty was able to greatly extend and consolidate its auth rity. The unyielding disposition of Charles I led him to attempt to govern without a Parliament, and his growing necessities drove him to many illegal expedients for raising money by forced loans, "ship-money," tonnage and poundage, &c., thus alienating popular sympathy, and enlisting it on the side of the Parliament. After the Restoration the popular assembly showed some symptoms of a relapse into subservience, but only outwardly so; its supremacy was firmly established by the Revolution of 1685, which for the second time drove the representative of the Stuart dynasty into exile, and finally transferred the principal authority from the king to the representatives of the people.

In the Declaration of Right submitted to William III on coming to the throne, the powers of the House of Commons are clearly defined. William accepted the crown with the acknowledgment that the king had no right to exercise a dispensing power, or to exact money, or maintain a standing army, "save by consent of Parliament." A very important change was effected soon after his accession. The vote of supplies was made an annual one, and the powers necessary for the pay and discipline of the army were granted but for a single year. grant of supplies and the Army Act have remained annual ever since, and the necessity for passing them ensures the annual meeting of Parliament. To William III also belongs the credit of the solution of the difficulty occasioned by the growth of the new power of the Commons, when he began to choose his ministers from among the members of the party strongest in the House of Commons. This change is the origin of our system of government by party, and has been productive of far-reaching results.

In 1714, upon the accession of the House of Hanover, the power of the House of Commons was well established, and its place in the constitution had become clearly defined. The Septennial Act, limiting the duration of parliaments to seven years, was passed in 1716. the Restoration the number of members was 513, and they were increased to 558 in 1707, when the Act of Union of the E glish and Scottish Parliaments was passed, and 45 members were allotted to Scotland. In 1800, upon the union with the Ir sh Parliament, 100 members were ad led, bringing the total up to 658. By the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, the number of members was raised from 652 to 670-England and Wales having 495 instead of 489, Scotland 72 instead of 60, Ireland having still 103. The County seats in England and Wales are now 253 instead of 187, in Scotland 39 instead of 32, and in Ireland 85 instead of 64, while the number of Borough seats (including Universities) was in England reduced from 302 to 242, in Scotland raised from 39 to 18. The total result was that throughout the United Kin, dom the number of County seats was raised from 283 to 377, while the number of Borough seats (including Universities) was reduced from 369 to 293.

The franchises upon which the House of Commons was elected began to be the subject of Parliamentary discussion in 1785, when Pitt brought forward his motion for Electoral R-form, by which many of the decayed boroughs would have been disfranchised. In 1809 Sir Francis Burdett again raised the question; but, although the subject was afterwards kept much before the public, it was not till 1832 that what is known as tie first Reform Act was passed. By this Act, 56 constituencies, returning 111 members, were totally disfranchised, and thirty others lost one Member each. 22 new Boroughs were given the right to return two members, and 20 to return one member. 65 new County constituencies were created. In Scotland and Ireland, the County representation remained unaltered, but eight new Scotch burghs were added. Both the Borough and County franchises were extended, the franchise being bestowed in Boroughs on all £10 resident householders.

In 1867 the second Reform Act was passed by Mr. Disraeli. 11 Boroughs in England were totally disfranchised, and 23 others lost one member each. 25 new seats were bestowed on boroughs and Universities, and 28 on Counti.s. franchise was conferred in Boroughs on all householders, and on lodgers occupying lodgings of not less than £10 annual value. In the following year the Act, with some slight modifications, was extended to Scotland. In Ireland, the County franchise remained unaltered, but in Boroughs, householders rated at an annual value of £4 or upwards became entitled to vote.

If there was any injustice or shortcoming in the Reform Act of 1867, both parties were equally responsible for it. The Liberals were at that time in a majority in the House of Commons. and could have passed any amendments they liked, or rejected the Bill altogether. In fact, however, the Act, as it was finally passed, was very much in advance of the measure proposed by Mr. Gladstone in 1866, and was regarded by many of the Liberal party, notably by the late Mr. Bright, as having gone to the very verge of what might be granted with safety.

Naturally no at'empt was made to amend the representation of the people during Mr. Gladstone's next period of office, which lasted from 1868 till 1874. In 1872, Mr. G. O. Trevelyan moved a resolution in favour of extending the Borough franchise to the Counties. resolution of a similar tendency was brought forward by Sir Charles Dilke in Both were opposed by Mr. Gladstone, and rejected by large majorities. When the Conservatives came into power in 1874, these resolutions, which were annually renewed, began to receive a growing support from the Liberal party, but it was not till 1878 that Lord Hartington, then the official leader of the Opposition, formally adopted the equalisation of the franchise in town and county as an article of the Liberal creed.

The Franchise Act of 1881 marks the third of the great changes in the Constitution of the House of Commons which have taken place in the present century.

By this Act household suffrage and the £10 occupation and lodger franchise were extended to the counties throughout the United Kingdom.

PROCEDURE.

The rules of procedure in the House of Commons as regards public business are numerous and complicated. The following brief abstracts of the principal Standing Orders and regulations may be useful for reference; it has been abridged from the small volume, published annually, entitled "Rules, Orders, and Forms of Procedure of the House of Commons." Many of the technical terms used in connection with this subject will be found in the "Glos-ary of Political Terms." post.

The Chair.—The Speaker presides at all

The Chair.—The Speaker presides at all meetings of the House, and the Chairman of Ways and Means, as Deputy Speaker, acts in his absence, and also presides when the House is "in Committee." There is also a Deputy Chairman, empowered to act in the absence of the Chairman, and as Deputy Speaker in the absence of both the Speaker and Deputy Speaker. Five members are nominated by the Speaker annually to act as temporary Chairmen of Committees when required.

Sitting and Adjournment of the House.—The House now ordinarily meets at 2 p.m., except on Fridays. Business is preceded by prayers; after prayers the House is counted, and if 40 members be not present a second count is made at 4 o'clock. If a quorum be not then present, the House stands adjourned until the next sitting day. If notice is taken, or the numbers in a division show, that 40 members are not present, the House at once adjourns. At an evening sitting a count may not be made before 10 o'clock.

On every day, except Friday, the House suspends its sitting at 7.30 p.m., resuming at 9. At midnight the business in hand is interrepted, and no of posed business can afterwards be taken, but an exception may be made in regard to any particular matter on a motion by a Minister of the Crown, decided without debate.

Theordinary sittings terminate at 1 a.m., unless previously adjourned, or unless a financial Bill or any proceedings taken under an Act of Parliament or Standing Order are under consideration, in which case the sitting may be prolorged if necessary.

On Fridays the House meets at mid-day, and sits until 6 p.m., unless previously adjourned. Business is not entered upon until 40 members are present, but even if there be no quorum, the House cannot be adjourned until 4 o'clock. The debate on any business is interrupted at 5.30 p.m., and no opposed business is taken afterwards.

No motion for the adjournment of the House can be made until questions have been disposed of, and no such motion can be made before the busi ess of the day has been entered upon, except by leave of the House; a member rising in his place at an afternoon sitting, proposes to move the adjournment for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, and not less than 40 members rise in their places to support the motion; if fewer than 40 members and not less than 10 rise, the Housedetermines by a division whether the motion shall be made. the motion is supported by 40 members, or is carried, it comes on for discussion at the evening sitting. When during any debate. a motion is made to adjourn or to report progress, the debate thereupon must be confined to the matter of such motion; and no member who has moved or seconded any such motion is entitled to move or second any similar motion during the same debate. If the Speaker or Chairman is of opinion that a motion for adjournment of the debate, or to report progress, is an abuse of the rules of the House, he may forthwith put the question thereupon from the chair, or he may decline to notice it.

Conduct of Members.—Every member must be uncovered on entering or leaving the House, or on moving from one part of the House to another, and must make an obeisance to the chair in passing to or from his seat. Seats may be retained for the sitting by members who have been present at prayers, but not otherwise. The front bench on the right of the chair is reserved for Ministers; that on the left is ordinarily occupied by Privy Conncillors or other members who have held office. No member may pass between the chair and any member who is speaking from either of the two lower benches; nor between the chair and the table; nor may he read any newspaper, book, or letter in his place.

Admission of Strangers. -- Persons desirous of admission to the Speaker's, Special, or Strangers' Gallery, must make application to a member, who may then apply, personally or by letter, at the office of the Speaker's Secretary. A ticket of admission, bearing a number, will then be issued to the member so applying, a counterfoil being retained. On any person presenting the ticket of admission, he may be required to sign his name and write his ad Iress, which must correspond with the name and address as contained in the written application and entered on the counterfoil. Applications for admission may be made for not more than six days in advance. In cases of casual vacancies occurring during the sitting of the House, applications are to be made to the Serjeant-at-Arms in the same form as above. The Members' Lobby is reserved for Peers and members only, and for some permanent officials, secretaries of Ministers, and such others as are included in a special list authorised by the Speaker. Parliamentary a cents are admitted to the Members' Lobby until half-past five Persons going to the offices of o'clock. the House on business are admitted at all When the Committees are not sitting, none but persons going to the offices of the House are admitted. When the Committees are sitting, persons proceeding to them are only permitted to enter the Committee Rooms and offices pertaining thereto. During the sitting of the House no visitor is admitted to the central hall, unless he wishes to see a member, or has a ticket of admission to one of the galleries, and no persons except those who have such tickets are permitted to go beyond the central and lower waiting halls, nor to enter the dining, tea, and smoking rooms, nor to go on the terrace, even though accompanied by a member. After 4 p.m. the subway under Bridge Street is closed to all but members. Strangers may be ordered to withdraw by vote of the House, decided without debate, or by order of the Speaker or Chairman at any time.

Business of the House.—The ordinary public business of each day consists of orders of the day and notices of motion. An order of the day is a Bill, or other matter, which the House has ordered to be taken into consideration on a particular day.

Orders of the day generally take precedence of motions on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays; Government business having precedence at every sitting except the evening sittings on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the sitting on Friday. After Easter, Government business has precedence on Tuesday evenings, and after Whitsuntide, until Michaelmas, at a'l evening sittings, and nearly all Friday sittings. After Whitsuntide, all public Bills, except those introduced by the Government, are arranged so as to give priority to those which are most advanced in their stages.

Except for a money bill, no order of the day or notice of motion can be taken after twelve at night, if objection is made to its progress.

The House proceeds each day at afternoon sittings with, 1, Private Business; 2, Petitions; 3, Questions; 4, Matters taken at the commencement of Public Business; 5, Orders of the Day and Notices of Motion. Notices of motions take precedence of orders of the day on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. When a motion has been made and seconded a question thereupon is proposed to the House by Mr. Speaker; if it is not seconded it drops at once. A motion once made can only be withdrawn by the unanimous leave of the House. question may be superseded: 1. By Adjournment or by a "Count out;" 2, By a motion "That this House do now proceed to the Orders of the Day," or "That the Orders of the Day be now read;" 3, By Amendment. A decision by the House on a question may be prevented by moving the Previous Question, i.e., "That that question be not now put," and to this motion no amendment may be moved. If the previous question be negatived, the original question is to be put forthwith, without amendment or debate. upon a question may be interrupted: 1. By a matter of privilege suddenly arising; 2, By words of heat between members; 3, By a question of order; 4, By a message from the King or Lords Commissioners; 5, By an answer to an address; 6, By a message from the Lords.

Closure.—The Closure rule adopted in March, 1887, and amended in March, 1888, is as follows:—

"That after a question has been proposed, a member rising in his place may claim to move, 'That the question be now put,' and, unless it shall appear to the Chair that such motion is an abuse of the rules of the House, or an infringement of the rights of the minority, the question, 'That the question be now put,' shall be put forthwith, and decided without amendment or debate.

"When the motion, 'That the question be now put,' has been carried, and the question consequent thereon has been decide!, any further motion may be made (the assent of the Chair as aforesaid not having been withheld) which may be requisite to bring to a decision any question already proposed from the Chair. Also, if a clause be then under consideration, a motion may be made (the assent of the Chair as aforesaid not having been withheld) that the question, that certain words of the clause defined in the motion stand part of the clause, or that the clause stand part of, or be added to, the Bill, be now put. Such motions shall be put forthwith, and decided without amendment or debate.

"Provided always, that this rule shall be put in force only when the Speaker or the Chairman of Ways and Means is in the chair." Questions for the closure of debate under this order are decided in the affirmative if, when a division be taken, it appears by the numbers declared from the Chair that not less than 100 members voted in the majority in support of the motion.

Rules of Debate. -- Every member desiring to speak must rise in his place uncovered, and address himself to the Speaker. A member may not read a speech, but may refresh his memory by Members can only speak to a point of order, while the House is dividing, by permission of the Speaker, and, while speaking, are to sit covered. A new member who has not yet spoken, is generally called upon, by courtesy, in preference to other members. On resuming an adjourned debate, the member who moved its adjournment is allowed prece-The Speaker or dence by courtesy. ('hairman may call the attention of the House, or Committee, to continued irrelevance or tedious repetition of his own arguments, or the arguments of others, on the part of a member; and may direct the member to discontinue his speech. In questions to ministers or other members, no argument or opinion may be offered, nor any facts state i, except so far as necessary to explain the question. By indulgence, a member may explain matters of a personal nature, although there be no question before the House; but they may not be debated. reply is allowed to a member who has made a substantive motion to the House. Any member may rise to speak "to order," or upon a matter of privilege suddenly arising. No member is to allude to any debate of the same session, on any question not then under discussion. A member may not allude to any debate in the other House of Parliament. may not use His Majesty's name irreverently in debate, nor for the purpose of influencing the House in its deliberations; nor may he refer to any other member by name. In case of grave disorder, the Speaker may adjourn the House, or suspend the sitting for a fixed time.

Censure —Whenever any member is named by the Speaker or Chairman, immediately after an offence of disregarding the authority of the Chair, or of abusing the rules of the House by persistently and wilfully obstructing the business of the House, or otherwise, has been committed by such member, a question is for hwith put, without amendment, adjournment, or debate, "That such member be suspended from the service of the House." If any member is so suspended, the Order continues in force until the end of the Session, un'ess previously rescinded. The suspension does not exempt the member from serving on any private bill committee. Not more than one member can be "named" at the same time, unless several have jointly disregarded the authority of the Chair. A member whose conduct is gr. ssly disorderly may be ordered to withdraw from the House for the remainder of the day's sitting, or he may be "named" as above described. On March 7, 1901, in consequence of the action of certain Irish members, the following amended Standing Order was passed :-- "That if any member or members acting jointly, who have been suspended under this Order from the service of the House, shall refuse to obey the direction of the Speaker. when severally summoned under the Speaker's orders by the Serjeant-at-Arms to obey such direction, the Speaker shall call the attention of the House to the fact that recourse to force is neces-arv in order to compel obedience to his direction, and the member or members named by him as having refused to obey his direction shall thereupon, and without further question put, be suspended from the service of the House, during the remainder of the Session." (The regulations governing the question of order in debate were under consideration in the Session of 1902, but the discuss on was suspended, and has not since been resumed.)

Divisions.—No member may vote unless present when the question is put, and every member so present must vote. When a division is taken strangers are excluded from seats below the bar, and a two-minute sand-glass is turned to allow members time to enter the House, after which the doors are locked, and the Speaker puts the question. After the voices have been given, he declares whether, in his opinion, the "ayes" or the "noes" "have it." If his dec sion is challenged, he directs the "ayes" to go into the right lobby, and the "nocs?"

into the left lobby, and appoints two tellers for each party. When all the members have resumed their places, the tellers on either side come to the table and report the numbers to the Speaker, who declares them to the House. If he is of opinion that a division is frivolously or vexatiously claimed, he may take the vote by calling upon the members who support and who challenge his ecision, to rise in their places and he shall then either declare the numbers or name tellers for a division.

Public Bills.—A member who wants to initiate a Bill must attend at the beginning of business on the first day of a Session, and must ballot for a place for his notice. On his position in the ballot, early or late, very much depends the chance of pushing the Bill through Parliament. The ballot can be drawn by one member for another, and groups of membe s sometimes ballot individually for the same Bill, thus securing additional chances of success. Bills making grants of public money must originate with Ministers, and must be first considered in Committee of the whole House. The first reading of a Bill may be taken immediately after the same has been presented. On the order being read for the second reading of a Bill, a notion is made, and a question put, "That the Bill be now read a second time," a d smendments may be moved by leaving out "now," and substituting "three months," "six months," or any other time; or that the Bill be rejected. A Bill having been read a second time, is ordered to be committed to a Committee of the whole House or, in certain cases, to a Select Committee, or to a Standing Committee. The Bill having been fully considered in Committee, the Chairman is directed to report it to the House. Clauses may be withdrawn by the member in charge of the Bill on giving two A Bill reported without days' notice. amendment is ordered to be read a third time, and on the third reading a motion is made and question put, that the Bill be now read a third time, to which amendments may be moved, as on the second reading. After the third reading, and further proceedings thereon, the title of the Bill is agreed to, and the Bill is passed without further question. For a description of the various Committees of the House of Commons see "Glossary of political terms," post.

Supply.—Whenever the Committee of Supply stands as an Order of the day, the Speaker leaves the Chair without putting any question, unless on first going into Supply on the army. navy, or civil service estimates respectively, or on a vote of credit, an amendment is moved, or question raised, relating to the estimates proposed to be taken in Supply. In 1896, for the first time, a Sessional Order was passed allotting twenty days, before the 5th August, 10 the business of Supply, with an additional three days, if necessary, before or after the same date. If the business is not completed within that time the remaining votes are to be decided upon in classes forthwith. Supplementary estimates and votes of credit are excluded from the computation, and the proceedings are not to be interrupted by motions for adjournment or other dilatory motions. The succe s of this experiment in providing for the regular and business-like discussion of the Estimates has been very marked, and the Sessional Order has since been annually renewed, with some variations.

Partly considered Bills.—In the Session of 1890, owing to the excessive length of the debates, Lord Salisbury's Government brought forward proposals by which power would be given to the House of Commons to carry over Bills from ore session to another. A Committee was appointed, and the Government proposa's were met by Mr. Gladstone with a direct negative, but his draft report framed in that sense was rejected.

The Report of the Committee stated that the exhausting labours imposed upon members of Parliament were excessive and increasing, and that the closure was inadequate to enable the House to deal with lengthy, complicated, and controversial Bills. It was necessary, therefore, either to adopt a more stringent form of closure or to give power to revive measures in the succeeding session. They recommended the second alternative. They proposed that—

"A Standing Order should be passed, under which any Public Bill, in progress in Committee of the whole House, or in a Standing Committee, or which had been reported, or which had reached any further stage, might, on the motion of a member in charge of the Bill, be suspended until the next Session.

"If the Motion were carried, then, in the ensuing Session of the same Parliament, a Member whose name was on the suspended Bill might present the Bill in the form in which it stood when the Proceedings thereon were suspended; and the Questions on the First and Second Readings thereof should be successfully put forthwith.

"If both Questions be carried, the Bill wou'd be ordered to be printed; and, if it had been partly considered in Committee in the previous Session, the Committee would begin their consideration of the Bill at the Clause on which Progress was reported in the previous Session; but if it had been reported from Committee in the previous Session, its consideration, as reported, would be appointed for that day week.

"If the First or Second Reading were negatived, such Vote was not to preclude the House from entertaining a Bill on the same subject under the ordinary Rules of Procedure."

The Committee p inted out that the proposed Standing Order was limited to Bills which had originated in one House and which had never left it, and they recorded their opinion that neither House could, of its own authority, postpone to a future Session any Bill sent to it from the other House without a breach of constitutional usage.

The Committee summarised the various

"The length of discussion to which it is thought necessary to subject measures which are the object of party controversy has increased, is increasing, and does not seem likely to diminish. As a result, the difficulty of passing such measures through all their stages in the course of one Session has increased likewise. This difficulty is especially felt in the case of long and complicated Bills, and it is precisely in the case of these Bills that the closure of debate is most ineffective as an instrument for facilitating the rapid progress of business. It is, therefore, desirable to increase the power of the House of Commons to deal with such measures; it is also desirable to shorten the length of Sessions, whose present duration overtaxes the endurance of Members and embarrasses the machinery of administration; but it is not desirable, so long as any other alternative remains, to increase the stringency of the existing machinery for closing debate. Your Committee believe that if these three principles be accepted every possible alternative is excluded, except o e which shall relieve Parliament in certain cases from the necessity of repeating in two successive Sessions the same debate upon the same questions. They attach no weight, for reasons above given, to any objections that have suggested themselves to this plan, based upon the relations now existing between the two Houses of Parliament. They think the change, though undoubtedly an important one, is much less violent in character and much less at variance with the spirit of Parliamentary tradition than some alterations which have been made of late years in Parliamentary procedure; and they point out that if, as they recommend, it be effected. by Standing Order instead of by Bill, the experiment may be purely tentative, and could be abandoned, should that course be subsequently thought desirable, by the sole action of the House of Commons, without requiring the consent of the other branch of the Legislature."

Unionist majority...... 72

Note.—The Unionist majority at the General Election in 1900 was 134. Since that time they have lost 21 seats (nett) at bye-elections (see p. 218), and they have also lost 12 seats by secessions (see p. 152), and gained two, thus leaving their present majority (excluding two vacancies) at 72. Several members are described as Independent Conservatives or Liberals, and their votes are uncertain.

N.B.—General Elections prior to 1832 took place as follows; 1807, 1812, 1818, 1820, 1826, 1880, and 1831. In-1832, the number of members in the House of Commonswas fixed at 658. In 1844 and 1852 four seats were disfranchised, and were allotted elsewhere in 1861. In 1870 six seats were disfranchised. The number of memberswas increased to 670 by the Redistribution Act of 1885.

Including 9 Parnellites.

NUMBER OF VOTES RECORDED, 1874-1900.

Its value for purposes of comparison is of course very much neutralised by the large number of uncontested Elections, especially in 1886, 1895, The following return gives, approximately, the number of votes polled in contested constituencies at the last seven General Elections.

^{*} In constituencies returning two members, the votes recorded for the highest candidate of each party are reckoned.

[†] The votes polled by Independent Labour and Socialist candidates are reckoned separately only when the candidates stood apart from, and in opposition to, the Liberal candidates. Otherwise their votes are included in the Liberal total.

PARTY GAINS AND LOSSES.

At the Dissolution of Parliament in July, 1895, the Gladstonian-Literal party, including the Nationalists and Parnellites, held a nominal majority of 28. At the General Election which followed, they lost 110 seats, 83 to Conservatives and 27 to Liberal Unionists. On the other hand they gained 20 seats, 15 from Conservatives, and five from Liberal Unionists. The net loss of the Rosebery Government was therefore 90 seats, counting 180 on a division, and deducting their previous majority of 28, the result was to produce a Unionist majority of 152.

During the interval between 1895 and 1900 the Unionist majority was reduced to 128, at which figure it stood at the time of the Dissolution on September 25th, 1900.

POPULATION AND REPRESENTATION.

The population of the Parliamentary Counties and Boroughs of the United Kingdom in 1901 was 41,458,721, and the total number of Members of the House of Commons, excluding the Universities, is 661.

Dividing the population by the number of members, each member should represent a population of 62,721. As it is, however—

England, with a population of 30,808,539, has only 460 members, or one member for every 66,975 persons.

Wales, with a population of 1,719,804, has thirty members, or one member for every 57,310 persons.

Scotland, with a population of 4,472,103, has seventy members, or one member for every 63,885 persons.

Ireland, with a population of 4,458,775, has 101 members, or one member for every 44,147 percons.

At the proportion of one member to represent 62,721 people—

England should have 491 members, instead of 460, as at present.

Wales should have 28 members, not 30 as at present.

Scotland should have 71 members, not 70 as at present.

Ireland should have 71 members, not 101 as at present.

COST OF GENERAL ELECTIONS.

The expenses incurred by candidates at the General Elections, including the seturning officers' charges, are stated in Parliamentary returns as follows:—

AGRICULTURAL.—Land stewards, farm balliffs, outdoor farm servants, gardeners, gatekeepers, gamekeepers, shepherds, &c.

COUNTIE3-Continued.

Successive Occupation.—If two or more premises in the same division of a county, or in the same county if it is undivided, are occupied in immediate succession, the vote is not thereby lost. If the occupier is omitted from the list, a claim should be sent to the overseer by August 20th, giving particulars of all the premises so occupied.

Poor Rates.—The occupier must have been rated in respect of the premises to all poor rates made during the qualifying period. All poor rates due on January 5th must have been paid on or before July 2)th. If the owner is llable for the rates, and has not paid them, the tenant may pay them, and deduct the amount from the rent. Wherever the landlord pays the rates, the overseers are bound to insert the occupier's name in the rate-book.

Claims.—The names of qualified householders and occupiers must be placed by the overseers on the list published by them on August 1st. No claim is necessary in their case, but if any names are omitted by the overseers, a notice of claim must be sent on or before August 20th.

3.-LODGERS.

- The inhabitant occupier, for the 12 months preceding July 15th in any year, of lodgings in the same house within the county (or division) of the clear yearly value, if let unfurnished, of £10 or upwards.
- Note.—The term "lodgings" comprises any apartment or place of residence, whether furnished or unfurnished, in a dwellinghouse, where the landlord resides and retains control over the passages and outer doors.

Residence is required.

- Joint Occupation.—The inhabitant occupier, jointly with others, of lodgings of such clear yearly value, if let unfurnished, as gives a sum of not less than £10 for each occupier, is entitled to claim a vote; but no more than two such joint occupiers may be registered in respect of one set of lodgings.
- Occupation of lodgings in a Parliamentary borough cannot qualify to vote for a county.
- The occupation in immediate succession of different lodgings of sufficient value in the same house will qualify. But removal from one house to another disqualifies for the year.
- Additional rooms may be taken during the year without vitiating the qualification.
- Claims.—Lodgers not already registered must send to the overseers claims to vote on or before August 20th. Those already registered must renew their claims yearly, on or before July 25th.

REGISTRATION APPEALS, 1905

LODGER OR OCCUPATION FRANCHISE.

The revising barrister for Devonport borough had decided that Frank Herbert was an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling house and not a lodger within the meaning of the Registration Acts under the following circumstances:

He had occupied for the necessary qualifying period, at a weekly rent of 3s. 8d., an unfurnished tenement room as a dwelling. The landlord resided in a separate set of rooms in the same house and four other occupiers resided on the premises, under conditions similar to those of Frank Herbert, upon different floors, and shared the use in common of the courtyard, washhouse and offices. The landlord had no right to enter, and exercised no control over the occupied rooms and rendered no service to the tenants. The names of the latter appeared on the rate-book as occupiers, together with the landlord's name, who alone was actually rated and paid the rates for the house.

The Court (Lord Alverstone, L.C.J., and Justices Wills and Darling) held, following the ruling of the Court of Appeal in Bradley v. Baylis, that where a house is wholly let out in unfurnished apartments, separately occupied by tenants, and their landlord does not reside in the house, and has no servant in the house to look after it for him, the tenants are rateable and are not lodgers; whilst on the other hand where a house is let out in unfurnished apartments to tenants, and their landlord resides in the house or has a servant in it to look after it for him, then such tenants are not rateable and are lodgers. The revising barrister's decision was therefore reversed. (November 7th, 1905.)

On appeal this judgment was reversed by the Court of Appeal (the Master of the Rolls, and Lords Justices Romer and Mathew), and the vote was allowed (November 16th, 1905).—Kent v. Fittall.

£10 OCCUPIERS AND SERVICE FRANCHISE.

A house rented at £20 per annum was occupied by a caretaker who exercised the Parliamentary (service) franchise in regard thereto, and by two partners who each claimed the Parliamentary vote in respect of such occupation. The revising barrister held that the value of the premises was insufficient under the circumstances, to carry three votes under Sec. 27 of the Reform Act of 1867 and Sec. 5 of that of 1884. The Court upheld his decision.—Kirby v. Barber.

REVISING BARRISTER'S POWER OF AMENDMENT.

In this case it was decided that a revising barrister had the power to amend an elector's name on the list by inserting an additional Christian name, even though he had not made a new claim or a declaration for the purpose as provided by the Registration Acts. The Court held that the barrister could, and ought to, amend such a mistake.—Green v. Wanklyn.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION LAW.

The Parliamentary Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act of 1883 introduced large changes into the previously existing law, and enacted a Code of Regulations for the conduct of elections. There are here shewn in a concise form—

- The principal acts which constitute offences against the election law and the penalties which they entail.
- 2. The regulations under which Candidates and their Agents are obliged to conduct the election.

1.—OFFENCES AT ELECTIONS.

The offences are grouped under three main heads, (A) Corrupt Practices, (B) Illegal Practices, (C) Illegal Payment, Employment, or Hiring.

(A) CORRUPT PRACTICES.

OFFENCES.

Bribery.—It is bribery to give, lend, or promise money or money's worth, in order to induce an elector to vote or abstain from voting for a particular candidate. The consequences are the same whether the payment is made directly or indirectly, and whether before, during, or after an election.

It is bribery to give, offer, or promise any employment to or for a voter, or anyone connected with him, with the same object. [No person must be employed for payment at an election except by the election agent, who is strictly limited in the numbers he may engage.]

Any person who gives money to be spent in bribery, or who repays it afterwards, is guilty of a corrupt practice.

It is bribery to make a gift or promise to any third person in order to secure an elector's vote.

It is bribery to pay the day's wages of any voter, or to give him money for railway fare, loss of time, &c.

An employer may give his workmen or servants reasonable leave of abserce (without deduction of pay) for the purpose of voting, on condition that all voters in his employment are treated alike.

The elector who receives a bribe for his vote, or who bargains for a promise of employment or reward of any kind, is equally guilty of bribery, whether it is done before or after the election.

Treating.—The offence of treating is committed if any meat, drink, entertainment, or provision is corruptly paid or provided for any person at any time in order to influence him, or any third party, to vote or abstain from veting at the election.

PENALTIES.

To the briber or the person bribed, imprisonment for a term not exceeding twelve months, with or without hard labour, or a fine not exceeding £200.

Deprivation of the right of being elected to Parliament, or voting, for seven years.

Removal from, and disqualification for, any public office.

Payment of the costs of an election enquiry in gross cases.

If committed by a candidate personally, he loses his reat, if elected, and is disqualified for ever from representing the constituency.

If committed by any agent of a candidate, the election is void, and the candidate is disqualified for sitting in Parliament for the same place for seven years.

The same as for bribery,

OFFENCES.

Treating, continue t—Treating the wives or relations of electors may constitute the offence. The quantity of refreshment provided is immaterial if the intention is corrupt. The gift of tickets to be exchanged for refreshment is equivalent to direct treating. The person accepting any meat, drink, or entertainment, is also guilty and punishable accordingly.

Undue Influence.—This offence consists—

(a) In using or threatening force or restraint to induce any elector to vote or not to vote at the election.

(b) In inflicting upon or threatening any temporal or spiritual injury against a voter with the same purpose.

(c) In abducting an elector, or fraudulently preventing, or interfering with him in giving his vote freely.

The withdrawal of custom or employment is undue influence, if done with the view of affecting the elector's vote.

A threat to evict a tenant with the same object comes within the definition of undue influence.

Personation.—Any person who applies for a ballot paper in the name of another, whether living or dead, or of a fictitious person, is guilty of personation.

Voting twice at the same election is the same as personation.

Aiding or abetting personation is equivalent to personation itself.

Forging or counterfeiting a ballot paper is an offence punishable as a misdem-anour.

(B) ILLEGAL PRACTICES.

Paying or receiving money for the conveyance of voters to the poll, whether in counties or boroughs. (The provision of all but private conveyances, voluntarily lent, is absolutely prohibited, but electors may pay for their own conveyance to and from the poll.)

Paying an elector for exhibiting hills, notices, &c. (The receiver is also punishable; an ordinary advertising agent is exempted.)

Paying any money for election expenses in excess of the prescribed maximum, or through any person other than the election agent.

Hiring or letting committee rooms for payment in excess of the number allowed. (The number of such rooms is strictly limited, and they can be hired only by the election agent.)

Voting when prohibited, or inducing a prohibited voter to vote.

Publishing a false statement of the withdrawal of any candidate, or a false statement of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of a candidate.

PENALTIES.

The same as for bribery.

The same as for bribery.

To the offender, imprisonment for a period not exceeding two years with hard labour.

Seven years' incapacity to be elected, to vote or to hold any public office.

If committed by any agent of a candidate, the latter loses his seat if elected.

A fine not exceeding £100.

Incapacity to vote, in the constituency, during the succeeding five years.

If committed by an agent of a candidate, the election of the latter may be rendered void.

Same punishment as above, but election not voided nuless committed by the candidate or election agent.

(C) ILLEGAL PAYMENT, EMPLOYMENT, OR HIRING. OFFERCES.

To provide money for an illegal practice or payment.

To pay for bands, torches, flags, banners, cockades, ribbons, or other marks of distinction.

To let, lend, hire, borrow, or use for the conveyance of voters to the poll, any animal or conveyance ordinarily kept for hire.

To employ any person (for payment) at the election for any purpose or in any capacity not permitted by the Act.

To induce corruptly any person to withdraw his candidature. The person so withdrawing is equally guilty.

To use as a committee room any licensed house, refreshment house, or public elementary school, or any part of the same.

To publish election bills, placards or posters, without the name and address of the printer and publisher. A fine not exceeding £100.
If committed by a candidate or his election agent, the consequences of an illegal practice are entailed.

2.—REGULATIONS FOR THE CONDUCT AND MANAGEMENT OF THE ELECTION.

(D) EXPENDITURE.

A scale of expenditure is laid down beyond which a candidate is not at liberty to go without risking the loss of his seat; any expenditure above the maximum entails the penalties imposed upon the commission of an illegal practice. The maximum scale is as follows:—

The Returning Officer's Charges, which are limited by a special Act of Parliament, are not included in the above maximum, but a candidate is only at liberty to pay him the exact sum allowed by the Act, under pain of conviction for an illegal practice and loss of his seat.

Personal Expenses.—The personal expenses of a candidate, which include the reasonable cost of his living at hotels or elsewhere for the purpose of the election, are also outside the prescribed maximum, and they are not limited to any precise amount, hough any excess over £100 in this particular must be paid through the election agent.

(E) EMPLOYMENT.

In addition to the above restriction on the maximum expenditure, regulations are imposed upon the candidate in respect to the number of persons who may be employed, for payment, in the work of an election, and the number of committee rooms which may be engaged. They are as under :-

Boroughs.—In boroughs, in addition to one election agent (through whose hands all expenditure must pass), and a polling agent in each station, a number of clerks and messengers is allowed in the proportion of one for every 500 electors. Paid agents, clerks, &c., if employed in any division of a divided borough, are prchibited from voting in that or any other division of the same borough, and each must be so informed by the election agent.

Counties —In counties, there is allowed in addition to one election agent, a sub-agent for each polling district, together with one clerk and one messenger for every such district, or for every 500 electors in large districts. A candidate is also allowed a staff of clerks and messengers at the central committee room of the county, at the rate of or e for every 5,000 electors. Committee Rooms.—The engagement of committee rooms is authorised to the extent of one for each polling district (or for every 500 electors) in a county, and one for every 500 electors in a borough. Several restrictions are placed upon the choice of these committee rooms. must not be held in either a licensed house or a refreshment house, or upon the premises of any elementary school in receipt of a parliamentary grant. But they may be held without objection in the rooms of any permanent political club.

With a view to ensure the due observance of these provisions, the Act requires a detailed return of the amount expended under each head to be made by the election agent, and signed and attested before a Justice of the Peace. The candidate is also bound to make a similar declaration pledging his belief that the return is correct, and that no expenses have been incurred which are not included in it. either a candidate or an election agent knowingly makes a false declaration, he is liable to a prosecution for perjury, and, if convicted, to seven years' penal servitude.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

COUNTY COUNCILS.

Under the Local Government Act, 1888, a County Council was established in every County in England and Wales, the duties of which body include all the administrative and financial business of the county formerly transacted by the Magistrates in Quarter Sessions.

The next elections for the County Councils in England and Wales will take place, on a day to be fixed by the County Councils, between March 1st and March 8th, 1907. (If no day is so fixed, the elections will take place on March 8th.) A brief account is here given of the constitution of the County authorities and of the regulations under which the elections are conducted.

CONSTITUTION OF COUNCIL.

The Council consists of a Chairman, County Aldermen, and County Councillors.

They are elected and conduct their proceedings similarly to existing Town Councils in boroughs, with some exceptions.

The County is divided into Electoral Divisions, each returning one Councillor.

The Electoral Divisions are arranged so that the population of each is as nearly equal as possible, regard being had to the proper representation of rural and urban discricts and to the distribution and pursuits of the population.

Boroughs with over 50,000 inhabitants are constituted administrative counties of themselves, and their Town Councils are the sole authority under the Act. The enrolled burgesses in other municipal boroughs elect a certain number of representatives to the Council of the County in which they are situated; they are not, however, entitled to vote on any expenditure to which the boroughs are not assessed.

London is constituted an administrative county, and each parliamentary division is an Electoral Division and elects two Councillors.

The quorum of a County Council is one-fourth of the whole. The Councillors are elected trienially, and all retire together.

A Councillor who is chosen to be an Alderman vacates his office of Councillor.

Bankruptcy, or absence from the County for 12 months, disqualifies an Alderman or Councillor.

CHAIRMAN.—The Chairman is elected by the Council from among the Aldermen or Councillors, or persons qualified to be such.

He holds office for one year, and may receive such remuneration as the Council think reasonable.

He is ex officio a Justice of the Peace for the County.

COUNTY ALDERMEN.—The County Alderman are elected by the Council and constitute one-third of the number of Councillors.

A person is disqualified for election as an Alderman unless he is a Councillor, or qualified to be a Councillor.

A County Alderman may not as such vote in the election of a County Alderman. The term of office of a County Alderman is six years, but one-half of the first Alderinen chosen under the Act retire at the end of three years.

 In the county of London the number of Aldermen must not exceed one-sixth of the number of Councillors.

QUALIFICATION OF ELECTORS.

In Municipal Boroughs the enrolled Burgesses choose the Councillors to represent them on the County Council, and in the other parts of the county the qualifications entitling an Elector to be registered, and when registered to vote, are defined by the County Electors' Act, 1888, substantially as follows:—

PERSONAL.—An Elector may be a man or a woman, but must be of full age, not subject to any legal incapacity, and must not, within 12 months prior to July 15th, have received parochial (non-medical) relief.

OCCUPATION.—An Elector must for 12 months prior to July 15th.

(a) have been in occupation, joint or several, of a house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building in the parish; or

(b) must during the same period have been an occupier, as owner or tenant, of some land or tenement in the parish, of the yearly value of not less than £10.

Joint occupation under (a) qualifies, irrespective of the value of the premises, and also under (b) if the value is sufficient, when divided, to give £10 for each occupier.

The occupation of part of a house qualifies where that part is separately occupied for the purposes of any trade, business or profession.

Where a person succeeds to qualifying property by descent, marriage, etc., the occupation and rating of the predecessor in title qualifies the successor.

If a person has occupied different property in the County in immediate succession during the twelve months, he is entitled to be registered in the parish in which the last-occupied qualification is situated.

N.B.—Non-resident owners and lodgers are not entitled to vote in the election of County Councils, nor are electors under the Service Franchise.

LONDON.—All persons on any Parliamentary or Parochial list are entitled to vote at a County Council election; this includes registered property owners, householders, lodgers, and service voters.

RESIDENCE. - A County Elector must have resided in the County, or within 7 (in the case of London, 15) miles of its boundary, for twelve months prior to July 15th (or in the case of the £10 qualification, six months). He or she may, however, let the house furnished, for not more than four months during the year, without losing the vote.

RATING.—The elector, or someone else, must, during the twelve months prior to July 15th, have been rated in respect of the qualifying property to all poor rates made during those twelve months; and all such rates (including County rates) as have become payable up to the preceding 5th January must be paid on or before July 20th.

QUALIFICATION OF COUNCILLORS.

The qualification of County Councillors is thus defined by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as extended to Counties:-

The Councillors are to be fit (i.e., legally qualified) persons chosen by the County electors.

A person is not qualified to be elected, or to be a County Councillor, unless he

(a) Is enrolled, and entitled to be enrolled, as a County elector.
(b) Being entitled to be so enrolled in all respects except that of residence, is resident beyond 7 miles, but within 15 miles of the county, and is entered in the separate non-resident list.

(c) In either of those cases is possessed of real or personal property to the value, in the county, of £1,000; or is rated to the poor rate in the county on the annual (rateable) value of £30.

"Provided that every person shall be qualified to be elected, and to be a County Councillor, who is at the time of election qualified to elect to the office of Councillor, which last-mentioned qualification for being elected shall be alternative for, and shall not repeal or take away any other qualification.

"But if a person qualified under the last foregoing proviso ceases for twelve months to reside in the county, he shall cease to be qualified under that provise, and his office shall become vacant, unless he was at the time of his election, and continues to be, qualified in some other manner."

The practical effect of these provisions is that any person who is properly enrolled as a County elector may be elected a Councillor for that county, and need not in that case be qualified for election by property or rating.

Persons who are on the separate non-resident list, residing beyond 7 but within 15 miles of the county, must be qualified by the stated amount of property or rating.

The Local Government Act further provides that peers owning property in the county, and other owners of property in the county who are registered as Parliamentary county electors, shall be qualified to be elected County Councillors.

Clerks in holy orders, and other ministers of religion, may also be elected, if duly Disqualifications for Election.—Persons holding any office of profit in the gift or disposal of the Council, or any share or interest in any contract or employment with, by or on behalf of the Council. Bankrupts, persons convicted of felony, or corrupt practices. Coroners for the County. Women, though qualified to elect, are disqualified for election.

THE ELECTIONS.

The poll at contested elections for the County Council is conducted by ballot, as at Parliamentary elections. No elector can vote more than once at any election for the same county, even though he may be on the register for more than one electoral division. (In London any elector may vote for one or both candidates, but may not give his two votes to one candidate.)

The elections for all the divisions of a county are held on the same day, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.

THE NOMINATION.

Every candidate must be nominated in writing by two registered County electors of the electoral division for which he stands, and eight others must assent to the nomination. The names of the nominators and assentors should be signed in ful.

No elector must subscribe more nomination papers than there are vacancies to be Nomination papers must be delivered by the candidate, or his proposer or seconder, at a place and time to be fixed by the Returning Officer. In a borough, nominations must be delivered to the Town Clerk.

A candidate may withdraw by giving written notice not later than 2 pm. on the day after the last day for nomination.

CONDUCT AND MANAGEMENT OF THE ELECTION.

Maximum Expense.—The sum which a candidate may expend in the conduct and management of an election is regulated under the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, by a scale which allows a maximum of £25 for the first 500 electors, and threepence for each elector above that number. The limit of expenditure, therefore, will be as follows:—

	1,000	,,	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	£31	5	0

	4,000	,,	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	£68	15	Ô
	4.500	"	•••	•••	•••		•••		£75	0	Õ

And so on, at the rate of threepence for each elector.

These sums must not be exceeded, or the ELECTION WILL BE VOID.

(In London, if two candidates stand jointly, the maximum amount for each must be reduced by one fourth, and they are only in that case allowed to hire the number of committee rooms, and employ the number of persons authorised for a single candidate.)

COMMITTEE ROOMS.—One committee room is allowed to be hired for each electoral division, or if the number of electors exceeds 2,000 one additional committee room for every additional 2,000, or part of that number. The use of committee rooms voluntarily lent is not limited, provided they are not in prohibited premises.

The following premises, or any part of the same, MAY NOT BE USED either as a committee room or for holding a meeting to promote the election of a candidate, viz.:—

Premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor for consumption on or off the premises:

Premises where refreshment of any kind, whether food or drink, is ordinarily sold for consumption on the premises:

Premises where any intoxicating liquor is supplied to the members of a CLUB, SOCIETY, or ASSOCIATION.

N.B.—The use of Public Elementary Schools is not prohibited.

EMPLOYMENT.—The number of persons who may be employed for payment, as clerks or messengers, or in either capacity, in connection with the election is as follows:—

Not mo	re tha	ın 2,000 d	el e cto	rs	•••	•••	•••	•••	2 persons
,,	,,		,,	•••	•••	•••	•••		3,,
,,	27	4,000	"	•••	•••		•••	•••	4 ,,
	• •	5,000							5

and so on, one additional person being allowed for every 1,000 electors, or part of that number.

There is no provision authorising the payment of an election agent, as such.

One polling agent is allowed for each polling station, and agents (unpaid) to attend the counting of votes on the candidate's behalf may also be appointed.

Electors who are employed for payment may not vote.

ELECTION EXPENSES —Claims in respect of the election expenses of a candidate must be sent in within fourteen days after the election, or they will be barred and cannot be paid.

All such expenses must be paid within twenty-one days of the election.

Every agent must send into the candidate, within twenty-three days after the election, a return, in writing, of all expenses incurred by him in the conduct and management of the election (under a penalty of £50).

Every candidate must, within twenty-eight days after the election, send to the Clerk of the County Council a return of all expenses incurred by him or his agents, together with bills stating the particulars, and receipts for all sums over twenty shillings.

A declaration must accompany the return.

A candidate who fails to make the return is forbidden, under a penalty of £50 a day, to sit or vote in the Council.

The penalties and disqualifications attending the commission of corrupt or illegal practices at the election of a County Councillor, are similar in most respects to those which follow the same offences at Parliamentary elections.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

PARISH COUNCILS AND MEETINGS.

By the Local Government Act, 1894, Parish Meetings were brought into existence, the Guardians were reconstituted, and Parish, Rural District, and Urban District Councils were created.

QUALIFICATION OF ELECTORS.

For all elections under this Act the elector is the "parochial elector," who, by Section 44 of the Act, is defined to be any person on the Local Government Register, or on the parliamentary register of electors, and the term includes non-resident owners of property in the parish who are on the parliamentary register.

PARISH MEETINGS.

(a) Where there is a Parish Council there must be at least one annual mee ing for the election of the Council, summoned by the chairman of the Council, by notice of not less than seven clear days before meeting. The meeting shall be held at an hour not earlier than 6 p.m. (b) In smaller parishes where there is no Parish Council, there must be at least two meetings a year. The chairman holds office for a year, and, with the overseers, forms a body corporate.

The Parish Meetings consist only of parochial electors, and for the annual election of councillors a meeting is held in March. In absence of the chairman, the clerk of the Parish Council, or overseer, will discharge his duties.

L-CONSTITUTION.

Every rural parish having a population of 300 and upwards has a Parish Council

(A rural parish is one situated in a rural sanitary district.)

In a rural parish with a population of 100 and upwards, if the Parish Meeting so decide, the County Council must issue an order for its establishment. In a rural parish with less than a population of 100 the County Council may, if the meeting so wish it, issue an order for its establishment, or such small parishes may, with consent of the meeting, be grouped together under a common Parish Council.

The Council consists of a chairman and councillors. The councillors are elected at the annual or first Parish Meeting, if there is no poll required. If there is a poll, then the election is by ballot according to rules laid down by the Local Government Board. The electors are the parochial electors of the parish.

The chairman is elected by the councillors at the annual meeting, which takes place on or within seven days after the 15th of April.

The councillors and chairman hold office for three years from the 15th of April, 1904.

The number of councillors is not less than 5 nor more than 15, the number being fixed by the County Council.

The quorum of a Parish Council is one-third of the councillors, but in no case is the quorum to be less than three.

Absence of a councillor from meetings of the Council for more than six months consecutively, unless from illness or cause approved by the Council, vacates the seat.

II.-QUALIFICATION OF PARISH COUNCILLORS.

A person to be qualified as a parish councillor must be registered as a parochial elector of the parish, or must have come into residence within it, or within three miles of it, on or before the 25th March in the year preceding the election. No person is disqualified by sex or marriage for being elected a parish councillor; practically, therefore, any adult elector or resident of either sex is qualified for election.

A person is disqualified for election when he [or she]

(a) Is an infant or alien.

- (b) Has within 12 months before or after election received union or parochial relief.
- (c) Has within five years before or after election been sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour; or has been adjudged a bankrupt, or compounded with his creditors.

(d) Holds a paid office under a parish council.

(e) Is a contractor under the council or board, or profits by any contract or work done for them.

Disqualification does not apply to a person selling or leasing land or lending money to the council or board, nor to contracts for supplying stone, gravel. &c, from his own land for road repairs, nor to the transport of such mate ial for such repairs in his neighbourhood; nor does it apply to persons interested in newspapers which insert advertisements relating to council or board, nor to shareh lders in joint stock companies holding contracts, but they must not vote on any matter in which the company is interested.

ELECTION OF PARISH COUNCILLORS.

(a) NOMINATION OF CANDIDATES.

At the parish meeting the chairman shall call for nomination papers to be handed to him, and number them as they are handed in, in the order in which he receives them.

Form of nomination paper may be obtained free from the Returning Officer, the overseers, or from the Clerk to the Parish Council.

The nomination paper should be filled up as a matter of precaution before the parish meeting. It must be signed by two parochial electors of the parish, and no more, as proposer and seconder.

Each candidate must be nominated by a separate nomination paper; the same proposer or seconder may sign as many papers as there are candidates to be elected, but no more, for the parish, or ward (if ther are wards).

When all the nomination papers have been received, and not less than fifteen minutes has elapsed since the chairman took the chair, he shall read out the names of all the duly nominated candidates alphabetically, with their addresses and descriptions, and the names and addresses of their proposers and seconders.

After this has been done, no further nominations can be received, except to replac ?

candidates who may withdraw their names.

The chairman's decision that a nomination paper is valid is final; but if he decides that any paper is invalid, he must write and sign his reasons for so deciting, and inform the meeting thereof.

After the nominations are read out, questions may be put to candidates, and explanations given by them.

Candidates may withdraw their candidature before the names are put to the meeting, either in writing or by word of mouth, and in such event, if any elector desires it, an opportunity must be given for further nominations to be made.

(%) THE ELECTION.

The number of parish councillors for each parish is fixed by the County Council. If the candidates validly nominated are not more in number than the number of councillors to be elected, the chairman declares them all duly elected.

If, however, the nominations are in excess of the number of councillors, the chairman will put each name to the meeting in its alphabetical order, and will take a vote by show of hands in favour of each candidate. The votes will be counted and the number in favour of each declared

If no poll is demanded, he will declare those to be elected who have obtained the large-t number of votes.

One-third of the electors present, or five electors, whichever number is least, may demand a poll to be taken, and if such demand be made and not withdrawn before the close of the meeting (ten minutes being given for the purpose), a poll will be taken as shewn below. If no poll is demanded, the declaration of the chairman, as to the result of the election, will be generally final, subject to an election petition (if any).

(c) THE POLL.

If a poll is demanded, the chairman shall send the names of the candidates and the nomination papers to the Returning Officer, and shall also send notice to each candidate that he has been nominated and that a poll has been demanded.

At any time, not later than twelve o'clock, on Tuesday following Thursday after the Parish meeting for the election, a candidate may withdraw his candidature by giving written notice to the Returning Officer, and if the withdrawal of one or more names renders it unnecessary to take a poll, the Returning Officer declares the remaining candidates duly elected.

If a poll is taken the Keturning Officer gives five clear days' notice, and the proceedings are conducted in a similar manner to those at a Parliamentary election, the votes being taken by ballot.

The poll shall take place on the first Monday in April, or, if that is Easter Monday, the last Monday in March; or in either case, such other day, not being earlier than the preceding Saturday or later than the following Wednesday, as may be decided by the County Council.

RURAL DISTRICT COUNCILS.

I.—CONSTITUTION.

The Rural District Council consists of a chairm in and councillors.

The councillors are elected by the parochial electors of those parishes or areas now electing guardians, and they are the representatives of that parish or area electing them on the Board of Guardians.

The chairman is elected by the councillors. The chairman, as also a vice-chairman, and not more than two other persons qualified to be district councillors, may be elected by the councillors outside their own body, and from those who have been exofficion guardians.

The term of office of councillors is three years, one-third as nearly as possible going out of office on the 15th of April in each year. By order of County Council they may retire simultaneously at end of the third year.

The chairman of the Rural District Council, unless a woman, is ex officio a Justice of the Peace for the county.

IL-QUALIFICATION OF COUNCILLORS.

A person qualified to be a councillor must be a parochial elector of some parish within the union, or have resided in the union during the whole of the twelve months preceding the election. No person is disqualified by sex or marriage; practically, therefore, any adult elector or resident in the union, of either sex, is qualified for election.

Disqualifications are the same as those of parish councillors, referred to ante, but the disqualification is not removable as it is in certain cases of parish councillors, and certain further disqualifications as to guardians are applicable to rural district councillors.

III.—ELECTION OF RURAL DISTRICT COUNCILLORS.

Notice of election must be published by returning officer (the clerk of the council). ('andidates must be nominated as in case of parish councillors.

Nomination papers, properly filled in, must be sent to the returning officer.

Nomination papers may be obtained free from the returning officer or overseers.

No parochial elector can sign nomination papers for more than the number of rural district councillors to be elected in any one parish or area.

Returning officers deal with nomination papers, as the chairman does in the case of parish councillors. Candidates may withdraw their candidature by giving the prescribed notice.

The number of rural district councillors is in each parish or area the same as the number of guardians.

If the candidates validly nominated are not more in number than the number of councillors to be elected, the returning officer gives notice that no poll will be taken.

If there is to be a poll, notice is given at least five clear days before date fixed.

The date and hours of the election are the same as for parish councillors elected for the same parish.

An elector cannot vote in more than one parish in the district, although his property may be in several.

GUARDIANS (OUTSIDE LONDON).

I. - CONSTITUTION.

Under rural district councillors, ante, the status and election of the guardians, and the term of office have been explained, so far as they relate to a guardian for rural districts, and the same apply to all guardians, whether in rural or urban districts outside London, with one or two minor differences in the case of guardians in boroughs, which are noted below.

II.—QUALIFICATION.

The qualification is the same whether in rural or urban districts, except in the case of a borough, where, additionally, in case of a parish wholly or partly situate in the borough, the residence qualification of a municipal councillor is that to qualify for a guardian.

III.--THE POLL.

The Polling hours for Guardians in urban districts, other than boroughs, and for urban district councillors, are the same.

URBAN DISTRICT COUNCILS.

I.—CONSTITUTION.

The number of councillors is that provided by any local or personal Acts, the County Council having power from time to time to add to the number.

The parochial electors of the parishes in the district are the electors of the councillors of the district, and if the District Council is divided into wards the electors of the councillors for each ward are such of the parochial electors as have qualifications within that ward.

Each elector gives one vote and no more for each of any number of persons not exceeding the number to be elected.

The term of office of a councillor is three years, one-third of the Council as nearly as possible (and if the district is divided into wards one-third of such ward) going out of office on the 15th April in each year. The County Council may, on request of an Urban District Council, direct the members to go out simultaneously at the end of the third year. The chairman, unless a woman, is, ex officio, a Justice of the Peace for the county.

II —QUALIFICATION OF URBAN DISTRICT COUNCILLORS.

A councillor must be a parochial elector of some parish within the district, or have resided in the district during the whole of the twelve months immediately preceding the election. No person shall be disqualified by sex or marriage.

Disqualifications are the same as these for rural district councillors and guardians.

III.—ELECTION OF URBAN DISTRICT COUNCILLORS.

(a) Notice of election is given by the returning officer (the clerk to the council). Nomination paper is provided by the returning officer free of charge.

It must be signed by two parochial electors of the district, or ward, if there are wards.

Each candidate must be nominated by a separate nomination paper, and no elector shall sign more nomination papers than there are councillors to be elected for the district or ward, nor shall he sign nomination papers for more than one ward.

The returning officer deals with the nominations as in the case for district councillors, and publishes the names of those persons validly nominated.

A candidate may withdraw from his candidature by a notice in writing to the returning officer.

(b) Election.—If the valid nominations do not exceed the number to be elected there shall be no poll.

(c) Poll.—If there is to be a poll the returning officer gives notice at least five clear days before date fixed, with full particulars of candidates.

METROPOLITAN BOROUGH COUNCILS.

The London Government Act, 1899, established in London, in lieu of the Parish Vestries and District Boards, a number of councils which for all intents and purposes converted the various areas into Municipal Boroughs. Each of these boroughs is governed by a Council, consisting of a Mayor, Aldermen and Councillors. The qualification for the office of councillor is the same as for members of Parish Councils, and the electors are the parochial electors as defined by the Local Government Act of 1894. Any person on any list of voters for the parish is a parochial elector, and, therefore, is entitled to vote and to be a candidate (except women) for the office of Councillor.

INFORMATION FOR CANDIDATES.

If a cand date, or a number of candidates combined, determine to institute a canvass of the parish, and to hold meetings, distribute bills, &c., with a view to their election, it is desirable that they should know the provisions of the law as regards such matters, and the limitations which it puts upon their action.

EXPENSES.

The Local Government Act, 1894, does not apparently contemplate that any large expense will be incurred by candidates at Elections under the Act, since no maximum sum has been laid down by it, nor is any return of expenses required to be made by Candidates, as in the case of l'arliamentary and Municipal Elections.

The general provisions of Election law against bribery, treating, undue influence, personation, illegal practices, illegal payments, employment and hiring, apply however, to Parish Council Elections, and should be carefully studied.

It is considered that some of the restrictions imposed by the Municipal Elections Act, 1834, also apply to Parish Council Elections. Among such are the following:—

COMMITTEE ROOMS.

One Committee Room only is allowed to be hired by a Candidate. An additional Committee Room may be hired if the number of electors is above 2,000.

The following premises may not be used by a Candidate as a Committee Room:

Premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor for consumption on or off the premises.

Premises where refreshments of any kind, whether food or drink, are ordinarily sold for consumption on the premises.

Society, (r Association.

The use of Public Elementary Schools as Committee Rooms is not in terms prohibited, as at Parliamentary Elections, but it would be highly unwise that they should be used for the purpose.

EMPLOYMENT.

Two persons, but not more, may be employed for payment, either as Clerks or Messengers, when the number of Electors is below 2,000. One additional person is allowed for every further 1,000 electors, or part of that number, over 2,000.

Candidates who stand jointly are only allowed to hire the number of Committee Rooms and to employ the number of paid Clerks or Messengers authorised for a single Candidate.

If there are only two Candidates, each may appoint one Polling Agent for each Polling Station, who may be paid or unpaid.

If there are more than two Candidates, any number of them, being not less than one third of the whole number of candidates, may appoint one Polling Agent for each Polling Station, who may be paid or unpaid.

Unpaid Agents to attend the counting of votes on the Candidates' behalf may also be appointed. Notice of the polling and counting Agents' names and addresses must be given to the returning Officer not less than two clear days before the polling. Each must make a declaration of secrecy before a magistrate or the Returning Officer.

Electors who are employed for payment may not vote.

MEETINGS.

The arrangements for meetings should be well considered beforehand, and the plans for engaging rooms, announcing the meetings, selecting Chairman and Speakers, &c., settled.

All printed Bills, Notices of Meetings, &c., must bear the name and address of the printer and publisher at foot.

THE CANVASS.

If a personal Canvass of the parish is decided upon, voluntary canvassers must be obtained in sufficient numbers.

PREPARATIONS FOR POLLING DAY.

When the list of nominations is closed, and a poll is certain to be held, the candidares should send to each elector a card, entering thereon particulars of his register number, and the time and place for the polling.

THE POLLING DAY.

All payments for conveyance of voters being prohibited by law, reliance must be placed upon such private vehicles as may be voluntarily lent for the purpose. No vehicle or animal which is usually let for hire may be used for the conveyance of voters to or from the pol.

PARLIAMENTARY SUMMARY, 1905.

The following pages contain a resumé of the Proceedings in Parliament from February 14th, 1905, to August 11th, 1905.

The proceedings are collected under headings indicative of the subject-matters of discussion, with cross-references when necessary, so as to show the chronological course of each Bill or question throughout the Session. They are, as far as possible, arranged in alphabetical order, with the exception of debates "in Supply," which generally appear in order of date under that heading, unless the subject is noticed elsewhere, when it is so stated. Matters relating exclusively to Scotland, Ireland, or Wales are inserted under the headings of the respective countries.

The Summary deals only with such matters of public business as are of general importance or interest, and gives, as far as space permits, an outline of the leading speeches and arguments in both Houses, including the principal business dealt with in Standing Committees.

Business in the House of Lords is prefixed by the letter L, and in the House of Commons by C. Government business is denoted by an asterisk.

Opening of Parliament.—His Majesty the King, accompanied by the Queen, opened Parliament in person, with the usual formalities.

Feb. 14.

The King's Speech.—His Majesty's Speech was as follows:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"My relations with foreign Powers continue to be of a friendly description.

"It gave me particular satisfaction to receive as my guests during the past autumn the King and Queen of Portugal, a country which has for centuries been connected with Great Britain by ties of the closest friendship.

"The war which has been in progress since February last between Russia and Japan unhappily continues. My Government have been careful to observe in the strictest manner the obligations incumbent upon a neutral Power.

"The condition of the Balkan Peninsula continues to give cause for anxiety. The measures adopted at the instance of the Austro-Hungarian and Russian Governments have been instrumental in bringing about some amelioration of the state of the disturbed districts. Progress has notably been made in the reorganization of the Gendarmerie, to which officers belonging to my army have contributed valuable assistance. These measures have still to be supplemented by radical reforms, especially of the financial system, before any permanent improvements can be effected in the administration of these provinces of the Turkish Empire. I note with satisfaction that the Austro-Hungarian and Russian Governments have lately addressed to the Porte proposals for this purpose. My Government is in communication with those of the other Powers mainly concerned upon this important subject.

"The Convention entered into between my Government and that of the French Republic for the amicable settlement of questions involving the interests of both countries has been approved by the French Legislature and duly ratified. It will, I believe, operate in a manner advantageous to both countries, while it cannot fail to strengthen the friendly relations which so happily subsist between them.

"Agreements, under which international questions of a certain class will be referred to arbitration, have been concluded between my Government and the Governments of Sweden and Norway, Portugal, and Switzerland.

"My Government has also come to an agreement with that of Russia under which an International Commission of inquiry, assembled in conformity with the principles of The Hague Convention of 1899, has been entrusted with the duty of investigating the circumstances connected with the disaster to British trawlers which resulted from the action of the Russian Fleet in the North Sea; and of apportioning the responsibility for this deplorable incident.

"The steps to be taken for establishing a Representative Constitution in the Transvaal are receiving the earnest consideration of my Government and of those administering the Colony, and will, I hope, result in substantial progress towards the ultimate goal of complete self-government.

"An Agreement, the provisions of which are calculated to place the relations of the Thibetan Government and the Government of India on a satisfactory footing, was concluded at Lhassa on the 7th September. The great difficulties which the Mission encountered were brilliantly surmounted by the civil and military authorities responsible for its conduct.

L-The King's Speech-continued.

"The Chinese Government have sent a Commissioner to Calcutta to negotiate a Convention of Adhesion on their part to the Agreement with the Thibetan Government.

Papers on the subject have been laid before you.

The Amir of Afghanistan has sent his son, the Sirdar Inavatulla, to pay a complimentary visit to the Viceroy and Governor-General of India at Calcutta, and a high officer of the Government of India has been deputed to Cabul to discuss with His Highness the Amir questions affecting the relations of the two Governments.

A situation has arisen connected with the administration of the property belonging to certain ecclesiastical bodies in Scotland which requires legislative intervention. With a view to the wise consideration of such a measure I have appointed Commissioners. who are engaged in making an enquiry into all the circumstances of the case, and whose Report may enable you to frame such proposals as will, I trust, tend to the efficient administration of ecclesiastical funds, and the promotion of peace and goodwill.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"The Estimates for the service of the ensuing year will be laid before you. They have been framed with the utmost economy which the circumstances of the present time admit.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"Your attention will be directed to proposals for diminishing the anomalies in the present arrangement of electoral areas which are largely due to the growth and movement of population in recent years.

"A Bill to mitigate the evils arising out of alien immigration into the United Kingdom will be laid before you.

"Legislation will be submitted to you for the establishment of authorities to deal with the question of the unemployed. I have noticed with profound regret and sympathy, the abnormal distress which has been caused by the want of employment during the present winter. Arrangements of a temporary character have been made to meet the difficulty, but it is expedient now to provide machinery for this purpose of a more permanent character.

"You have already partially considered provisions for amending the laws relating to Education in Scotland. They will again be brought before you.

"A Bill to amend and extend the Workmen's Compensation Acts will be submitted for your consideration.

"Proposals for improving the status of the Local Government Board and the Board of Trade, and for establishing a Minister of Commerce and Industry, will be laid before you.

"Bills will also be introduced for amending the law with respect to Valuation Authorities, and the procedure for making Valuations; for consolidating the enactments relating to Naval Prize of War; for amending the law relating to the notification of industrial accidents; for the renewal of the Agricultural Rates Acts and other temporary Acts affecting certain classes of ratepayers; for the prevention of the adulteration of butter; and for the amendment of the law with regard to cases stated for the Court of Crown Cases Reserved.

"I pray that Providence may guide all your deliberations for the good of my people."

-The Address in reply to the King's Speech was moved by the Marquis of Winchester (C.) and seconded by Lord Oranmore and Browne (C.).—Lord Spencer (L.), speaking first of the Russo-Japanese war, said he hoped that the Govt., in conjunction with other Powers, would lose no opportunity to bring it to an end. They had displayed prudence and patience in dealing with difficult questions arising out of the war. He hoped pressure would be put on Turkey to bring to an end the He pressed for information as to self-government in S. Africa, scandals in Macedonia. and as to finance and Chinese labour. As to Thilet, he supported the Home Govt., though he thought Sir F. Younghusband had been rather hardly dealt with, the Indian Govt. being to blame. Gigantic expenditure was being increased in a time of peace, and Army schemes were rushed one after the other. The Govt. had sacrificed their Aliens Bill by rejecting a compromise. He should oppose a Redistribution Bill. An appeal to the country was an urgent necessity.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.), Foreign Secy., said that if an opportunity came for bringing the war to a close the Govt. would avail themselves of it with alacrity. Meanwhile they held the most impartial neutrality, while at the same time upholding the time-honoured policy of the country respecting Since July last no British vessels except blockade-runners had been contraband. As to Macedonia, there was agreement among the Powers, and a under discussion. As to S. Africa, the Transvaal was to have interfered with. new scheme was under discussion. representative institutions. Chinese labour had not produced any of the evils which were prophesied. In regard to Thibet, Sir F. Younghusband had frankly admitted that his action was not covered by his instructions, but he had performed great services. With regard to the War Office, great reforms had been effected. Redistribution could not be completely dealt with this Session, but a Bill might be passed next Session. He said the Liberal party had no leader and no programme.—Lord Goschen (C.) complained of the absence of any reference to the fiscal policy.—The Address was agreed to.

C-Mr. Mount (C.) proposed, and Mr. S. Roberts (C.) seconded the Address.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.), Liberal Leader, after a brief eulogy of the late Sir. W. Harcourt, asked why Parliament had not assembled sooner, in view of the serious financial position. The fiscal question overshadowed everything else; Mr. Balfour's policy still remained obscure, and his critics were put off by evasions. They intended at once to ask the House to express its opinion that the confusion should be ended by a general election. The bye-elections showed the opinion of the country upon the issue, and yet the Govt. seemed to think that they could hold office as long as their majority in the House did not mutiny. This was unconstitutional, and was also a betrayal and a usurpation of power. The election of 1900 was fought on one question the war; but the majority had been used for other extremely controversial matters. The Prime Minister disguised his alliance with Mr. Chamberlain on the fiscal question (Mr. Chamberlain interposed to say that he could discover no difference, in principle, between himself and Mr. Balfour). Until Mr. Balfour stated the contrary he should hold that his policy was that of Mr. Chamberlain. The old fiscal policy of the country was to be undermined. The results of retaliation were seen in the Sugar Convention. Dealing with foreign affairs, he said he was sure the Govt. would take the earliest opportunity to throw its influence on the side of peace. They had dealt properly with the North Sea incident, and he hoped that their action had aided the movement for universal arbitration. In Macedonia we might, in concert with other Powers, press for more drastic remedies. The expedition to Thibet was a mistake. He asked for information as to Afghanistan, and for facilities for discussing the proposed constitutional changes in the Transvaal. Was Chinese labour a permanent policy or a temporary expedient, and, if the latter, when was it to end? Explanations were also wanted as to naval and military matters. The programme of legislation was largely intended for show .-Sir J. Gorst (C.) discussed the question of the physical degeneration of children; and Mr. G. Bowles (C.) argued against preference and protection.—Mr. A. Balfour (C.), First Ld. of the Treasury, replied. He said he deeply regretted the death of Sir W. Harcourt, who never allowed party differences to interfere with personal friendship. Beginning with a reference to Afghanistan, he said the Govt. had no provocative policy, and only wished to be on good terms with the Afghans. As to Chinese labour, the experiment was being carefully watched, and if found to have bad results, it would not be extended. Both white and Kaffir labour had increased since the Chinese arrived. As to the late meeting of Parliament, there was nothing abnormal in the date, which was generally suitable. He justified the action of the Govt. on the Sugar Bounties question. The Govt. would not go to the country while it was Results of bye-elections could be disregarded, strong enough to be effective. constitutionally, as Mr. Gladstone had shown. The House must alone decide whether or not a Govt. should continue to exist. The argument as to a mandate was an afterthought of the Opposition. In regard to the fiscal question, he had tried to be explicit to the best of his ability, and honestly to state his policy. Had the Opposition honestly done the same? What did they intend to do if they came into power, in respect to education, licensing, Chinese labour, or Home Rule? While they kept the country in the dark on these and other questions they had no right to catechize the Govt. as to their future action in a new Parliament. The discussion of specific amendments (q.v.) then proceeded, as follows:—

1.—Fiscal Policy.—Mr. Asquith (L.): amendment calling for an early appeal to the constituencies.—Negatived by 311 to 248.

Feb. 16.

2.—South Africa.—Chinese Labour.—Dr. Maonamara (L.): amendment asserting that the assurances of the Govt. had not been fulfilled, and regretting that the opinion of the people of the Transvaal had not been obtained.—Negatived by 275 to 214.

 Ireland, Government of.—Mr. J. Redmond (N.): amendment condemning the Govt. of Ireland as being opposed to the will of the Irish people, and being ineffective, extravagant, and productive of universal discontent and unrest.— Negatived by 286 to 236.

4.—Army.—Capt. Norton (L.): amendment describing the frequent changes in the War Office as destructive of the best interests of the Army, and charging

- C-The Address-continued.
 - the Govt. with negligence and mismanagement, etc.—Negatived by 254 to 207.

 Feb. 23.
- Agriculture.—Amendment by Mr. Channing (L.), in favour of the more thorough cultivation of land, and of more security and freedom for tenants, etc.— Negatived by 241 to 165.

 Feb. 24.
- 6.—Turkey.—Macedonia.—Amendment by Mr. Stevenson (L.), calling attention to the continued Turkish misgovernment, and advocating the appointment of a Christian Governor.—Negatived without a division. Feb. 27.
- 7.—Sugar Convention.—Amendment by Mr. Kearley (L.), attributing loss of trade to the policy of the Brussels Convention, and calling for its denunciation.—Negatived by 276 to 211.
 Feb. 28.
- 3.—Finance.—Amendment by Mr. Buchanan (L.), calling for a reduction of the national expenditure at the earliest possible moment.—Negatived by 250 to 201.

 March 1
- Ireland.—Labourers.—Amendment by Capt. Donelan (N.), regretting the absence of any promised legislation for Irish labourers.—Negatived by 228 to 184.

The Closure having been carried by 235 to 180, the Address was agreed to by 235 to 175.

March 1.

L—Advertisements Regulation BM.—Lord Balfour (C.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to give power to local authorities to deal with objectionable advertisements and to regulate and control their exhibition.—Agreed to.

March 9.

The Bill passed the House of Lords, but made no progress in the Commons.

Africa—Somaliland.—See under Army.—March 2, 7, 8, 23.

-Africa, South.—Transvaal.—Chinese Labour.—In the debate on the Address. Dr. Macnamara (L.) moved an amendment, representing that the assurances given by the Govt, on the importation of Chinese coolies into the Transvaal had not been fulfilled, and regretting that the opinion of the Transvaal had not been obtained .-Sir G. Parker (C.) said that he had found the Chinese earned 2s. a day, and that they were healthy and well-conducted. White labour in the mines had been tried, and failed. The Boer farmers stated that the employment of the coolies set the Kaffirs free for work upon their farms.—Mr. Labouchere (L.) thought the Ordinance was demoralizing, that the mining industry was more or less a swindle.-Mr. Worsley-Taylor (C.) justified, as the result of a visit to Johannesburg, the employment of the coolies, who were treated well and liberally; the compounds were spacious, and the buildings comfortable.—Major Seely (L.) said Mr. Chamberlain had pledged the honour of the country that the importation of coolies would not be allowed unless with the consent of the majority of the white inhabitants.-Mr. Lyttelton (L.U.), Colonial Secy., denied that the Govt. had broken their pledges. If the coolies had not, as was stated, brought their wives with them, it was because they did not desire to do so. They had the right to take their wives, and 4,000 had registered themselves as married, so that they might send for their wives hereafter. There had been no complaint as to the moral conduct of the coolies, and the compounds were open to inspection. On the question of wages, the Kaffirs in the mines had increased by over 9,000, and were obtaining higher wages than in 1899. The Chinese were getting very much higher wages than they could hope to get in China, and white labour had largely increased. He believed opinion in the Transvaal was now very largely in favour of the change. A representative Constitution would shortly be granted, when the Colony could decide the question; but he felt confident that no voice would be raised against Chinese labour.—Amendment rejected by 275 to 214.

L—The Duke of Marlborough (C.), Under Secy., in reply to Lord Monkswell (L.), said the direct result of the supply of Chinese labour was the increase of white labour. No attempt was being made to oust whites in favour of Kaffirs or Chinese. Feb. 27.

C—Mr. A. Balfour said that the change in the Transvaal Constitution would be made by Letters Patent, which would be laid on the table.

Feb. 27.

LORD SELBORNE.—Mr. MacNeill (N.) moved the adjournment, to call attention to the appointment of the High Commissioner, he having held office at the time of the Jameson Raid. He said that Lord Selborne, he anticipated, would be regarded as a partisan, and the post ought not to be filled by a politician.—Mr. A. Balfour repudiated the idea that Lord Selborne was disqualified in any way from service in S. Africa. Politicians had often been sent to important administrative posts in the past. In the Transvaal, representative government was a prelude to full responsible government, and Lord Selborne would go out on that understanding. It was highly necessary to have as High Commissioner a man versed in public affairs, who had gained experience in the House of Commons. There was no arrangement between the Govt. and Lord Milner that they should nominate his successor, and Lord Milner had been pressed to continue in his difficult post, which he had made one of honour and glory; but it was not possible. Lord Selborne was firm, conciliatory, open to argument, and straightforward. The opposition to his appointment was not calculated to promote tranquillity and contentment in S. Africa.—Mr. Buxton (L) condemned Lord Selborne's appointment as a breach of tradition in the Colonial service. The opposition was not directed against Lord Selborne, but against the Govt. A politician ought not to be sent to the Transvaal.—Mr. J. Chamberlain denied the existence of a Colonial Office tradition that posts of this kind were to be confined to Civil servants. The Boers and the Dutch were not influenced by the personal spite and petty malignity exhibited by politicians at home.—The motion was rejected by 236 to 178.

March 6.

Finance.—In Supply, on a Vote on Account, Sir R. Reid (L.) spoke against imposing additional debt on the Transvaal.—Mr. Lyttelton replied that the financial position of the Colony was remarkably good. In the three years since the war its entire economic fabric had been reconstructed. As to the war contribution, the finances just balanced, and that being so, all precedent was against the issue of a loan. The development of the country would be impeded if the promised instalment were now demanded from a moribund nominated assembly, which was to be soon replaced by an elective representative Govt. There was an excellent chance of obtaining the contribution in due time, as the revenue improved.—Sir M. Hicks Beach (C.) said the promise of the Transvaal to pay 30 millions was part of the whole arrangement under which Parliament guaranteed the loan of £35,000,000. The obligation was willingly incurred, and security for this debt of honour should be taken when the representative system was established.—Mr. Lyttelton explained that the engagement was not one that could be enforced in a Court of law.—Mr. Labouchere (L.) said the British taxpayers had been done out of £30,000,000.—A reduction having been negatived, the vote was carried by 200 to 138.

March 20.

On Report of the Vote on Account, Major Seely (L.) moved its reduction, and insisted that payment of the money should be pressed for firmly.—Mr. Buxton pointed out that Mr. Chamberlain had distinctly stated that the loan of 35 millions was conditional on the payment of 30 millions by the Transvaal.—Sir R. Reid said it was a worthless asset.—Mr. Lyttelton argued that as England had made tremendous sacrifices of life and treasure to preserve ascendency in S. Africa, the settlement must be maintained. It would not be right to impose upon a nominated assembly, by official pressure, what was a willing and voluntary contribution, when the income of the Colony only just met its expenditure. From high policy the Govt. had abstained from doing what they had a right to do. The Transvaal ought not to be bled to death.—Sir E. Grey (L.) said no reply had been given to the statements of Sir M. Hicks Beach. The House was misled in the whole transaction.—Reduction negatived by 256 to 196. March 22.

L—CHINESE LABOUR.—Lord Coleridge (L.) called attention to this question, and moved for papers.—The Duke of Marlborough produced statistics of the wages paid to the Chinese, and traversed in detail assertions that the contract terms were not observed.—The Abp. of Canterbury said that, having studied the reports, he found that the Chinese were fairly treated, but he held that the moral aspect of the question had not been sufficiently considered.—Lord Lansdowne said the importation of Chinese labour was an experiment, which required close attention, but it was absolutely necessary, since white labour was not attainable and Kaffir labour was not forthcoming. The moral question had not been, and would not be, lost sight of.

May 16.

L—Lord Coleridge (L.) called attention to the alleged flogging of Chinamen in the Transvaal.—The Duke of Marlborough said the Govt. would make enquiry into any specific case where it was shown that illegal flogging took place. No breach of law would be allowed to pass.

July 20.

C—Transvaal Constitutions.—In Supply, on the Colonial Office Vote, Mr. Buxton (L.) raised the constitutional question, and condemned the withholding of full responsible government.—Sir R. Reid (L.) held that it would be impossible successfully to govern the Colonies without the consent and goodwill of the Dutch.—Mr. Bryce (L.) said the natives were worse off than before the war.—Mr. A. Lyttelton explained why representative institutions had not been proposed for the Orange River Colony, where the matter was not urgent and there had been no demand for it. They wanted full responsible government, which could not yet be conferred. As to the Transvaal, the Govt. had acted in strict accordance with precedent and with their promises. The concessions made to the Transvaal were exceptionally generous. As they stood, the novel and hazardous experiment of granting responsible government could not be tried, as it meant party government, a struggle for the Treasury Bench, and a political vendetta which would increase existing racial difficulties. A political association had been formed—"Het Volk"—to which no Briton belonged, and Gen. Beyers, a member of it, had declared that if the British Govt. should not treat the Boers fairly there would be another war. The present scheme was designed to obliterate racial spirit. If responsible government were granted, the Dutch would range themselves on one side and the British on the other. Political co-operation was possible under representative institutions, and already the work of industrial improvement and development was drawing the races closer together.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman described this as an unfortunate speech, which would not smooth away difficulties. The way to gain the confidence of the Transvaal was to trust the people in all respects, and not to have any form of intermediate government.—Mr. J. Chamberlain agreed that racial feeling might become more acute if full responsible government were granted at once. Would the Liberal party, when in power, confer responsible government immediately?—(Sir H. C. Bannerman denied that he had said so.)—For himself he thought that the Govt. had perhaps gone too far already. It was, no doubt, an experiment, but he would have been inclined to make it, in the first instance, in the Orange River Colony.—Mr. H. Samuel (L.) moved to reduce the vote, as a protest against the continued employment of Chinese coolies. He said white labour had not increased pari passu with coloured labour. There had been promiscuous floggings of the Chinese, and riots and disturbance.—Mr. Burt (L.) denounced the infliction of flogging, and said the death-rate in the gold mines from accidents and disease was very high.-Mr. Lyttelton said he had enquired into the allegations of unauthorized floggings, and special precautions had been taken to prevent them, but as yet the cases had not been traced. The mortality had fallen to 44 per 1,000, and he hoped it would fall still further, but metalliferous mines were notoriously unhealthy. The death-rate among the Chinese was under 20 per 1,000. Crimes of violence were not large in number. The Ordinance was approved in the Transvaal itself, and no resolution or petition had asked for its repeal; "Het Volk," the Boer organization, had agreed to its maintenance for five years. The new Legislative Assembly would soon be able to consider the question. There had been a material increase of white population, and Kaffir labour had also largely increased in quantity.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said that, if the Transvaal under responsible government should endorse the Ordinance he would not interfere; but in the meantime, a limit should be placed on the number of Chinese.— Mr. Balfour noted that the Opposition leader regarded the system of indentured labour as slavery and an outrage on humanity, but he was ready to sanction it if the white population of the Transvaal, under responsible government, should be in favour of it.—The amendment was rejected by 237 to 170.

L—WAR STORES.—Lord Monkswell (L.) called attention to the Report of the Auditor-General on the stores accounts of the Army in S. Africa, and moved a resolution in favour of immediate enquiry into the cause of such wastage.—Lord Donoughmore (C.), Under Secy., said that there would be such an enquiry into the whole matter as there was some ground for suspicion, and if any fraud was proved the parties would be dealt with.—Motion withdrawn.

March 27.

C—Sir H. C.-Bannerman asked for information as to the intentions of the Govt. in view of the report of Sir W. Butler's Committee on the war contracts in S. Africa.—Mr. Balfour replied that the Director of Public Prosecutions held that there was no case for criminal proceedings. The Govt. considered that the report ought to be referred at once to a committee of the House. The officers concerned had been relieved of duty.—Mr. Balfour assured the House that it was not desired to restrict enquiry, and if necessary an interim report could be made.

June 20.

Mr. Balfour said that he had modified his view as to the enquiry, and it would now follow precedent and be conducted by a Royal Commission.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman agreed that a Royal Commission was preferable to a committee. The conduct of H.M. Govt. was, however, an equally important subject, and he gave notice of a vote of censure thereon.—Mr. Balfour said the Royal Commission would have power to take evidence on oath, but not to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents.

June 21.

Sir H. C.-Bannerman asked whether the Govt. were still of opinion that the Commission to be appointed should not have a statutory character.—Answering the right hon. gentleman, Mr. Balfour stated that statutory powers would be given to the Commission if it should be found necessary, and promised a Bill for this purpose.

—Sir H. C.-Bannerman promised that the Bill would be treated as uncontroversial as far as its main object was concerned.

Sir R. Reid moved a resolution condemning the conduct of the Govt. in connection with the supply and disposal of stores and the sales and refunds to contractors in S. Africa at the end of the war, and blaming them for failing to enquire promptly into the nature of the transactions impugned. He charged them with incompetence and neglect of duty in not preventing the scandals which had occurred, or not having stopped them earlier. They were, he said, known to the War Office nearly two years before. By delay the Govt. had avoided publicity and had put off the punishment of guilty parties. By want of vigilance and supervision, fraud was not prevented. A special staff ought to have been sent out to deal with accumulated stores. As it was, supplies were bought for future delivery from certain firms, and identical supplies were sold to the same firms to enable them to carry out their contracts, and the stores were resold to us at greatly enhanced prices; in some cases not even being removed before being resold. A committee of enquiry ought to have been appointed much sooner.—Mr. Brodrick (C.), Secy. for India, complained of these attacks on the Govt. on the report of a committee before whom no Minister had been called. He affirmed that had he known, when at the War Office, that stores were sold to a contractor and bought back from him, it would not have been allowed to pass unnoticed. He denied, however, that great losses had been sustained through these sales and resales. All possible steps had been taken to prevent waste, and more control had been exercised than had ever before been exercised in war. The Butler Committee had overlooked many important facts. Auditors had been sent out for purposes of supervision. In 1902 he asked for returns showing to whom supplies were sold, but they were not sent, and on their absence the Butler Committee commented, without asking him for an explanation. The Committee had not made a judicial finding, but had indulged in vague suspicions obscured by melodramatic rhetoric. Govt. enquiry had not been unjustifiably delayed, and he repudiated the charge of laxity and neglect. The Commission now to be appointed would vindicate the honour and capacity of those who administered the War Office.—Mr. G. Bowles estimated the loss to the public resulting from dual contracts, sales and resales, at nearly six millions. -Mr. Arnold-Forster (L.U.), Secy. for War, claimed credit for the Govt. for the appointment of the Butler Committee as promptly as possible. There had been waste and confusion after the war, due largely to the enormous pressure of a kind of work upon persons who were not accustomed to it. Arrangements had been since made which would prevent any recurrence. The report of the Butler Committee had been presented prematurely, owing to the demands of the Public Accounts Committee, and many points with which it dealt were still sub judice.—Sir J. Woodhouse (L.) asked whether the War Office had not told the late Chancellor of the Exchequer that five or six millions would be realized by the sale of stores.—Mr. Ritchie replied that he was so informed by the War Office.—Mr. Balfour said the debate was inconvenient, and might do injustice by being held before the Royal Commission had sat. Lord Milner, for instance, had been attacked, as well as Gen. Lyttelton, without being heard. Such officials ought to be left alone until the Commission had heard them and reported. The loss by the sale of stores in S. Africa was very much smaller than was imagined. The amount realized was about seven millions. But the most important question was whether there had been anything like fraud, and that would be found out by the enquiry. In the difficulties which faced the War Office during and after the war, it was very easy to form a commercial ring in the Transvaal, and if such had been made it would have been impossible to dispose, without loss, of the vast mass of perishable goods remaining at the close of the war. At the same time, some of the transactions seemed quite incapable of explanation. Unless it could be shown that the Govt. did not send out an adequate body of financial advisers after the war, this attack on them was an absurdity. Mr. Brodrick's statement, he held, would satisfy the House and the country.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said he was surprised that such a paragon of a War Minister had been removed to the India Office. He denied that individuals had been attacked in the debate, and said the Govt. were sheltering themselves behind unnamed officials. Mr. Brodrick ought to have secured that the War Office case was put before the Butler Committee, and the Govt. ought to have known that at the end of the war there would be enormous stores in S. Africa, and should have made proper arrangements. Decentralization had been carried to the pitch of folly. The Opposition were not influenced only by partisan motives, and would move votes of censure as long as the Govt. committed mistakes.—The closure having been carried by a majority of 73, the motion was rejected by 329 to 255. June 26.

A Bill to facilitate the proceedings of the Commissioners was passed on July 4, and received Royal Assent July 11. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 7, rost.) See also under Finance.

L—Africa, West.—The Abp. of Canterbury called attention to the mischief caused by the unrestricted importation and sale of intoxicating liquor in W. Africa, especially in Lagos and S. Nigeria. The traffic was disgraceful to the British name and disastrous to British trade. He asked for a high duty to restrain the traffic, which was mainly German.—The Duke of Marlborough (C.), Under Secy., said that the subject had not been lost sight of, and that the Govt. would do all they could to limit the traffic further by international co-operation.

June 6.

G-Agriculture.—In the debate on the Address, Mr. Channing (L.) moved an amendment in favour of measures to promote the more thorough cultivation of the land and greater agricultural employment: also to give more security and freedom to tenants; and to encourage combination.—Lord Willoughby de Eresby (C.) opposed, on the ground that there was no desire to buy land. One remedy was to reduce railway rates for carriage of produce.-Mr. Fellowes (C.), for the Bd. of Agriculture, said that the depopulation was due to land being laid down to grass, to the extended use of machinery, and the attraction of the towns. He could not see how the exodus could be stopped. As to railway rates, the Committee on the question had been able to find only a few witnesses to give evidence of unfairness, but the Board was ready to help in a dispute between a company and traders. It also hoped to stamp out swine fever and sheep scab as it had stamped out other diseases. No change in the land laws would remedy the evil of depopulation. The claim for security of tenure would result in dual ownership, on the Irish system, which no one desired, but combination among small holders would be encouraged. A fair redistribution of the rates was one of the most important objects.—The amendment was rejected by 241 to 165.

*AGRICULTURAL RATES ACT CONTINUANCE BILL.-Mr. G. Balfour (C.) Pres. Local Govt. Bd., moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to continue until 1910 the Act of 1896 and the Tithe Rent-Charge Act of 1899. He said the Govt. did not regard these Acts as final, but the reform of local taxation required an overflowing Exchequer and abundant leisure, which did not exist at present. The whole burden of the rates fell upon realty, and many services paid for out of the rates were not such as should fall upon them. Moreover, agricultural ratepayers and clerical tithe-owners contributed more in proportion to their ability to pay than other classes. The relief of half their burden out of Imperial funds was provisional and incomplete, but it met a real grievance, and at present held the field.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) said the Opposition retained the views they held in 1896, that the grievances of ratepayers were dealt with in a partial and inequitable manner. A great part of the money intended for the farmers must ultimately go to the landlords. But after existing for nine years, it could not well be withdrawn abruptly. The Govt. ought to have dealt with the question as a whole, but they had wasted their time in relieving the subscribers to Church schools. The subject should be tackled without further delay, and the present Bill ought to be limited to two years.—Mr. A. Balfour said that Sir H. C.-Baumerman had endeavoured to get out of the difficulty into which the almost factious opposition to the Bill in 1896 had put the Opposition, and for the time being at any rate he had given up his case.—Mr. Whiteley (L.) moved an amendment in favour of a contribution by owners of land, based on its selling value, out of which ratepayers might be relieved of a substantial portion of their burdens.—Mr. Chaplin (C.) said the Opposition had wisely decided not to resist the Bill, in view of a general election, which accounted for their recantation at the eleventh hour. The amendment would destroy the Bill.—Sir E. Strachey (L.) said that farmers were anxious for the renewal of the Act. The money did not go into the landlords' pockets. The Exchequer ought to bear the charge for national services, such as main roads and education.—Mr. Ll.-George (L.) complained that the Govt. made promises to the trading class but to the agriculturists they gave cash.—Mr. L. White (L.) testified to the fact that the farmers, not the landlords, reaped the benefit of the existing Act.—The amendment was ultimately negatived, and the Bill was read a second time by 174 to 59.

In Committee, Mr. Trevelyan (L.) moved to discontinue the relief given to the clergy in respect of tithes.—Lord E. Fitzmaurice (L.) said the laity of the Church should make greater efforts than at present to support the clergy.—Negatived by 217 to 138.—Mr. Black (L.) moved to limit the operation of the Bill.—Rejected by 253 to 163.—Mr. Lambert (L.) moved that the Act should be permanent, in view of the fact that a permanent equivalent grant had been voted for Ireland.—Mr. G. Balfour noted the change of opinion among the Opposition. Sir W. Harcourt had described the Bill in 1896 as "unjust, false in its principles, and outrageous." The Govt. would treat the question as an open one.—Sir H. Fowler (L.) moved to report progress as a protest against this attitude, which he described as an astounding breach of faith.—Mr. A. Balfour denied that any pledge had been violated. It was of no great importance whether the Bill was now made permanent or renewed for a time, for its renewal in future was certain, unless there was a general reform of local taxation, when it would of course be repealed. He suggested that the amendment should be withdrawn.—

The motion to report progress was negatived by 219 to 170.

May 10.

Mr. Lambert's amendment having been brought into order, was further considered.

—Mr. Balfour said it was of little importance whether the Act was made temporary or nominally permanent, and the question had, therefore, been left an open one.—

Sir H. Fowler said he realized that it would have to be renewed from time to time until a general reform of local taxation was undertaken.—The amendment was negatived by 266 to 80.—Clause 1 having been carried by 244 to 86, the Bill passed through Committee.

May 17.

The Bill was read a third time unopposed.

May 31.

L—Lord Kenyon (C.) moved the 2nd R. of the Bill.—Lord Spencer (L.) said that stronger reasons could be advanced against this Bill than against the principal Act of 1896, and complained that the Govt had not dealt with the general question.—Lord Lansdowne admitted that the Bill was merely provisional, but if the whole question was to be dealt with there must first be a Valuation Bill.—Read a 2nd time. July 6.

as to be dealt with there must hist be a valuation Bill.—Read a 2nd time. July 6.

The Bill was read a third time and passed.

July 11.

(See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 8, post.)

C—COMPENSATION FOR CROPS BILL.—Mr. Mount (C.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to make railway companies liable to make good any damage to crops, etc., from fire caused by locomotives.—Mr. Fellowes (C.) said that the onus might be put upon the railway companies to prove that they took adequate precautions against fire. Two companies had already adopted appliances for preventing such fires, and the question might be settled on a friendly basis without legislation.—Sir E. Grey (L.) objected that the Bill made the companies liable even when the injury or damage could not have been prevented by precautions. He hoped the House would deal fairly with the companies.—Read a second time, and referred to the Standing Committee on Trade.

March 3.

L—Lord Newton (C.) moved the 2nd R. of the Bill, which was assented to by Lord Wolverton on behalf of the Govt., and agreed to.

July 20.

(See Statutes, Railway Fires Act, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 11, post.)

C—SMALL HOLDINGS BILL.—Mr. Channing (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to increase facilities for small holdings by giving compulsory purchasing and hiring powers to rural and urban authorities.—Mr. G. Lawson (C.) asserted emphatically that legislation of this kind was not needed. Debate adjourned.

March 24.

-*Allens Bill.—Mr. Akers-Douglas (C.), Home Secy., introduced the Govt. Bill to restrict the influx of aliens. He shewed that there had been a great increase in the number of alien immigrants, and that crime and disease increased with it. 1900, 3,130 aliens were received into the prisons; in 1904 the number was 4,774. The Govt. were not prepared to restrict the operation of the Bill to the expulsion of criminal aliens, but proposed also to deal with the organized immigration of undesirable aliens. The great bulk of them-97 per cent.—came to eight ports; at these ports only immigrant ships would be allowed to land them. 'An immigration officer would be appointed at each, with power to refuse permission to land. There would be an appeal to a Board of three experienced persons. The undesirable immigrant would be defined, and would be subject to exclusion if he could not show that he was able to support himself in decent sanitary conditions; or, if he was a lunatic, idiot, or diseased, and likely to become a charge on the rates; or if he had been sentenced for any extradition crime; or had been already expelled from the country. Political refugees would not be excluded. -Sir C. Dilke (L.) held that the number of aliens who came for the purpose of settling The Bill would largely abrogate the right of asylum, here was inconsiderable. to which special importance attached at the present time.-The first reading was agreed to. April 18.

Sir C. Dilke (L.) moved an amendment in favour of legislation against sweating, and for safeguarding the principle of asylum for the victims of persecution. He said the Bill was based on erroneous facts and figures. Its provisions did not secure the right of asylum. It was directed against a trumpery and declining evil.—Major Evans-Gordon (C.) said that the immigrants whom America would not have were "dumped" down here. Reasonable conditions should be attached to the hospitality which we extended to foreigners.—Mr. H. Samuel (L.) argued in favour of allowing the entrance of poor aliens. Destitute Jewish immigrants might in the end become most useful citizens.—Mr. Asquith (L.) said he was in favour of the expulsion of criminal aliens, but he objected to giving an immigration officer power to exclude on the ground of merepoverty. He denied that there was a steady increase in destitute immigrants, though particular areas had suffered. It was important to preserve the privilege of asylum for the victims of political or religious persecution, and the Bill was insufficient for the purpose. Aliens had a right to make Great Britain their temporary refuge before proceeding to their final destination. He was not, however, prepared to oppose the Bill.—Mr. Akers-Douglas said that on any board of appeal there would be a magistrate and, he hoped, a representative of the guardians. Emigrants in transit ought not to be allowed to remain here indefinitely, sometimes at the expense of the rates. There was a vast difference between undesirable aliens and the Huguenots and others who came here formerly and brought with them arts and crafts. There was no intention to exclude bona fide political refugees.—Mr. Buxton (L.) supported the Bill, being convinced of the necessity of keeping out undesirable aliens, especially Russians and Poles.—Mr. J. Chamberlain (L.U.) welcomed this Bill because it was in effect a protection to the working classes against the underpaid labour of immigrants. Opposition were making some progress towards fiscal reform in supporting this Bill. This foreign competition was not fair competition, and it affected the provinces as well as London. The promoters of the Bill were the best friends of the poor Jews already here, for they would prevent others from coming to swell their ranks.—Mr. K. Hardie (Soc.) said the Labour members would strongly oppose the Bill unless drastic amendments were agreed to.—Mr. Atherley-Jones (L.) denounced it as a violation of the sanctuary of the politically distressed.—Mr. A. Balfour said the Bill had nothing to do with the Jewish question. We had a moral right to decide who should be allowed to enter this country and on what conditions. Great changes had been made in the facilities of transport, and foreign countries and the Colonies were alive to the fact that unrestricted immigration might become a great evil. Here we retained the unfit, and sent the fit to America or Argentina. The ancient right of asylum would not be interfered with, since the Bill would only exclude persons who were likely to become a public charge. Were we to support every foreigner who could not support himself? If so, the burden should be borne by the nation as a whole, but at present it was borne by a few localities. We had a right to keep out everybody who could not add to the industrial or intellectual strength of the country, but we were now maintaining aliens who settled here, and at the same time assisting men of our own flesh and blood to emigrate.-The amendment was negatived by 211 to 59, and the Bill was read a second time. May 2.

In Committee, on Clause 1 (immigrants not to land except at a port where there is an inspecting officer), Sir C. Dilke moved an amendment to elicit a clear declaration as to the class whom the Bill would affect.—Sir R. Finlay (L. U.) Atty-Genl., said it was not proposed to introduce the American system and subject all passengers to examination.—Mr. Churchill (L.) protested against distinguishing between cabin and steerage passengers, as it would be easy for undesirable aliens coming from France to pay a small extra sum and travel as cabin passengers.—A motion to report progress was rejected by 210 to 184.—Mr. Akers-Douglas said the real purpose of the Bill was to deal with immigrants who arrived in considerable numbers, and he stated that 97 per cent. of this immigration was directed to eight ports.—The amendment was rejected by 227 to 196.—Mr. Lough (L) moved that there should be arrangements at the ports for receiving and examining immigrants.—Mr. Akers-Douglas declined to consent to remove immigrants from the shipowner's control before being examined, but would allow them to be disembarked conditionally. Ordinarily, however, the immigration officers would be easily able to do their work on board. The cost of the shelters should be borne by the shipowners, if they decided that the examination should be on land. The amendment was rejected by a majority of 49.—Mr. Trevelyan (L.) moved to allow immigrants to land at such ports as had no machinery for their examination; otherwise he said the transmigration traffic would be lost.-Mr. Akers-Douglas said that if immigrants came in any numbers to a closed port, inspecting officers would be appointed at that port. Individual aliens would not be shut out.

Mr. Bryce (L.) said the Bill would permit the unrestricted immigration of aliens, even in the specified ports, if they came in a ship which did not carry more than 20 foreign steerage passengers. The undesirables could thus get into the country in small batches.—Mr. Akers-Douglas replied that listed ports could be added to at the discretion of the Home Secy., if he should find that immigration was diverted to ports where no inspection machinery was provided. We could not have such effective machinery as in America, but he could take such precautions as were possible. If attempts were made to evade the Act he could vary the definition of an immigrant ship, and so prevent it. Criminals who travelled as cabin passengers could be dealt with under Clause 3, and expelled. No obstacle would be put in the way of bon's fide transmigrant traffic.—Amendment rejected by 215 to 169.—Mr. Flynn (N) moved to exclude Ireland from the Bill, as it would operate harshly against Irishmen who were naturalized Americans, returning temporarily or permanently to Ireland.—Mr. Akers-Douglas said the amendment would allow foreign aliens to come to Great Britain by way of Ireland, and lunatics and other undesirables ejected by the United States would be "dumped" on Irish soil. Irishmen who had become Americans would not be excluded.—Mr. J. Redmond (N.) recognized the force of these arguments.—Negatived.—Mr. Akers-Douglas moved an amendment for the conditional disembarkation of immigrants for the purpose of inspection.—Mr. Bryce argued that the examination on land, instead of on board, was a concession to the shipowners and the cost should be borne by them. Very little outlay would be necessary.—Mr. Ritchie (C.) agreed that the public ought not be made to bear this charge.—Mr. Atherley-Jones (L.) moved that there should be a judicial authority to deal with cases as they arose.—Negatived by 189 to 145.

June 28.

Mr. T. Bowles (C.) proposed to relieve the alien from the burden of proving that he was not an undesirable, and to throw it upon those who sought to exclude him.-Sir R. Finlay said it was reasonable to require the appellant to prove that the examining officer had made a mistake. No alien had the right to land in this country, and we could attach conditions to the landing.—Negatived by 210 to 161.—Mr. Tennant (L.) moved to give the master of the ship a right of appeal to the King's Bench.—Sir R. Finlay argued that indiscriminate leave to appeal would lead to great delays.— Mr. Balfour argued that the Bill was mainly a measure of administration, and that many of the amendments were designed to make it unworkable; or at any rate, too perfect a piece of mechanism for this rough world.—Mr. Asquith (L.) insisted that immigrants and shipowners should have some protection against wrongful decisions,— Negatived by 239 to 176.—Mr. Emmott (L.) moved to omit the provision that an immigrant should be prevented from landing if he could not show that he was in a position to support himself decently. Poverty should not be a reason for exclusion. The proportion of aliens in this country was smaller than anywhere else in Europe.— Mr. B. Law (C.) quoted statistics, from which it appeared that 75,000 aliens came here in 1904 for the purpose of settling. The object of the Bill was to exclude only undesirable aliens.—Sir C. Dilke asked whether aliens without money but with willing hands were to be kept out.—Mr. Balfour said this was no question of protection or free trade. The object was simply to exclude undesirable aliens, and a man was undesirable who came without means, as he would be rather an object of charity or come on the rates. A few of them might possibly be able to support themselves, but it was right in the interests of the community to exclude them unless they could show a prospect of earning a living.—Lord H. Cecil (C.) said that each nation ought to provide for its own social failures.—Mr. Churchill described the Bill as merely a counter in the party game. The poverty of an alien ought not to disqualify him for residence here. The number of immigrants, he said, did not exceed 6,700 a year.—Mr. Burns (In) opposed any change in the law which might close our ports against the victims of misrule in other lands.—Amendment rejected by 215 to 158. A formal resolution relating to the expenditure necessitated by the Bill was carried by 259 to 141. The suspension of the 12 o'clock rule having been carried by 233 to 159, Mr. Balfour moved a resolution for the closure by compartments of the proceedings on the Aliens Bill. He said that while Govt. business had been first on the paper on 73 days, only 11 days had been occupied by their legislative programme. Criticism of the administration had this year been excessive. The Session would naturally end between the 10th and the 15th August, and about 27 working days remained, of which eight must be occupied by Supply and two by the Appropriation Bill. Thus only 17 days were left for legislation. The Aliens Bill ought to be passed, also the Churches (Scotland) Bill, and the resolutions on redistribution. The prospects of other Bills were shadowy. The Session could not be lengthened, as the House already worked longer than any other Legislature. The Aliens Bill was not controversial, but, without special measures, it would probably occupy all the time. He made no charge of obstruction, but members enjoyed making speeches, especially when they embarrassed the Govt. As matters stood, guillotine resolutions were inevitable as temporary expedients, but some change ought to be made in the rules so as to concentrate the debating and constructive powers of the House on important Bills.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said the Bill contained unsound and dangerous principles and was unworkable. The present procedure rules had hindered the progress of business, and the House ought not to have to discuss Parliamentary reform this Session. Devolution of some kind would have to be established.—Mr. J. Redmond (N.) said the legislative machine had broken down, and the only remedy was to entrust local assemblies with the management of local affairs.—

Mr. Dalziel (L.) moved an amendment against the resolution, which, after further debate, was defeated by 146 to 107. Other amendments were also rejected, and the resolution was ultimately carried.

July 5.

The Committee being resumed, Lord H. Cecil (C.) moved to restrict Clause 1 to pauper Negatived by 203 to 145.—Mr. K. Hardie (Soc.) moved to exclude aliens brought to this country under contract to take the place of workmen on strike. Several labour members supported the amendment, which was rejected by 215 to 148.— Sir C. Dilke (L.) proposed that indigent immigrants who proved that they were seeking admission as sufferers from religious persecution should be allowed to enter.-Mr. Balfour denied that the Bill would keep out those who were really suffering from religious persecution. It would touch no one who could show that he could earn a livelihood, and the Jewish community would supply their persecuted co-religionists with sufficient money to entitle them to admission. The more stringent regulations in the United States of America did not in effect exclude oppressed Jews. Under the amendment, every would-be immigrant would claim to be excluded from the operation of the Act.—Lord H. Cecil (C.) appealed for some concession, so as not to increase the hardships of people who were the objects of real pity, by sending them back to their country. Mr. Balfour said the Govt. sympathised with the Jews in Russia, Rumania, and elsewhere, but their primary duty was to their own country. If Parliament thought fit to afford an asylum to all persons who represented that they were persecuted, the cost entailed should be defrayed by the nation, and not by the local rates. He suggested that words should be added to ensure that permission to land should not be withheld from a destitute immigrant who could prove that he was seeking admission solely to avoid prosecution or punishment on religious grounds or for an offence of a political nature, or to avoid danger to life or limb or danger of imprisonment on account of his religious belief.—Mr. Asquith (L.) pressed for the extension of the privilege to aliens whose "liberty" was threatened in their own country.—Mr. Balfour said this would admit every Russian Jew. At 11 o'clock the guillotine resolution came into operation, and the amendment was rejected by 223 to 189. The Clause was carried by 237 to 188, and Clauses 2 and 3 were also passed after divisions. July 10.
On the Report stage of the financial resolution, Mr. Whitley (L.) moved to limit the

On the Report stage of the financial resolution, Mr. Whitley (L.) moved to limit the expenditure to £10,000 in any one year.—Mr. Akers-Douglas said the estimated cost of the Act would be £24,000 annually, but that it would diminish gradually. The amendment was rejected by 224 to 157.

On Clause 4, Mr. Emmott (L.) moved to omit the part of it which imposed a penalty on ship masters and compelled them to give the alien a free passage back.— Negatived by 221 to 172.—The Clause was carried, and at 6.30 p.m. Clauses 5, 6 and 7 were passed after divisions.—On Clause 8, which defined an immigrant as an "alien steerage passenger," Mr. Fuller (L.) moved to omit the word "steerage."—Negatived by 144 to 117.—A long discussion took place on an amendment to exclude from the Bill British-born immigrants who had become naturalized in other countries.—Mr. Akers-Douglas argued that a man who had divested himself of his British nationality should not receive exceptional treatment.—Sir R. Finlay asked why men who were "failures" in the United States, the country of their adoption, should be permitted to return here to burden the rates.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman supported the amendment, which was ultimately closured under the guillotine resolution, and rejected by 214 to 173.—The Bill passed through Committee.

July 11.

On Report, several new Clauses having been ruled out of order, Mr. Emmott (L.) moved to omit Clause 1, repeating the arguments against the Bill as a whole.—Negatived by 228 to 132.—Mr. C. McArthur (L.U.) proposed to relieve shipowners from the liability to provide inspection depôts.—Negatived by 227 to 142.—Mr. K. Hardie moved to prevent the admission of aliens under contract to take the place of British workmen during a strike. Mr. S. Buxton and other members supported him.—Mr. Akers-Douglas argued that the Bill would not facilitate the importation of foreign indentured labour.—Sir R. Finlay said the question of alien labour was left exactly where it stood.—Rejected by a majority of 67.—Sir C. Dilke moved to allow the admission of aliens who sought asylum "for political reasons." In Russia, arbitrary arrests for political opinions were frequent, and the Bill would prevent sufferers from such oppression from finding refuge here.—Mr. Baltour said all were agreed as to admitting persons driven out of their country for political reasons, but a form of words to carry out the intention was difficult to find. The amendment would enable every destitute alien to say that he had left his country for political reasons. Those in peril of life or liberty were already admitted by the Bill, and the interests of aliens who came solely to avoid prosecution or punishment on religious or political grounds or for a political offence were safeguarded.—Amendment rejected by 244 to 162.—Mr. Akers-Douglas moved to amend the Clause so as to cover an immigrant seeking admission to avoid prosecution or punishment on religious or political grounds; and that destitute immigrants should not be kept out when they wished to enter the country to avoid persecution, involving danger of imprisonment or danger to life or limb, on account of religious belief.—Sir C. Dilke proposed to add "danger to liberty."—Rejected (203 to 147.)—Mr. Akers-Douglas' amendment was agreed to.

July 17.

A motion to omit Clause 2 was, after closure, rejected (173 to 132.)—Mr. Cremer (L.) moved to add a member of some bona fide organization of workmen to each immigration board.—Mr. Akers-Douglas said that workmen might be put upon the panels from which the boards would be chosen.—Amendment rejected by a majority of 49.—At 11 p.m. the closure came into force, and the remaining Govt. amendments were put forthwith and agreed to.—The Bill was then ordered for 3rd R.

July 18.

Mr. Akers-Douglas moved the 3rd R. of the Bill, and reviewed the changes made in Committee. He believed it would have a strong deterrent effect, and that, while concessions had been made to meet cases of possible hardship, the principle upon which the Govt. had proceeded from the first, remained unchanged.—Maj. Seely (L.) moved the rejection of the Bill. In regard to the exclusion of criminals he said it was a sham; and that poverty was made, for the first time, a disqualification for admission.-Sir H. C.-Bannerman said the Bill drew distinctions between the destitute honest working man, who would be kept out, and the scamp or lazy man, who would be allowed in while he had money in his pocket.—Mr. Balfour asked why Sir H. C.-Bannerman had not taken this heroic line on the 2nd R., but absented himself from the division? He denied that there was any protective element in the Bill, although the Opposition voted to introduce one. The supporters of the Bill were not against the admission of foreigners, but hospitality was not obligatory, and should not be abused. If it were, we should have to adopt severely restrictive measures, like some of our Colonies and the United States. Jews fleeing from religious persecution need never find themselves excluded, but every immigrant ought to be in a position to support himself. United States were also the friends of the oppressed, but they imposed far severer restrictions on immigration.—The amendment was rejected by a majority of 78, and the Bill was read a third time by 193 to 103.

L—Lord Belper (L.U.) moved the 2nd R. of the Bill and explained its provisions.—Lord Spencer (L.) said he should not oppose the Bill, but protested against it as impairing the custom of asylum which had long existed in this country.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.) Foreign Secy., defended the principle of the Bill as designed to prevent the abuse of hospitality. Poverty alone would be no bar to the admission of an alien, otherwise desirable. The chief result would be a deterrent one.—Read a second time.

July 28.

In Committee, Lord Spencer (L.) moved to relieve shipowners of the cost of providing inspection sheds.—Negatived by 60 to 15. Other amendments by Lord Coleridge (L.), Lord Davey (L.), Lord Ripon (L.), and Lord Tweedmouth (L.) were negatived, and the Bill was reported without amendment Aug. 3, and read a 3rd time Aug. 8. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap., 13 post.)

L—Army.—Lord Meath (L.U.) called attention to the military training of youths, and asked for a Committee to deal with the question.—Lord Balfour (C.) advised caution in dealing with anything which would in an indirect way lead up to conscription.—Lord Donoughmore (C.), Under Secy., said it was not proved that compulsory military training in schools was the only way to carry out the object aimed at. The War Office encouraged secondary schools by offering them facilities for musketry practice, but the result had not been satisfactory, and compulsion would not succeed unless there was a very strong public opinion in its favour.

Feb. 20.

The Duke of Bedford (L.U.) asked for information as to the intentions of the Govt.

The Duke of Bedford (L.U.) asked for information as to the intentions of the Govt. respecting the Militia and the proposed territorial regiments.—Lord Donoughmore said the Govt. had drafted a Bill authorizing Militia service abroad, but would safeguard the present rights of officers and men. In every great war the Militia had been sent abroad, and their position must be made clear. As to the regulars, the nine-years' recruiting had been satisfactory. We must look to the Volunteers, with increased efficiency and slightly reduced numbers, for home defence, and to the Militia to help abroad, when embodied.

Feb. 21.

and others spoke on the condition of the Volunteers, and urged that Mr. Arnold-Forster's scheme should be reconsidered.—Sir W. Foster (L.) said the medical equipment was still inadequate, and the safeguards against diseases insufficient.—Sir H. Seton-Karr (C.) advocated the retention of the long rifle, which would, as a rule, shoot harder and further and straighter than a short one.

Feb. 22.

Col. Welby (C.) said the country must choose between paying heavily for a voluntary Army or giving personal service.—Sir J. Colomb (C.) said it was folly to rely for the defence of the Empire on armed men who were not liable to serve abroad. -Sir H. C.-Bannerman deprecated hurried action, to which, he said, the discredited Army Corps scheme, the three-years' enlistment system, the short rifle, and the present scheme of the Govt. were due. Constant change was very costly. The nine-years' system would destroy the Reserve and be most expensive. He trusted that it was only temporary.—Sir J. Gorst (C.) entreated the Govt. to legislate for improving the health of children, so as to get capable recruits.—Mr. Arnold-Forster (L.U.), Secy. of State, denied that the Regular Army was disordered, that the Auxiliary Forces were discouraged, and that the efficiency of the Army had diminished. He claimed that something had already been done towards improving the Army, and instanced the reorganization of the War Office, the creation of the Army Council, and the increase in efficiency. On the whole, we got good value for our money, but the Estimates might be reduced by reducing the numer of men. The Reserve was not being depleted, but was increasing by leaps and bounds. The three-years' system had not failed, and the nine-years' system had been introduced as a temporary measure. There was no intention of abolishing the Militia, but only of cutting off redundant units, and to add the Militia to the Army available for active service over seas. The Volunteers fulfilled a real purpose and should be made as fit for their duties as possible, but in view of the call for economy, the Govt. could not add money to the Army Estimates for their benefit. Many improvements could be made by a moderate reduction in numbers, and the money so set free might be employed to the advantage of the force. The Volunteers ought not to be relied on to supplement the Army abroad in the event of war. On the question of artillery, other countries were not all armed with quick-firing guns, and the War Office had not been guilty of undue delay. He expected to have 126 new guns by the end of 1904-5; by July another 50, and ultimately nearly 1,000. As to the rifle, the new short rifle had been issued to several regiments and the reports were most favourable. Its universal adoption would involve very great expense, and the most exhaustive trials would be made before its general use was ordered.—Mr. Churchill (L.) said the Government had failed to grapple with the Army problem. For ten years all their demands had been granted, but we were still in difficulties.—The amendment was rejected by 254 to 207.

L—Lord Tweedmouth (L.) called attention to the new service rifle and moved a resolution against arming the whole of H.M. forces with the short rifle.—Lord Roberts said he hoped the objections raised to the short rifle would prove groundless. It was equally as good as the long rifle up to 1,000 yards; Lord Kitchener approved of it, and it was most suitable for men on horseback. He hoped that it would be further tested.—Lord Donoughmore (C.) said that experience in Somaliland was strongly in favour of the new rifle, and the Army Council wished to see it adopted.—Lord Lansdowne said the question could only be decided by experts. Further trial should be made, and if the results threw any doubt on the short rifle the department would order itself accordingly.—The motion was rejected by 55 to 22.

Feb. 23.

C-*ARMY ESTIMATES.—In Supply, a supplementary vote of £550,000 for the operations in Somaliland, and an excess expenditure of £600,000 on Army service (covered by receipts) were discussed, being explained by Mr. Bromley-Davenport (C.), Financial Secy. to the War Office, who said that every effort had been made towards The expedient of enlisting men only for nine years had so far been successful, and the difficulty of meeting the problem of the drafts for India had been thereby solved.—Mr. McKenna (L.) moved a reduction of £15,000 in the cost of the General Staff as a protest against the present condition of the War Office.—Negatived by 202 to 153.—Mr. Arnold Forster stated that the Mediterranean garrisons would be reduced, and that a system of financial control in war time had been established.—Mr. Warner (L.) moved another reduction in the expenditure on the General Staff.-Mr. Arnold-Forster said it was intended to reduce the number of generals, but the rights of present officers must be considered.—Negatived by 227 to 175.—Capt. Norton (L.) moved a reduction in the vote for regimental pay and allowances, and criticised the general system of Army administration.—Mr. Arnold-Forster deprecated a general debate pending the introduction of the Army Estimates as a whole, but explained several matters which had been alluded to.—Rejected by 221 to 190.—Mr. McKenna moved a reduction of £100 in deferred pay.—Rejected by 179 to 153.—A motion by Mr. Ll.-George (L.) to report progress led to an animated discussion between Mr. Balfour and Sir H. C.-Bannerman, each referring to the tactics of the other in preventing or forcing snap divisions.—Rejected by 191 to 167.

March 2.

Mr. Balfour stated that the Committee of Defence were of opinion that the invasion of the country in such force as to inflict a fatal blow or threaten our independence was impossible, and that the number of troops we ought to maintain dependent ou upon the consideration of the defence of these islands, but upon the needs of the Colonies and of India.

March 7.

The adjourned discussion of the Army Estimates was resumed.—Mr. Arnold-Forster stated the number of Reserves to be 80,000, and that it was expected to rise to 100,000. The present problem was how to obtain men for India; and he hoped before long to return to the system of short-service recruiting.—An amendment for a reduction, moved by Mr. Warner (L.) was negatived by 261 to 204.—Mr. C. Hobhouse (L.) moved to reduce the vote of £505,000, the cost of the Somaliland Expedition.

March 7.

Lord Percy (C.) said this vote would wind up the expenditure, the total amount of which was £2,420,000. He explained the difficulties which had been met with, but claimed that the friendly tribes had been relieved of the menace of an attack by the Mullah, and that faith had been kept with them. It had been decided to limit administrative responsibility to the coast, and to organize the natives in self-defence.—Mr. Ll.-George said the Govt. had broken all their treaties.—Mr. Arnold-Forster asserted that the same policy had been exercised in the past by this country in various parts of the world—except in the Sudan, where it ended in the tragedy of Khartum. They were committed to retaining their hold on the territory, and, no matter what Govt. was in power, that policy would have to be carried on.—After several other speeches, carrying on the discussion close up to the hour for the suspension of the sitting, the closure was moved and carried by 278 to 222. The reduction having been defeated, the vote was agreed to by 273 to 219.

March 8.

The report of the Supplementary Vote was further discussed, and Mr. Warner (L.) moved a reduction.—The policy of the Govt. in relation to Somaliland was also debated, and Lord Percy (C.) gave explanations in regard to it.—The reduction was ultimately negatived by a majority of 33, and the Report was agreed to by 231 to 203.

March 23.

Mr. Arnold-Forster, on going into Committee on the Army Estimates, explained the principles on which, in his opinion, our military organization should be based. reforms announced in 1904 had been in part carried out, but large economies could not yet be effected. The Navy, he said, was now said to be strong enough to guarantee the safety of these islands, and it justified changes in our military system, which had grown up on the basis of the defence of the country by the Army. The Committee of Defence held that an invasion inflicting a fatal blow was impossible; and the naval view was that no hostile force could land in this country as long as we held the sea. Conscription was therefore unnecessary, and no one of authority advocated it. danger of invasion was not real. The function of the Army, then, was to fight in defence of our frontiers across the sea. He believed the country could provide an adequate number of men for that purpose, and at the same time effect some economies by getting rid of what was redundant. To cut down the Line battalions would be uneconomical, and it would be better to reduce the establishment of such battalions as were not immediately required, and to form a large and growing Reserve. No change would be made in the vote for the Militia this year, but when the principle that the Army was wanted for service over-sea was adopted, the Militia must, in emergencies, go abroad; and the Govt. had introduced a Bill so to utilize them in war. But a War Minister in his treatment of the Militia had to be careful not to injure the Line, which was largely dependent upon it for recruits. It was proposed also to reduce or amalgamate inefficient Militia units. It was impossible to have at present a short-service enlistment, but hereafter there must be enlistment of that kind for the purpose of an adequate Reserve. As to the Volunteers, they were not, as at present constituted, necessary for the safety and welfare of the country, nor were they so organized as to be capable of rendering the country great service. did not propose to abolish them, but to reduce their number and increase their efficiency. A Manœuvres Bill of great importance would also be brought in. deprecated the action of Army critics who confined their scrutiny to one particular branch of the service, and failed to comprehend its essential unity. Sir H. C. Bannerman said the Secy. of State had given no assurances as to the future of the Militia and Volunteers, but appeared to shift the task of solving difficulties to his successor.—After other speeches, the House went into Committee, and the vote for 221,300 officers and men was put.

March 28.

The debate on the vote was resumed.—Major Seely (L.) moved to reduce it by 10,000 men, protesting against the reduction of the Volunteers.—Mr. Guest (L.) and others supported the amendment.—Mr. Arnold-Forster replied, repeating that in his view the Auxiliary Forces at present could not play the part of a Regular Army. Public enthusiasm in time of war was not enough, and military opinion was unanimous that we could not face a European army with men having so little training as our We should have a large reserve of trained men; and he had, therefore, proposed a minimum period of two years' Army service. He did not disparage the Volunteers, but they could not supply our needs in war. In the S. African war out of 20,000 Volunteers who offered to serve 33 per cent. were medically unfit. They could not be expected to be available for service in India or elsewhere, for the larger part of them could not leave their occupations, and a considerable number were not physically fit. The Militia should be made the basis of the short-service army at home, but he had not been allowed to carry out this plan as the House was opposed to any change in its organization. He proposed, however, to get rid of units which were inefficient and to consolidate battalions where desirable. Any economies would be devoted to giving additional training. It was not established that we were in such danger of invasion as to render it necessary to keep up a force of 630,000 men at home. He believed that the danger would never arise, and that if the Volunteers were limited to 200,000 men we should be able to repel raids successfully. The efficiency of the Volunteers could be enormously increased if their numbers were reduced.—The amendment was negatived by 258 to 207, and the vote was carried by a majority of 107.—A vote of £4,630,000 for supplies and clothing was agreed to.

On report of the vote for Army supplies, Mr. Bell and other Labour members protested against the exclusion of trade union officials from interference in trade disputes with the War Office.—A reduction of the vote was negatived by 176 to 137, and the resolution confirming the vote was carried by a majority of 52.—At 11 o'clock the closure resolution came into operation, and the report of the vote for men was agreed to after further divisions.

March 30.

On the pay vote of £10,101,000, Mr. Churchill (L.) moved a reduction of £1,000,000. He asked why, if the Govt. accepted the view as to the inviolability of these islands. we should be asked to spend so much on the Army? There had been vacillations in policy, and an increase of cost without any proportionate return. A single army based on a seven years' colour service and five years in the Reserve was the ideal to be aimed at. He deprecated the reduction of the Volunteers, but great economy could be made in administration and by reducing the numbers and units in the Regulars. The danger on the Indian frontier was probably more remote than ever .-Mr. Boscawen (C.) complained that every branch—Regulars, Yeomanry, Militia, and Volunteers—had been discouraged, and none knew what was going to happen to it.— Sir E. Grey (L.) asked why it was considered necessary to maintain so large a Regular Army, since the Govt. stated that it was not required for home defence. The Militia ought to be the basis for the home service Army, and the Volunteer strength should be kept up as a source in reserve in a great war. Only thus could the nation be saved from conscription.—Mr. Arnold-Forster said he had never promised large economies in the current year. There had been a det nt: of pressure in the East, but we must not count too much upon its permanence. The Govt. were acting in accordance with the advice and recommendation of the Govt. of India, by endeavouring to provide troops sufficient to meet an emergency. If seven years with the colours and five in the Reserve were enforced, the demands of war in India would be difficult to supply; and if the units were cut down the Reserve would be utterly inadequate. He proposed to reduce the establishments, and the cost of the existing units. The Militia were in the opinion of experts not at present able to take the field against a Regular Army. It should be recruited as a substantive force, and should serve abroad when occasion arose. He repeated that the Volunteer establishment ought to be reduced, consolidated and concentrated. Sir C. Dilke (L.) said that military opinion was against the possibility of Russia's crossing Afghanistan without a railway, and that distant probability formed no adequate basis for a demand for 300,000 troops for emergency service in India.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) said that after four years Parliament was still groping to find out what was the actual Army scheme of the Govt. The Estimates were again provisional. He objected to piecemeal dealing with the Militia, and to alter the conditions of their service without more information, and also to the creation of two armies—one for long and the other for short service. As to a long-service Army, the men would be abroad for seven or eight years, and their health would suffer. It would be a retrograde and undesirable step. The alleged dangers on the N.W. frontier of India should be met by prudent watchfulness, but the idea that we must have an Army capable of encountering the flower of foreign armies might lead the country into great misfortune.

April 3.

The vote for pay was further discussed in Supply.—Mr. Arnold-Forster defended his proposal to extend the service for part of the Army to nine years. At present, he said, batt lions were kept in India for 15 to 18 years, and the change would shorten the term. The objection on the ground of health was one which, if valid, applied at present, since 155,000 men were serving for eight years and more. He asked how the Regular Army could be reduced consistently with the needs of the Empire. A reduction of battalions meant a reduction of the Reserve, and it would be better to reduce their strength, keeping them as cadres capable of expansion for war. The Bill rendering the Militia liable for foreign service was most important, as on it the future of the force must largely depend. He believed the proposed change would be welcome to them. As to the Volunteers, if we were to rely on the Navy for home defence, if we were to fear invasion, we must have troops capable of meeting a great Continental army, and our forces should be organized on a totally different basis. Would the Opposition face this alternative? He doubted it. The debate was unreal and no practical suggestions had been made.—Major Seely (L.) moved to reduce the vote by £1,000,000, declaring that no one knew what the Govt. really intended to do. We were told that if this country lost command of the sea it must surrender to an enemy in six days.—Mr. A. Balfour denied that the Committee of Defence had ever said this, and added that the loss of command of the sea was not a contingency ever to be discussed.—After further debate the amendment was negatived by 234 to 191.

Mr. McCrae (L.) moved to reduce the vote as a protest against the contemplated reduction of the Volunteers.-Mr. A. Balfour denied that the Govt. had been unsympathetic towards the force, which they regarded as an essential part of the fighting forces of the country. If they believed, as they did, that a serious invasion was impossible, the existence of the Volunteers was essential to that belief. No multiplication of the Volunteers would justify a corresponding reduction in our regular organized units. The trained Volunteers would be able to render valuable assistance, as individuals, in the event of a great war, say, on the frontier of India. But the units into which to draft them must exist, and could not be cut down without serious danger. The Volunteers ought not to be treated in an arbitrary way, and there should be elasticity in the regulations, and the development of the force should take the form of better training in combination with other forces. The Volunteers had encouraged a military spirit, and they provided half-manufactured goods which in time of stress could be completed for war purposes. The Volunteer question, however, could not be considered apart from the Army question.—Mr. Arnold-Forster said that a reduction of the Volunteers by 15,000 men need not be detrimental to the force. Yeomanry had been reduced, and was now in a satisfactory condition. It would result in a smaller but better trained and homogeneous force. The amendment was rejected by 218 to 187, and the vote was agreed to.

On Report of the pay vote a further general discussion took place, in the course of which Mr. Bryce (L.) asked if there was any chance of Russia being able to attack the Indian frontier with a great army. He asked for fuller statement of the views of the Committee of Defence.—Mr. Arnold-Forster explained that his scheme in its main features was based on the reports of the War Commission and of the Auxiliary Forces Commission. Its principal object was to provide an adequate number of units for war and an adequate reserve. He believed there would be no difficulty in recruiting for long-service and short-service concurrently. As to the Militia no action would be taken against its wishes; but many battalions if allowed to join the short-service army would respond with alacrity. There would be a small reduction this year in the Volunteers, and the capitation grant would be re-allocated.—An amendment to reduce the vote having been negatived by a majority of 42, the closure was carried by a majority of 74, and the Report was agreed to after another division.—

The Army (Annual) Bill was discussed until 9 a.m.

April 6-7.

In a debate on the 2nd R. of a Consolidated Fund Bill, Mr. E. Robertson (L.) complained that money voted for the Civil Services had been spent on the Army.—Mr. A. Chamberlain (L U.) in reply said that precedent had not been departed from.—Mr. Arnold-Forster, in reply to criticisms on the War Office, said there was no difficulty in obtaining recruits, and that since October, 1904, no less than 16,000 long-service recruits had enlisted. The supply of officers was adequate except for the Cavalry and the Guards, which he much regretted. Considerable efforts were being made to provide exsoldiers with employment. As to the financial arrangements in the field, the War Office was building up an improved system, and he appealed to members not to use hard words in regard to the Army. Charges of wide-spread corruption, in the existence of which he did not believe, would only discourage officers.—An amendment was rejected by 126 to 89, and the Bill was read a second time.

June 23.

L—The Duke of Bedford (L.U.) called attention to the present condition of the Militia, and suggested that the Govt should use the agency of the lords lieutenant in recruiting and selecting officers.—Lord Roberts supported the suggestion, as many Militia officers were not fit for active service; and a large reserve of officers was badly wanted.—Other peers having spoken, Lord Donoughmore (C.), Under Secy., replied that the supply of officers for the Army was in excess of the demand, except in the Cavalry. The Govt. were opposed to having two systems of recruiting, one for the Army and one for the Militia, as the class of recruits obtained was identical. They hoped before long to have a final scheme of organization which would improve the Auxiliary Forces.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.) added that as the lords lieutenant were constitutionally connected with the Militia, there was no reason why their aid might not be usefully invoked.

July 4.

Lord Wemyss (C.) moved a resolution in favour of keeping our land forces at all times in such strength that no other nation would ever attempt a hostile landing.— Lord Roberts said that five years had passed since the war, and the lessons of S. Africa had been forgotten, so that we were absolutely as unfitted and unprepared for war as we were then. The people forgot that it was no longer a kingdom that had to be defended, but an Empire: and the Army was looked upon as something outside their national life. A large standing Army was not required, but the Army must be voluntary; but behind it there must be a reserve large enough for all requirements. To this reserve attention must be chiefly paid; and the people must say how it was to be created, whether by conscription or the system of universal training.—Lord Goschen (C.) referring to Mr. Balfour's denial of possibility of invasion said the unforeseen often destroyed the forecasts of the greatest experts. The idea of invasion created the Volunteer force; and they ought not to be in any way discouraged.—Lord Lansdowne justified the publication of some of the proceedings of the Defence Committee. The Govt., he said, had never held for one moment that the Navy and the Navy alone was sufficient for home defence. For defence on land they had the Regular Army, the Militia, and the Volunteers, who would each be able to give a good account of themselves. The Navy and Army were one, and no invader would leave either out of account. The motion was agreed to. July 10.

6-*In Supply, on the Volunteer vote, Mr. McCrae (L.) called attention to the circulars recently issued by the War Office, respecting the division of regiments into the fit and the unfit, which, he said, was grossly insulting to the Volunteers and shewed a desire to break up the force in order to pave the way for conscription. He moved to reduce the vote.—Sir H. Vincent (C.) also protested against the circular, which would cause much trouble and expense, and urged its withdrawal.—The action of the War Office was criticised severely by other members from both sides of the House.—Mr. Arnold-Forster defended the issue of the circular. If the Volunteers were to be relied upon in emergency, we ought to know how many were fit for active service abroad. In some battalions many men were enrolled who ought not to be, and men were accepted simply for financial reasons. If Parliament was determined to reduce the Army Estimates, inefficient Volunteers ought to be removed; and the money used to make the remainder more efficient. The new camp regulations had not caused men to leave the force in large numbers. The capitation grant was to be revised, and the expenses of officers reduced. The Army Council had no undisclosed motive in issuing the He also repeated that he was opposed to conscription. There was no intention to make any reduction below 180,000.—The amendment was negatived by 232 to 206.—Mr. Arnold-Forster, on the War Office vote, made a general statement explaining the changes made in the Army since he took office. Recruiting was now satisfactory, and the nine years' period had been successful. Since October, 1904, 17,000 long-service recruits had joined. The recent statement by Lord Roberts required some modification, as there had been great improvements in the personnel and organization of the Army. Before the end of the year 388 new guns would have been completed. The reserve of stores was larger than ever before. The Reserve had risen from 66,000 to 91,485. The Yeomanry had been put on a sound footing, and the financial branches of the Army reformed. Lord Roberts' speech was partly due to his idea that conscription was the only possibly remedy. But that system was unsuited to our needs. The country required a long-service army and a short-service army, and he hoped the Militia would be the nucleus for home service.—Mr. Warner (L.) moved a reduction, which was rejected by 169 to 132.

L-Lord Wenlock (L.U.) moved for papers respecting the training of the Imperial Yeomanry, and urged the settlement of an adequate scheme of organization.—Lord Donoughmore replied that such a scheme had been worked out, but details could not be given. Real progress had been made as to the supply of horses, and as to the July 17. purchase of stores.

Lord Tweedmouth (L.) called attention to the deficiency of officers and moved a resolution that the supply, training, and conditions of service of officers in all branches required the instant attention of the Govt.-Lord Lovat (L U) said there was a shortage of 10,000 officers, including the Auxiliary Forces.—Lord Erroll (L.U.) complained that cavalry officers were overworked and underpaid.—Lord Donoughmore said the question was constantly under view at the War Office. The shortage in the Auxiliary Forces was 25 per cent., and was a most serious problem. It was proposed, as far as possible, to meet the difficulty by reducing officers' expenses, so that no man should be out The relative shortage in the Regulars was not of pocket by serving his country. so great, but the case of the cavalry was serious. A committee was considering this subject. The accommodation at Sandhurst would be increased at a cost of about £300,000.—After further debate the July 25. resolution was agreed to.

L-*MILITARY MANGUVRES BILL.—The Earl of Donoughmore (C.), Secy., moved the 2nd R. of the Bill to modify the Act of 1897, by reducing the period of notice to be given to local authorities, and to provide for the closing of roads for two hours.—Agreed to. March 2.

The Bill passed through Committee, a motion to extend the period of notice to March 9.

six months being rejected by 60 to 37.

The Bill was read a third time, March 17, but was subsequently withdrawn in the House of Commons.

-*MILITIA BILL.-Lord Donoughmore (C.), Under Secy., moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to empower the Secy. of State to employ the Militia abroad in time of war, while safeguarding the rights of present Militiamen. He said he believed the change would be accepted by the Militia, and would greatly obviate the difficulty of obtaining officers for the force.—Lord Wemyss (C.) moved the rejection of the Bill as effecting a revolution in the constitutional character of the force.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.). Foreign Secy., defended the Bill on the ground that this country needed a very large The growth of naval army for service abroad, but not another for home service only. and military expenditure was a serious menace to the financial stability of the country. and any arrest of expenditure must be made in the army for home defence. was a sentimental objection to merging the Militia in the short service army; and therefore, the Govt. proposed to retain its identity and to provide that it should be so trained and equipped as to be able on emergency to serve abroad. If the Bill passed, it would be still possible to raise a territorial militia by the ballot.—Lord Raglan (C.) contended that the Bill would be acceptable to the officers and men of the Militia. Lord Spencer (L.) said the Bill did nothing to improve the training of the officers. and men of the Militia.—The rejection of the Bill was negatived by 69 to 21, and the Bill was read a second time.

The Bill subsequently passed the remaining stages unopposed, but was withdrawn in the House of Commons.

L-Australia, West.--The Abp. of Canterbury called attention to the report of the Royal Commission on the treatment of natives in parts of West Australia, where. he said, their condition amounted practically to slavery. He said it was almost incredible that such a state of things could exist under the British Flag.—Lord Tennyson (L.U.) said he was informed that the Colonial authorities would adopt immediately the reforms suggested in the report.—The Duke of Marlborough (C.), Under Secy., admitted that many irregularities had been committed, and that the Colonial Govt. ought to take immediate steps to mitigate and remove the disabilities under which the natives suffered. They were ready to legislate at once and reforms would be carried out generally.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.), Foreign Secy., said the report had raised a feeling of humiliation. The inquiry was due to the initiative of the Colony, and legislation would be at once introduced. May 9.

L-Betting Bill.-Lord Davey (L.) moved the 2nd R. of the Street Betting Bill, the object of which was to suppress betting in streets and other public places and to increase the penalties. - Agreed to.

The Bill was reported, as amended, the Lord Chancellor intimating that he might March 16.

move its rejection on the third reading.

The Bill, with some amendments, passed its third reading, April 4, but proceeded no further in the House of Commons.

- C—Board of Trade.—Mr. Soares (L.) moved the adjournment to call attention to the appointment of Lord Salisbury to be President of the Board of Trade, on the ground that the President ought to be in the House of Commons.—Mr. A. Balfour defended the appointment as it had always been considered that the House of Lords had a claim to a fair proportion of the great offices of State, as an essential part of the Constitution. Every year some new duty was thrown on the Board of Trade, and the President found it more and more difficult to do his work as a member of the House of Commons. The President need not necessarily have a business training. -The motion was rejected by 239 to 167.
- C-Business, Public.-Mr. A. Balfour moved a resolution to expedite Supply business by applying the closure at a stated time, so that the financial business might be finished by March 31. He admitted that the motion was a novelty; it was necessary that the House might fulfil legal financial obligations. It was an alternative to all-night sittings, which did not tend to increase the reputation of Parliament.—Mr. Asquith (I.) moved the adjournment of the debate, and described the motion as an encroachment upon the powers and liberties of the House, and not justified by any obstruction.—The adjournment was negatived by 266 to 206.—Mr. J. Redmond (N.) moved an amendment negativing the resolution as violating the rights of the House.— After debate, the closure was carried by 249 to 213, and the amendment was negatived by a majority of 40. March 15.

Resolutions giving precedence to the motion for closure of Supply and suspending the 12 o'clock rule were carried, on divisions, by majorities of 85 and 86.—Various modifying amendments were moved and rejected, and ultimately the resolution was March 16.

L-Lord Newton (C.) moved a resolution in favour of a joint committee to consider the advisability of dividing the Session into two halves.—Lord Lansdowne said the proposal involved both Houses, and there was no probability of its succeeding during the present Session. He suggested that a committer should be appointed on Bills, so as to secure time for their consideration.—The motion was rejected by 68 to 8.— Lord James (L.U.) then moved a resolution that the House should refuse to consider any Bill unless sufficient time were given for due deliberation thereon.—Lord Rosebery (L.) said that the present system had been continued for ten years under a Conservative Govt. and at last the rights of the House were being recognised.—Motion agreed to. April 5.

C—Mr. Balfour moved to give precedence for Government business for the remainder of the Session.—Carried after closure by 223 to 119. July 31.

- L-Lord James (L.U.) protested against the neglect in the House of Commons of Bills sent to them from the House of Lords.-Lord Lansdowne agreed that the matter demanded consideration by both Houses. Aug. 7. See also under ALIENS BILL. July 5.
- -Church of England-Convocation Bill.—The Abp. of Canterbury moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to declare the law in regard to the reform of the Convocations of Canterbury and York and to make provision for joint sittings.—Lord Spencer (L.) said the Bill involved a very serious constitutional innovation, and moved its rejection. -After debate, the further consideration of the Bill was postponed. July 14.
- L.—Committees. Chairman of.—Lord Lansdowne moved the appointment of the Earl of Onslow as Chairman of all Committees of the House for the Session, in the room of Lord Morley, resigned owing to ill-health. He said that Lord Onslow would no longer retain his post in the Govt.—Agreed to.
- C-Cotton-Growing.-Sir W. Tomlinson (C.) called attention to the subject of cotton-growing in the Colonies, dependencies and protectorates, and moved a resolution expressing appreciation of the encouragement given by the Govt. to the British Cottongrowing Association, and a desire that it should be continued.—Mr. Shackleton (Lab.) seconded the motion, and a discussion followed.—Mr. Lyttleton (L.U.), Colonial Secy., said that at present the Treasury could not give a large grant but a good deal had been done to encourage the Association.—The motion was agreed to unanimously. April 5.

-*Defence, Imperial.—Mr. Balfour, in Supply, on the Treasury vote, explained the views held by the Committee of Imperial Defence, first describing the functions of the committee, which, he said, was not an executive, but a consultative body, not designed to supervise the Admiralty and the War Office, but to deal with questions common to both, and to preserve the records for the guidance of future Governments. He hoped that in time to come the Colonies would bring before it matters in which they were interested, and would send representatives to it. In regard to defence the committee had advised the abandonment of the defence of our ports by submarine mines (other than blockade mines). Home defence being the central problem which had to be faced, the committee had presented a concrete problem for discussion by their expert advisers. They assumed that the Regular Army was absent on some over-sea expedition and that our organized fleets had wandered away into some unknown ocean, and they asked what was the smallest number of men with which a foreign country might contemplate the invasion of our shores, in view of the difficulty of transport. Lord Roberts' view, which was accepted by other experts, was that it would not be possible to attempt an invasion with fewer than 70,000 men, and that to attempt to take London with such a force would be a forlorn hope. The great scientific changes of the last century were all in favour of the defence, and they included the use of steam, wireless telegraphy, the submarine boat, and the torpedo. By way of a merely supposititious case, he assumed a potential invasion by France, and showed the difficulties of transporting 70,000 men from Brest or Cherbourg, and the obstacles to disembarcation, when the helpless mass of transports would be at the mercy of our torpedo-boats and submarines. A successful invasion was not to be considered On the question of Colonial defence the Fleet and Army ought to be available in all parts of the world, but they should be concentrated at the centre and be distributed as occasion arose. As to the defence of India, the steady progress of Russia towards Afghanistan and the construction of railways could only be regarded as strategic, and though he did not consider that war with Russia on the N.W. Frontier was at all probable, these factors had altered the position considerably. While anything in the nature of a surprise or rush was impossible, war with Russia would be chiefly a problem of transport and supply. Lord Kitchener thought that in case of war we ought to be able to send out, in addition to drafts, eight divisions of infantry. We must not allow anything to be done which would facilitate hostile transport. If any attempt should be made to construct a railway in Afghanistan in connexion with the Russian strategic railways, it ought to be regarded as an act of direct aggression. He had no ground for believing that the Russian Government intended so to act, but if railways in Afghanistan were only allowed to be made in time of war, not in time of peace, it would be within our military power—without conscription—to make India absolutely secure. But if through blindness or cowardice we were to allow Afghanistan to be slowly absorbed, and strategic frontier railways to be built, we should have to pay the penalty, and keep on foot a much larger Army.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman described Mr. Balfour's speech as reassuring and hoped it would result in a reduction of military expenditure. The picture of an attempted invasion by France, would not, he hoped be turned to mischievous uses. The view of the question of the invasion of India appeared to him to be reasonable and moderate.—Sir C. Dilke (L.) moved to reduce the vote as a protest against the waste of money which had been caused by obstinate adherence to ideas now abandoned.—Mr. Bryce (L.) pressed for a reduction of expenditure on strategic railways in India.—Sir C. Dilke's amendment having lapsed, Major Seely (L.) moved to reduce the vote.—Mr. Balfour, in reply to criticisms, said that the past naval and military policy ought not to be condemned because it was not continuous, because the conditions affecting naval warfare changed from time to time. The hope that an enormous reduction of the Army would be possible would certainly not be fulfilled. The Indian problem was a grave one and a war there would May 11. strain all our resources in its early stage.

Mr. Balfour further explained that persons who were not Privy Councillors could take part in the Committee's proceedings; and no formal pledge of secrecy was exacted from them, but documents were strictly confidential. The true style of the Committee was the Council of Imperial Defence.

May 17.

L—Education.—Lord Londonderry (C.), Pres. of the Bd. of Education, said the department considered it necessary to abolish probationary pupil-teachers and to endeavour to get a higher class of teachers.

March 9.

6—Dr. Macnamara (L.) called attention to the recommendations of the Physical Deterioration Committee, and expressed regret that so little had been done to carry out their suggestions as to underfed school children.—Sir J. Gorst (C.) complained of the neglect with which the report had been treated.—Mr. Long (C.), Pres. Local

Govt. Bd., said they had applied to the local authorities, and if there was anything they could do to further improve the health of the people they would do it. March 22.

On the 2nd R. of a Consolidated Fund Bill, Mr. K. Hardie (Soc.) moved the rejection of the Bill, and called attention to the subject of underfed children in elementary schools. -Dr. Macnamara said that about a million children suffered from malnutrition and in winter went to school faint and hungry.—Sir J. Gorst hoped that relieving officers would be told that hungry children had a right to immediate relief .- Sir W. Foster (L.) suggested that local education authorities and boards of guardians should have more freedom of action.—Sir W. Anson (L.U.), Secy. to the Bd. of Education, said the problem could not be disposed of by merely providing meals for children at school, for many had been badly fed from infancy. He would ascertain whether it was possible through the Poor Law authorities to secure that children should not be neglected by their parents in the poorer districts of the large towns. It would be hard on the poor who paid rates to make them provide meals for those only slightly poorer than themselves. If the country were to give free meals a demand would come for clothes and boots. He hoped the House would not take any rash action but trust to administrative efforts and organization by the local authorities, aided by voluntary effort.—The motion was negatived by 215 to 159, and subsequently the 2nd R. was carried by 217 to 172. March 27.

Mr. Slack (L.) again called attention to the subject, and moved a resolution to empower local education authorities to provide children with proper nourishment before giving mental or physical instruction, recovering the cost, where expedient, from the parents or guardians.—Sir G. Bartley (C.) moved to make the Poor Law authorities responsible.—Mr. K. Hardie (Soc.) argued against attaching any taint of pauperism to those who received this assistance.—Sir J. Gorst said it would be best that the education authorities should have power to feed the children and recover the cost.— Sir W. Anson said that the Committee had reported that the race was not degenerating, but improving in physique, and while not denying the necessity for relief in certain cases, he said there were exaggerated statements as to under-feeding. The Poor Law should provide meals for the children of neglectful parents, and organized charity should provide for those of parents suffering from temporary misfortune. The Local Govt. Bd. had informed the guardians to that effect and it was hoped by these means to meet the cases of children who came to school hungry, but the class of children who had been badly housed, clothed, and fed since infancy would not be helped by it. Women inspectors had been appointed to inquire into the condition of infant schools, and the education authorities might provide special schools for children whose antecedents unfitted them for ordinary school work.--The amendment was negatived by 100 to 64.—The closure was then voted by a majority, but as the "Ayes" numbered April 18. less than 100 the main question could not be put.

The subject of the East Ham schools was discussed.

April 19.

Mr. Gray (C.) moved the adjournment to call attention to the intention of the East Ham Council to discontinue administering the Education Act, whereby 25,000 children would be deprived of education and a large number of officials would lose their employment. The education rate amounted to 2s. 9d. in the £1, and new schools were needed at a cost of a further 9d. The Council held that education was a national obligation, and asked that the burden should be borne by the State. They had adopted an unconstitutional course to rivet attention on its grievance. He appealed to the Govt. to re-enact the Necessitous School Boards Act of 1897.—Mr. Cripps (C.) said that under the Act of 1902, poor, necessitous districts were placed at a disadvantage, and that the Govt. should distribute fairly the burden of the cost of education.-Dr. Macnamara said the difficulties in poor districts were largely due to the way in which the Education Act was drafted. Necessitous areas ought to be assisted further. -Mr. A. Balfour said the Govt. could not recognize the validity of the claim. Necessitous districts were in no worse position under the Act of 1902. Special circumstances accounted for the high rates in East Ham. As facilities of transit increased, the rating question in such districts would present great difficulties, but the local authorities must fulfil their duties. The State contributed over 60 per cent. of the cost of education, and it would not be safe to go much beyond, as all inducement to economy would be swept away. The East Ham authorities had built schools costing £18 per child, when elsewhere the cost was only £12 10s. An education authority ought not to exceed its means and then call upon the State for assistance. The illegal policy threatened would raise issues going to the very root of the system of public and local taxation, and the Govt. could not, in obedience to threats, promise to deal with this matter except as part of a well-considered scheme of reform. He sympathized with the ratepayers, but there was no justification for the abandonment of public duties.—The motion was rejected by 159 to 116.

May 4.

Mr. O. Williams (L.) moved the adjournment to call attention to the action of the Bd. of Education in declaring Merionethshire in default under the Defaulting Authorities Act. He disputed the right of the Board to withhold grants, and argued that the failure of the managers of non-provided schools to repair the schools relieved the authority from the obligation to maintain them.—Sir W. Anson said the Board had not acted precipitately. The question of repairs was not given in 1904 by the local authority as a reason for refusing to maintain the schools. The local voluntary schools, two only excepted, were efficient, while many provided schools in Wales were out of repair. The Merionethshire County Council refused to say whether they would maintain the schools if they had been in perfect repair, so that this was an unworthy pretext to avoid carrying out their obligations.—The motion was rejected by 211 to 113.

L—Lord Kinnaird (L.U.) called attention to the unnecessary abolition of fees in voluntary schools in London.—Lord Londonderry said the County Council had acted within their powers, but he doubted the wisdom of the change.

May 30.

6—In Supply, on the vote for the Local Govt. Bd., Mr. Crooks (Lab.) discussed the circular directing Poor Law guardians to provide for the wants of underfed school children, which he held to be far too limited in scope.—Sir J. Gorst said the next thing to be done was to secure that school children should have proper medical attendance.—Mr. G. Balfour said that nothing more could be done without legislation. June 1.

L—CONTINUATION SCHOOLS BILL.—The Bp. of Hereford moved the 2nd R. of a Continuation Schools Bill, which proposed to confer power on local education authorities to compel boys and girls, exempt from attendance in elementary schools, to attend a continuation school.—Lord Londonderry objected to apply the principle of compulsion to children over school age—Second reading negatived by 16 to 14. April 7.

C-Finance.—In the debate on the Address, Mr. Buchanan (L). moved an amendment in favour of revising and reducing the national expenditure at the earliest possible moment. He charged the Govt. with having, by their taxation, caused distress; with laxity in finance; and with having piled up debt recklessly.—Mr. Guest (L.) seconded. He said the annual expenditure had risen in 10 years from 107 to 176 millions, and that in the same period the debt had enormously increased.—Sir E. Vincent (C.) said the Govt. had acted as the exponents of popular opinion. The conditions on which sound finance should be based were the presentation of clear accounts and a careful revision of estimates so as to prevent redundant and useless e :penditure.—Sir R. Reid (L.) suggested a special committee on the Estimates and complained of the increase in naval and military expenditure. The proposed sale of 120 ships, including some built quite recently, gave evidence of wasteful outlay. The Colonies ought to provide for their own defence.—Mr. T. Bowles (C.) said the Govt. were hopeless spendthrifts, unable to appreciate the value of money. From 10 to 15 millions could be saved on the Army, and the Civil Service offered a vast field for economy. The Transvaal war contribution had not been secured and its payment ought to be an absolute certainty.—Mr. A. Chamberlain (L.U.), Chan. of Exchr., declined to anticipate his Budget statement, but admitted that the rate of taxation and the smallness of the reserves available for a great emergency were good reasons for considering our fiscal position carefully, and for seeking new sources of revenue. A great deal of the increased expenditure was the result of the war, which disclosed defects in organization for defence, which had been removed. In many directions it grew automatically; e.g., the Education Vote and the Post Office. Any reduction in expenditure that could be made safely was desirable, but demands came from all parts of the House for further outlay. Much of the expenditure was due too, to the disregard by the Liberals of their obligations, and failure to supply the country's needs. He agreed that capital expenditure under Naval and Military Works Bills ought not to form a permanent part of our annual system. There were objections to submitting the Estimates to a special committee, but time might be given for discussion of the reports of the Public Accounts Committee.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) argued that the power of the House over the Estimates had been decreased by the new rules regulating Supply. But the real cause of the growth of our expenditure was policy, and until that policy was changed there was no hope of any substantial reduction.—The amendment was rejected by 250 to 201. March 1.

*On the 2nd R. of a Consolidated Fund Bill Mr. E. Robertson (L.) said that for many weeks to come the needs of the Army were to be provided for out of funds voted for the Civil Services.—Mr. A. Chamberlain justified the policy of temporarily applying money to purposes other than those for which it had been nominally voted.

*Budger.—A motion to suspend the 12 o'clock rule having been carried by 235 to 181, Mr. A. Chamberlain made the annual statement. The national finances, he said, were more favourable than they were in 1904, but the year had been one of varying fortunes: the depression which began in 1901 was, he hoped, decreasing, but there had been a marked increase in pauperism and distress in the winter. The revenue realized was £143,370,000, closely approximating to the Estimates. Beer, tea, wine and spirits fell short of the estimate, while sugar, tobacco and coal were in excess. The most serious fall was under the head of foreign spirits. The continuous decline of the revenue from alcohol was largely attributable to a change in the habits of the mass of the people, who were discovering other places than public-houses in which to spend their leisure. Theatres, music-halls, and cheap excursions absorbed much of the money that used to be spent on drink. This change might have the effect of relieving certain classes from paying their fair share of the public burden, and might render it necessary to change the system of taxation. As regards direct taxation the death duties brought in less than he anticipated; stamps, land tax, and house duty, an The income-tax yielded £1,250,000 above the estimate, without any extra exertions to collect the tax. Turning to the expenditure, the actual issues amounted to £141,956,000, so that the year closed with a realized surplus of £1,414,000, which would be used to strengthen the Exchequer balances. The debt on March 31, 1904, was £762,630,000, and that had been reduced to £755,072,000. In regard to 1905-6 the estimated expenditure chargeable to revenue was £141,032,000. The total revenue was put at £144,004,000, leaving a surplus of £2,972,000. The first purpose to which it should be allocated was the reduction of the National Debt. He intended to issue Exchequer bonds up to £10,000,000, one-tenth of which would be drawn and repaid in each year. He proposed to increase the Sinking Fund by £1,000,000 a year, so that it would stand at £28,000,000. There would then be £1,972,000 available for the reduction of taxation. He was not able to offer any relief in the income-tax. The rate was higher than it ought to be, in peace, and left the country with too small a reserve in case of war. He had not a sufficient surplus, however, to give the pavers of this tax any relief. The tea duty stood higher than during the war, and he proposed to take off, as from July 1, the additional twopence per pound which was imposed The cost of this concession would be £1,550,000. This final balance-sheet put the total revenue at £142,454,000, and the total expenditure at £142,032,000, leaving an estimated surplus of £422,000 for contingencies.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) congratulated Mr. Chamberlain on his proposals to strengthen the Sinking Fund and to reduce the tea duty, but condemned the extravagant Estimates, which withheld further relief from the public. In the discussion which followed, many members approved the Sinking Fund proposals, and generally the Budget as a whole.—Mr. A. Chamberlain explained his proposals in greater detail, and resolutions sanctioning the new Exchequer Bonds, the increase of the Sinking Fund, and the Customs and Excise duties on tobacco, beer, and spirits, were passed after divisions.

The general discussion of the Budget was resumed:—On the resolution reducing the tea duty to 6d. on July 1., Mr. A. Chamberlain denied that the indirect taxpayer bore an undue porportion of the national burdens. The distinction between them and direct taxpayers was wholly artificial, for every direct taxpayer paid indirect taxes as well as income-tax. As to a reduction of expenditure, he should not sanction any increased expenditure on the Army and Navy which he deemed unnecessary. The provision for the extinction of the Debt this year was adequate.—Mr. Broadhurst (L.) moved to reduce the tea duty to 4d. per lb.—Rejected by 249 to 184.—Mr. Cawley (L.) proposed to abolish the sugar duty, as the conditions under which it was imposed had been modified by the Brussels Convention.—Mr. A. Chamberlain maintained that the export confectionery trade did not suffer by the duty, as a draw-back was allowed; and that home trade had no real grievance, as imports had to pay the duty.—The duty was agreed to by 247 to 168.

April 11.

On the income-tax resolution at 1s. in the pound, Mr. McKenna (L.) moved to substitute 11d. so as to compel the Govt. to reduce their extravagant Army expenditure.

—Sir H. Fowler (L.) said that taxation now amounted to 154 millions, which was more than the country could afford to pay in peace time. There ought to be a reduction of military expenditure and of the income-tax.—Mr. A. Chamberlain said he agreed that an income-tax of 1s. or 11d. ought not to be permanent and that it had first claim to relief, when relief should be possible. But in view of the increased provision this year for the Debt, the amount at disposal was insufficient to reduce the tax. The increase in the Army Estimates was due to the need for rearming the artillery, which the Opposition would not oppose. Taxation was, no doubt, high; but the country was not unable to bear it, though it might be redistributed so as to make it less burdensome.—Amendment negatived by 219 to 166.—The grievances of the payers of income-tax were discussed by Mr. McCrae, Sir G. Bartley, Mr. E. Robertson, Sir J. Rolleston, and other members.—Mr. A. Chamberlain, replying to comments on the incidence of the income-tax, declared that differentiation between different classes of incomes was impracticable, and would impair it fatally as a means of revenue. As to graduation, it would need special measures for assessment, and more than double the cost of collection, besides causing great annoyance and irritation.—Sir R. Reid (L.) pressed at least for an inquiry.—The resolution was agreed to.

April 12.

*On Report of the resolution authorizing the issue of new Exchequer Bonds, Mr. Ritchie (C.) approved of the plan, and as to the payments from the Transvaal on account of the war contribution, he had been confident that the revenue of the colony would be realized, but the money had not been forthcoming. It would be monstrous to exact a large payment annually when the finances of the colony were barely sufficient to meet its ordinary expenditure.—Mr. Buxton (L.) described the new Exchequer Bonds as practically "lottery" bonds.-Mr. A. Chamberlain said that he proposed to devote a million a year to redeeming the debt, but it was not in lieu of the Transvaal war contribution. The colony would be expected to discharge their obligation voluntarily when representative institutions were established and prosperity returned, As to the Exchequer Bonds, the system of drawing was familiar to financiers and it reduced the element of speculation to a minimum.—Mr. Dillon (N.) suggested that the claim on the Transvaal should be foregone voluntarily instead of after public agitation.— Sir R. Reid (L) said the Transvaal Legislative Assembly could not be expected to vote the money, and the financial arrangements of this country were being disturbed by the non-payment of the 30 millions. Our extravagant expenditure would seriously damage the credit of the country.—Sir M. Hicks Beach (C.) said that when in office he had never held out hope that a war contribution could be exacted from the Transvaal unless it could be got out of the mines. The moment had not come when the mines could pay; but any large revenue from mining rights should be devoted to this Debt ...-The resolution was confirmed by 191 to 102, and the other outstanding resolutions were agreed to.

*FINANCE BILL.—On the 2nd R. of this Bill, Mr. Clancy (N.) called attention to the financial relations between Great Britain and Ireland, and moved an amendment condemning the financial treatment of Ireland.—Mr. Elliot (L.U.) argued that this subject ought not to be regarded geographically. An Irishman paid in taxation £2 4s., while an Englishman paid £3 12s. If the report of the Commission were acted on now Ireland would contribute nothing to Imperial expenditure.—Sir J. Gorst (C.) maintained that it was a class grievance. Indirect taxation as a whole ought to be greatly reduced.— Mr. MacNeilt (N.) said that British administration of Ireland was a gigantic financial swindle.—Mr. A. Chamberlain said that taxation bore heavily on Ireland because whisky was the national beverage, and the duty upon it reminded the Nationalist members that the duty was imposed for fiscal, social and moral reasons. The tax-paying capacity of Ireland compared with Great Britain was in the proportion of 1 to 20, but Ireland's present contribution towards Imperial expenditure was 1-45th. In 1893-4 it was 1-30th. Considerable economies might be made in Irish administration and he would consider whether a portion of any money saved ought not to be devoted to Irish purposes. He strongly opposed any system of separate national finance.—Mr. Dillon (N.) said the population of Ireland was withering away as if stricken by pestilence, one reason being that the people were leaving the country to escape from the burdens of the financial system.—The amendment was rejected by 238 to 155. May 15.

Mr. V. Cavendish (L.U.), Secy. to Treasury, dealing with Civil expenditure only, showed that the increase in ten years had been £21,500,000. Of this sum £3,000,000 went for the Debt; £9,000,000 to the Civil Service, including Education; £6,000,000 to the Postal and Revenue Departments; and £3,500,000 to localities. Civil expenditure would increase with the population, and the House was constantly urging the Departments to extend their operations. The expenditure on Protectorates would decline as they became self-supporting.—Sir J. Gorst (C.) said he was not able to reconcile Mr. Balfour's speech on Imperial Defence (see May 11) with the large financial demands of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. - Lord G. Hamilton (C.), referring to Mr. Balfour's speech on the Defences, said that his views had long been held by the Admiralty and the Indian Govt. as against those of the War Office. The Army Estimates should accord with the new policy, and he advocated economy. He gave it as his opinion that there was now no efficient instrument for supervising and checking publicexpenditure; and he suggested a Cabinet Finance Committee on the lines of the Defence Committee.—Mr. A. Chamberlain repeated that the increased Army Estimates were due to the rearmament of the artillery. Mr. Balfour's speech did not contemplate any great reducion of our military forces, which could not be improvised in haste. A Finance Committee would not give the Chancellor of the Exchequer any greater control over finance than at present.—The 2nd R. was carried by 155 to 99.

May 16.

In Committee on Cl. 1 (tea duty), Mr. Flynn (N.) moved to relieve Ireland from the duty.—Mr. A. Chamberlain refused to agree to separate taxation. No man should pay less merely because he lived in Ireland, where taxation pressed more lightly, than elsewhere.—Negatived by 234 to 110.

May 22.

Mr. Soares (L.) moved to reduce the tea duty to 4d., but Mr. A. Chamberlain replied that he could not afford the remission.—Negatived by 217 to 157. The clause was carried by a majority of 58.—On Cl. 2 (Customs duties on tobacco, beer, and spirits), Mr. Flynn (N.) moved to exempt Ireland from the duty on unmanufactured tobacco. The amendment was negatived.—Mr. Lough (L.) moved to omit the clause on the ground that it was war taxation.—The clause was carried by 237 to 160.—On CL 3 (Excise duties on beer and spirits), Mr. Flynn moved that Irish whisky should be treated preferentially.—Negatived by a majority of 210.—On Cl. 6 (income-tax), Mr. Flynn moved to exempt Ireland.—Negatived by 162 to 64.—Mr. H. Lewis (L.) moved an amendment providing for a graduated tax; incomes below £5,000 being taxed at 10d. in the £, and larger incomes at higher rates.—Mr. A. Chamberlain said it was important to maintain the system of collecting the tax at its source, and graduation would destroy it while incurring opportunities for evasion and fraud. All his predecessors agreed that the plan proposed was not feasible, and that it would institute an inquisition into private affairs and cause many to remove their property abroad. An income-tax of 1s. in time of peace was too high, and he desired to lower it as soon as that could be done.—The amendment was rejected by 188 to 136. Cl. 6 was agreed to. May 23.

On Cl. 7 (Exchequer Bonds), Mr. McCrae (L.) objected to what he called a lottery system.—Amendment to omit the provision was rejected by 205 to 170.—Mr. McKenna (L) proposed to raise the permanent annual charge for the Debt to 29 millions, out of the proceeds of the Estate Duty.—Mr. Dillon (N.) raised the question of the Transyaal war contribution of £30,000,000.—Mr. Ritchie (C.) said that when in office he had every reason to expect that the money would be received. He recognized that he had been too optimistic. But he still thought that the future of the Transvaal would be one of boundless prosperity, and that the colony would not repudiate its obligation. Mr. Emmott (L.) complained that Mr. J. Chamberlain had misled the Govt. by his invincible optimism.—Mr. A. Chamberlain said he had no doubt that there was a properous future before the Transvaal, and that the colony would be able easily to fulfil its obligation.—The amendment was negatived by 226 to 181.—Mr. J. Chamberlain stated that he did not withdraw anything he had said on this subject; but his anticipations had been too sanguine. The representatives of the gold industry were bound in honour to do all in their power to carry out the agreement, and he believed they would abide by their undertaking. As yet the circumstances of the country had not been favourable to the issue of the loan, but the industries were improving, and probably next year sufficient revenue to pay the interest on the first instalment would be avail-He believed in the honour of those with whom he had dealt in S. Africa. The clause was carried by 201 to 162. May 24.

Mr. J. Walton (L.) moved a new clause to reduce the coal duty from 1s. to 1d., arguing that the duty affected our competitive power and restricted trade.—Mr. Johnson (Lab.) said the duty accounted largely for the reduction in miners' wages.— Other members having spoken, Mr. A. Chamberlain said the duty had not reduced the output of coal, which was greater in 1904 than in 1903, though lower prices had prevailed, which accounted for lower wages. The wages paid in 1900 were abnormal and could not continue. At present he could not remit the duty and give up £2,000,000 a year, for which, under our present fiscal conditions, there was no satisfactory substitute. At the same time, the effect of the duty would be carefully watched.—The clause was rejected by 200 to 167.—Mr. Robson (L.) moved a clause for the repeal of the duty on stripped tobacco, the importation of which had almost ceased, and the revenue was not benefited.—Mr. A. Chamberlain disputed this statement, as £400,000 had been received as the yield of the duty in 12 months. There had been a falling off in import, but it had been so in 1903 when there was no duty.—The clause was rejected by 137 to 109.

Mr. McArthur (L.) moved to reduce the duty on stripped tobacco by one half.— Mr. Ritchie (C.) suggested a committee on the subject.—Mr. A. Chamberlain said the effect of the duty would be closely watched, and if necessary, the duty might be modified, but that it could not be done this year without disturbing trade.—Motion rejected by 221 to 158.—Mr. Channing (L.) moved a clause to abolish the sugar duty.—Mr. A. Chamberlain replied that he could not sacrifice six millions, or pledge himself as to the future. The duty was not a duty burdensome on any one section.—After much discussion the clause was rejected by 231 to 166.—Mr. C. Douglas (L.) moved a clause to exempt manufactured coal "nuts" from the coal export duty.—Mr A. Chamberlain promised to consider the point.—Negatived by 164 to 127.—The Bill passed through Committee.

May 30.

On the 3rd R., Mr. Flynn (N.) reopened the alleged over-taxation of Ireland.—Sir H. Fowler (L.) criticized the form of the financial accounts.—Sir C. Renshaw (C.) argued against the retention of the income-tax at a high level.—Mr. A. Chamberlain said that if the Irish demand were acceded to, Ireland would contribute nothing to the Exchequer. As to the Transvaal war contribution, he declined to admit that the Transvaal would repudiate its obligation. The income-tax, he admitted, stood at too high a figure and ought to be reduced when he had money at his disposal.—Mr. Dalziel (L.) moved the rejection of the Bill.—The amendment was negatived by 216 to 132, and the Bill was read a third time by a majority of 72.

June 5.

Mr. A. Chamberlain proposed a financial resolution on which to found the Consolidated Fund (No. 2) Bill, authorizing the issue of the money which had been voted by the House.—Carried by 147 to 92

June 5.

L—On 2nd R. of the Finance Bill, Lord Avebury (L.U.) called attention to the enormous increase in recent years of naval and military expenditure, and urged that it should be curtailed.—Lord Welby (L.) condemned the increase of taxation within the last six years.—Lord Lansdowne said that no one had specified where reduction of expenditure should take place. The area over which reduction was possible was a small one. The Estimates for the Navy were already reduced and the Govt. hoped to reduce those of the Army. They were constantly pressed with demands for increased expenditure such as for the staff of the Post Office.—Lord Spencer (L.) admitted there had been apathy in the country on the subject.—The Bill was read a second time, June 26, and subsequently passed into law. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 4, post.)

cap. 4, post.)

G—Sir A. Hayter (L.) called attention to reports of the Public Accounts Committee, and to their recommendations, mentioning some cases of irregular expenditure, among them being expenditure by the Navy of £160,000 upon refitting ships which were afterwards sold for insignificant sums—Mr. T. Bowles (C.), and others, followed.—Mr. Arnold-Forster (L.U.), Secy. of State for War, replied for the Govt. He said the War Office proposed to act on the report of the Committee: greater liberty would be given to general officers in regard to expenditure and accounts, but the control of Parliament would be maintained.—The question of condemned rations supplied during the War was discussed, and a formal motion was agreed to.

July 26.

G. Fiscal Policy.—In the debate on the Address, Mr. Asquith (L.) moved an amendment that, as the various aspects of the fiscal question had been discussed in the country for nearly two years, the time had come for submitting the issue to the people without further delay. He said the Prime Minister considered there was nothing anomalous in the present situation, and regarded the question merely as one for discussion in the next or following Parliament. The Ministry was not that formed in 1900 by Lord Salisbury, and the Unionist party had been split by the new fiscal policy. The by-elections gave good ground for dissolving, and Mr. Gladstone had taken that course when weakened by adverse elections. There existed great doubts as to Mr. Balfour's fiscal policy, and he again asked what difference there was between him and Mr. Chamberlain, and what was meant by "retaliation." The proposal for a Colonial conference should include a statement as to whether our representatives would be allowed to discuss a scheme involving taxation of food. The confusion in the industry of the Empire could only be removed by a prompt appeal to the people. The issue was between preference and non-preference, between the taxation and the free admission of corn, flour, and meat .-- Mr. A. Chamberlain (L.U.) Chan. of Exchr., recalled Mr. Gladstone's dictum, that it was a constitutionally bad precedent for a Ministry to resign through reverses at bye-elections unless their party was in rebellion. Mr. Asquith was silent as to any remedy for existing fiscal evils—his policy was free imports without free exchange. It was not the fact that trade was injured by the discussion of fiscal policy; the Board of Trade returns showed otherwise. The Govt. wanted to obtain fair terms for our industries, and greater liberty of action in respect of taxes for revenue purposes, and for power to negotiate with foreign Powers in fiscal They also wanted greater liberty to promote closer union with our Colonies. To the latter he attached profound importance, and to exclude discussion on preferential treatment would be absurd. The representatives, both Imperial and Colonial, must confer with hands untied. He hoped this proposal night yet be discussed without party feeling.—Mr. A. Elliot (L.U.) said that if Mr. Balfour were to declare his policy to be the same as Mr. Chamberlain's, he and others would cross the floor of the House.—After other speeches, Major Seely (L.) charged the Govt. with descending to tactics and dodges to prevent the House from coming to a decision upon protective tariffs.—Mr. John Ellis (L.) argued that since 1900 there was a new Monarch, a new Prime Minister, a practically new Ministry, and a new policy, and ineisted that the General Election should not be delayed.—Sir E. Grey (L.) deplored the fact that this had been made a party question; but disclaimed, for his party, any responsibility. The post-ponement of the election was for the Unionist party's convenience. Mr. Chamberlain had caused misunderstandings in the Colonies. Any Colonial conference should be summoned without prejudice, on the understanding that nothing short of free trade within the Empire could bring about unity. The Govt., with consent of Parliament, might impose retaliatory duties now: and were they asking for power to impose them without Parliamentary sanction? Mr. Balfour left the country in the dark as to his intentions, and the suspense was detrimental to business interests.

Feb. 15.

Mr. J. Chamberlain (L.U.) reminded the Opposition that if they turned out the Govt. they could not turn him out, as he had relieved them of that trouble. Personally he should be glad of an early election as it would enable the people to ascertain and to test the Opposition policy. He, however, denied their right to demand a dissolution, and he hoped for further useful legislation in the time that remained. The amendment said that the fiscal question had now been fully discussed, so that the allegation that the country was being "rushed" was not true. Its real object was to sow discord in the Ministerial ranks. Referring to his own policy, he denied that he had said that we ought to abandon free trade. We ought to reform our policy of free imports, which stood in the way of the free trade which we had never had. On this point there was no difference in principle between himself and Mr. Balfour. The question had been discussed for nearly two years, and trade was still, according to the Opposition, in a flourishing condition. One election, or even two, might not settle the question, and he was quite prepared to exercise patience, and would not be deterred by reverses. Tariff reform would be recruited before long by a reaction from the party who at present saw no reason for change, after 60 years' experience of unfulfilled promises. It would grow out of the problem of unemployment, and the desire of the people to draw the Empire more closely together. The country would not shut the door against an offer from the Colonies to make a treaty on a preferential basis; and it would be absurd to decide, before we knew their proposals that in no event would we impose a duty, however small, upon any kind of food. The Colonies would have a great deal to offer, and he believed that the people would entertain their proposals. Lord H. Cecil (C.) said he did not desire an immediate general election, but invited Mr. Balfour to explain his views so clearly as to make it difficult for tariff reformers to misrepresent them. A preferential arrangement with the Colonies, based on taxation of food, would never be accepted by the nation. The policy of concealment was driving free-traders from Parliament.—Mr. A. Taylor (C.) complained of attempts by the protectionists to capture the Unionist party machine.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) said that it was evident that Mr. Balfour would not make in the face of the House a plain statement of his views and aims, and also that he would not face But it was also clear that he was committed up to the hilt to the the country. Birmingham policy. The Opposition objected to a Colonial conference because it would commit the country to action which the people would not accept. The real issue was not the nebulous policy of retaliation, but the policy of Mr. Chamberlain. The present object of the Govt. was to gain time, or they would not bring forward the gigantic obstacle of redistribution to which two Sessions were to be given up. So much for the plea of urgency for tariff reform and their sincerity! They did not dare to poll the voters whom they were inciting to revolutionize our fiscal system.—Mr. A. Balfour (C.) First Ld. of the Treasury, deprecated attempts to cross-examine him across the floor. as if the whole science of political economy could be explained in two or three sentences. Retaliation or "liberty of negotiation," played in commerce the part that fleets and armies played in international politics. If we had not the free power of negotiation, attempts would certainly be made against our commerce which would never be otherwise made. The fact that this policy of retaliation had been opened, had already exercised a good effect upon other nations. As to the position of free-trade Unionist members, it was the business of constituencies to select their own members; but he would welcome every man of Unionist opinions who was a supporter of the Govt. The fiscal question had not yet been adequately discussed, for the House d.d not know what the Opposition would do if returned to power. Would they allow every species of tariff negotiation to be carried on to our injury? Would they permit a system of bounties and drawbacks in foreign countries to interfere with the development of our natural sources of supply? Would the Colonies be permitted to discuss with us freely and without prejudice or limitations, the means of drawing closer the bonds of Empire? These questions must be pressed home at the election and before it. Delay was of little consequence when phenomena were being dealt with which would not affect our lives alone, but future generations as well. The Colonies were rapidly growing: and whether we should take a large and permanent share in their development might depend upon the decision which this country took in the near future.—The amendment was negatived by 311 to 248.

Mr. Churchill (L.) moved a resolution declaring that the permanent unity of the British Empire would not be secured through a system of preferential duties based upon the protective taxation of food. The motion, he said, was directed against the policy of Mr. Chamberlain, which must affect raw material as well as food, and ignored India. It would increase the price of wheat and meat; and make existence more difficult for the very poor. We ought to be free to purchase our food wherever we chose in the open markets of the world. Preference would restrict our sources of supply, and under it, if days of scarcity were to come the unity of the Empire would be endangered. Before the general election, the House ought to give the country a clear declaration of its views.—Mr. A. Taylor (C.) seconded the resolution, as raising a clear issue between free trade and protection. The Birmingham policy was to cement the ties that bound the Empire together by the simple expedient of a corner in wheat.-Mr. Lyttelton (L.U.), Colonial Secy., replied. The Govt., he said. were opposed to the discussion of abstractions and desired to ascertain in a businesslike way the exact proposals which the Colonies intended to make by holding a free and unfettered conference. This motion would attach a condition to the proceedings and would cause embarrassment and misunderstanding by ruling out a proposal for even a shilling duty on corn. It was foolish to ask the Covt. or the House to make up their minds before they knew the facts, especially when there was a method by which the facts could be learned. The resolution was meant to obscure the issue and to weaken and invalidate the conference. It was impossible to pass or reject it without creating misunderstandings, and therefore he moved the previous question. -Lord G. Hamilton (C.) opposed this course. The Colonial representatives, he said, would come to the conference with their hands fettered, as all the great self-governing Colonies were protectionist. They were not going to let our products compete with their own. He appealed to Mr. Balfour to think of the future of his party, and not to bring pressure on members to induce them to vote against their convictions.—Mr. J. Chamberlain (L.U.) said he had declined to submit his proposals formally to the House because an abstract resolution could have no useful result. If rejected the agitation would still go on; and if carried, there would be no advantage, for the Govt. was pledged that the question should not be raised by them during the present Parliament. The "free fooders" (who taxed food pretty regularly) were opposing a Govt. of which they claimed to be supporters. He was not a protectionist, but the resolution was a challenge not only of his policy, but of that of the Govt., who were in favour of a Colonial conference, from which no subject was to be excluded, and which was not to be committed to anything beforehand. The resolution would muzzle the conference upon colonial preference. He appealed to the House not to deal with the subject as a party one, but if they desired to have a consolidated Empire, to take steps towards the commercial union which he advocated. The policy of laisser faire might lead to separation.-Mr. A. Balfour said the motion flew in the face of the policy which he had announced at Edinburgh in favour of a Colonial conference. He was not in favour of the protective taxation of food and a general profession of faith was unnecessary. It would, however, fetter the conference. The "previous question" would not pin those who voted for it to any statement of policy. The attempts to induce the House to prejudice the conference would lead to misconception in this country, and in the Colonies.—Mr. Asquith (L.) described the answer as a continuation of the campaign of evasion and procrastination. Mr. Chamberlain, he said, was going to vote for the previous question, when the cardinal doctrine of his teaching was challenged. The resolution would prevent, not cause misconception. The Colonies ought to be told before the conference that we would not in any circumstances subject the food of the people to protective duties.—The previous question was carried by 302 to was denied to the mother country. The Govt. would not change the tariff in India so as to prejudice its prosperity, or impose on India any unsuitable system. March 13.

6-Mr. Ainsworth (L.) moved a resolution condemning the imposition of a duty on all imported manufactured goods, not exceeding 10 per cent. on the average, as injurious to the commercial interests of the kingdom. He said this was Mr. Chamberlain's policy, against which his motion was directed.—Mr. R. Cavendish (I.U.) seconded. -Mr. Balfour said the Govt. did not wish to take part in fiscal discussions raised by which had been carried against them, as Mr. Gladstone had done on two occasions. The question could not be dealt with in the existing Parliament; and if questions not affecting actual policy were brought forward again and again, the Conservative party might in future years retaliate. The resolution if carried could not influence the Govt., and was merely academic. He should not join in future in such debates .-Sir H. C.-Bannerman said that the Govt. would not be embarrassed by the motion if they were honest and courageous. They had not the support of the House. All attempts to ascertain their opinions had been evaded: concealment was the only way by which they could retain office. They were now striking camp, and shirking their duty. Had they no policy of their own that they were unable to face a decision of the House ?-Lord H. Cecil (C.) said the tariff reformers had begun their retreat across the Beresina. The electorate was hardly likely to rally to those who would not defend their own cause.—The resolution was carried by 254 to 2.

Mr. J. Walton (L.) moved a resolution condemning Mr. Balfour's policy of fiscal retaliation.—(Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain were both absent).—Mr. Asquith declared that the Prime Minister was acting in an extraordinary fashion, and boycotting the House of Commons. A turiff imposed for retaliatory purposes would be certain to be retained for protective purposes, and we stood to gain less and lose more than any other country.—The motion carried, nem. con.

March 28.

Mr. Balfour stated that he proposed to take no action on Mr. Walton's resolution.— Mr. O. Williams (L.) moved a resolution that grave injury would be caused to the shipping industry and to other dependent industries by the adoption of the fiscal system proposed by Mr. J. Chamberlain.—After discussion, Mr. Bryce (I.) called attention to the absence of all the members of the Govt., which he described as cowardly.-The motion was agreed to.

Sir J. Leese (L.) moved a resolution disapproving of the taxation of corn, meat, and dairy produce, as burdensome upon the poor and injurious to the nation's welfare; and against any Colonial conference unless convened on the understanding that the United Kingdom would not agree to any such taxation. (The Unionist members were, again, nearly all absent.)—Sir H. Fowler (L.) renewed the Opposition protest against the tactics of the Govt., who were impairing the rights, privileges and prerogatives of the House.—Lord H. Cecil (C.) said these debates were useful in convincing the people that tariff reform could not be defended in Parliament. The resolution was carried.

L-Lord Balfour (C.) called attention to declarations by some Ministers concerning the Colonial conference, and moved that the constituencies ought to be informed beforehand as to the whole circumstances, and how far any decision would be binding upon the United Kingdom.—The Duke of Marlborough (C.) said the conditions had been fully explained by Mr. Balfour: the conference would be free and unfettered, and the results would be communicated to the Colonies; but no scheme would be binding until the electors of this country had pronounced upon it.—Lord Halsbury (C.), Ld. Chancellor, denounced the debate as unreal.—Lord James (L.U.) said its aim was to secure that the conference was not to be moved by party action, and that the representatives of the Colonies should not be assembled under false pretences.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.) said the Opposition wished to exclude from the conference everything which would render it useful. The conference would have to consider whether within certain limitations it was not possible to devise some mutual arrangements which might have a beneficial effect on the Empire as a whole. Its business would be to report, and its decisions could not bind the Govt.—Lord Rosebery (L.) denounced the action of the Govt. as a red herring drawn across the inconvenient path of Mr. J. Chamberlain. The motion was negatived. April 11.

6—The question was further discussed on the motion for adjournment over the April 19. Easter Holidays.

Mr. Balfour stated in reply to a question that it would be impossible for any Govt. to endeavour to restrict the discussions of the conference. He had in no sense departed from the policy announced at Edinburgh, but he admitted that he had not then in contemplation the conference which was to assemble automatically in 1906.

policy of his speech was that the Govt, should not adopt any system of fiscal reform which had not been submitted to the country.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said they had understood that the country would be consulted as to the submission of the question of preference to a Colonial conference; and moved the adjournment to call attention to Mr. Balfour's statement that the question might be submitted to a conference in 1906 without the country being first consulted. He referred to passages in speeches to show that the country was to have been consulted before a conference dealing with preference was held, and to answers in Parliament in the same sense. This had now apparently been repudiated, and if the country had been mixled, the effect on the dignity and character of a British Prime Minister must be considered .- Mr. Lyttelton (L.U.), Colonial Secy., rose to reply, but was unable to obtain a hearing from the Oppo-An angry scene ensued, lasting nearly an hour.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman argued that Mr. Balfour ought to speak without further delay, as no one else could reply with authority.-Mr. Balfour declined to reply until other counts in the indictment against him had been developed. The Opposition had no right to decide the order in which Ministers should speak, and such a claim would absolutely ruin the House of Commons. Even a criminal was not expected to make his defence before he had heard the whole case against him. The uproar continuing, the Deputy-Speaker put in force the standing order provided for in cases of grave disorder, and adjourned the House without question put, at 10.30 p.m. May 22.

Sir H. C.-Bannerman asked Mr. Balfour to give a day for the discussion of a vote of censure.—Mr. Balfour said that Ministers had been prevented from clearing up the matter by the disgraceful scene which took place, and that Sir H. C.-Bannerman had taken no steps to avert it. He would give a day for a vote of censure if some undertaking were given that the debate would be conducted with ordinary decency and fair play.

May 23.

Referring to the Colonial Conference of 1906, Mr. Balfour said that if it met before a dissolution it would do so under the conditions contemplated by the 1902 conference, which passed a resolution containing no suggestion for either Indian or Crown colony representation. The Govt. would make no proposals to the conference. As to the proposed vote of censure his appeal for fair play had met with no response. He was bound to take care, as far as he could, that the scene which disgraced the House was not repeated, and he appealed again to Sir H. C.-Bannerman to do his best to prevent its recurrence.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said it was the function of the Chair to maintain order, and he could not usurp that authority. The disorder arose because Mr. Balfour had not risen at once to meet the attack upon him.—Mr. Balfour declared that this contention struck at the very root of Parliamentary business. He refused to admit that he violated rule by not rising at once.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said a debate on the vote of censure would be different, and there would be no reason for departing from the ordinary course of debate.—Mr. Balfour, understanding this as a pledge, agreed to give a day for the debate.

May 25.

The debate on the vote of censure (see May 23) was postponed, owing to Mr. Balfour's illness.

May 29.

A discussion took place as to the resumption of the debate, and the notice was removed from the paper, so that a convenient day might be arranged.

May 31.

L—The Duke of Devonshire asked whether the Colonies had been asked to arrange for a conference in 1906, and whether it was contemplated to summon it before or after the general election. He wished to clear up the confusion which existed as to the policy of the Govt., and to elicit a clear and explicit declaration. Mr. Chamberlain had laid down as the only condition for a conference the taxation of food of a protective character. Mr. Balfour had stated that before the conference assembled a general election would be held and that the results of the conference would be submitted to a second general election. Nothing could be more prejudicial to Imperial unity than dragging a Colonial conference into party affairs. Mr. Chamberlain described Mr. Balfour's policy as one of protective taxation of food, and he (the speaker) asked, whether they were to take the policy of the Govt. from Mr. Balfour or Mr. Chamberlain.-Lord Lansdowne said that no arrangements had been made as to the subjects to be dealtwith by the conference. If the Govt. were returned to power they would invite the Colonies to take part in a special conference before which Colonial preference would be discussed. Mr. Balfour's statement was perfectly clear—that there would be this. special conference, if the Govt. were in power after the general election. He did not intend to make premature statements as to the date of the election or as to the action. which the conference might take, but it was possible that it might meet while the present. Govt. was in office. Tariff reform was not the only subject for discussion; there was for instance, the question of Chinese labour. A special conference summoned aftera general election could not clash with an ordinary conference if held in 1906. The Govt. would put in the forefront of their programme Mr. Balfour's policy and the calling of a free and unfettered conference.—Lord James of Hereford (L.U.) criticized with severity Mr. Chamberlain's reference to the Unionist free-traders leaving the party.—Lord Spencer (L.) said he was unable to decide whether Mr. Chamberlain was an opponent, an ally, or a rival of Mr. Balfour.—Lord Balfour (C.) declared that Unionists were entitled to know where they stood.—Lord Halsbury (C.), Ld. Chancellor, said that Mr. Chamberlain was not a member of the Govt., and they declined to reply to an examination as to whether they assented to his statements.—Lord Rosebery (L.) said that all through this question the Govt. policy was inextricably mixed up with that of Mr. Chamberlain. It would be a disaster to the Empire to use the Colonies as pawns in the game of party politics.

6—On the motion for adjournment at Whitsuntide, Sir H. C.-Rannerman asked for information as to the Colonial conference and the fiscal question. Colonial preference was said by Mr. Chamberlain to be the first item in the future Unionist programme. That meant taxation of food, and that Mr. Chamberlain committed the Govt. to his policy. It had previously been understood that there would be two conferences, preceded by two elections.—Mr. A. Balfour said he had often declared that the question of fiscal reform stood in the forefront of the Govt.'s policy, and that the most important object to be attained was a closer union with our Colonies, also that the only way to further that object was by holding a free conference, which could hammer out a scheme. He stood by those views.—Mr. Elliot (L.U.), Mr. Robsor. (L.), Sir F. Milner (C.), and Mr. Churchill (L.), continued the discussion.—Lord H. Cocil (C.) appealed to Mr. Balfour to state whether he adhered to the pledge not to propose the taxation of food during the next Parliament.—Mr. Lyttelton explained the circumstances under which the Colonial conference would meet in 1906, when the representatives might insist on discussing preference. The tightening of the commercial bonds between the Colonies and the mother country and the policy of retaliation were the two most important items in the Govt. programme. They would ask for a mandate before discussing with the Colonies the steps to be taken to achieve those objects. If the mandate were given and a conference convened, and should recommend a tax on food, the country would be again consulted.—Mr. Asquith (L.) insisted that the Govt. should say whether their representatives at the conference would be empowered to entertain proposals for the taxation of food.—Mr. Chamberlain (L.U.) denied that he was ever in favour of the imposition of high duties, but he asked the House to keep an open mind as to the possibility of taxing corn for preferential purposes, and not to commit itself to a negative policy before it knew what the Colonies would give and what we might be asked for in return. Mr. Balfour and himself stood in respect of all essential points upon precisely the same platform in holding that commercial union with the Colonies was the most urgent part of the fiscal problem, and he understood that the Covt, would submit this issue at the general election.—Mr. Ritchie (C.) and others having spoken, the adjournment was agreed to.

L—Lord Portsmouth (L.) called attention to declarations by members of the Govt. with regard to a Colonial conference, and moved for a return of the average prices of various Colonial imports for 14 years.—Motion amended and agreed to.

July 3.

C—Sir H. C.-Bannerman asked what day would be given for the discussion of a vote of censure to be moved by Sir E. Grey (see May 23).—Mr. Balfour said that if the debate could not be raised on the Appropriation Bill, another occasion would be provided, but he considered that it would be a vague and rather empty discussion.

L-The Duke of Devonshire called attention to Mr. Chamberlain's speeches on June 3 and July 7, and to a resolution of the Tariff Reform League, and moved a resolution disapproving of any proposal to establish a general or penal tariff and any system of colonial preference based on taxation of food. He said that he invited a clear decision on certain definite propositions. He asked whether the Government had taken any steps to summon a Colonial conference, and what subjects it should discuss. If the conference arrived at some scheme of Colonial preference founded on the taxation of food, this country should be as free then, as now, to oppose it. should make its position clear. The Colonies had never asked that this country should reverse its fiscal policy on their account; but that if reversed, they would then be able to deal with us. The Prime Minister appeared to desire a mandate to carry out a change by negotiations alone; not to enter into a tariff war. Mr. Chamberlain supported a wider policy of tariff war and fiscal revolution. There were two policies before the country, and the question was whether Mr. Chamberlain had retired, or whether Mr. Balfour had advanced to the policy of the Tariff Reform League. Mr. Chamberlain had expressed himself satisfied with Mr. Balfour's declarations. The resolution did not attack the policy of the Govt. as defined by themselves, but it condemned that of the Tariff Reform League.-Lord Camperdown (L.U.) moved the previous question.-Lord Robertson (C.) held that Mr. Chamberlain's full blown system of protection was before the country, and all who were not in favour of "the Bill, the whole Bill, and nothing but the Bill," were ruled out by him.—Lord Londonderry (C.) said the Prime Minister's speeches contained no ambiguity whatever. The conference was to be called, but its recommendations would not become law until the country was consulted. For his own part he should not support the taxation of food.—Lord Goschen (C.) said it ought to be made clear what was the view of the Prime Minister and his colleagues on this question, not only how far they were prepared to go, but how far they were not prepared to go. The silence of Mr. Balfour was doing much harm, and he hoped the Govt. would prenounce their policy, and take the consequences like men.—Lord Ridley (C.) as a member of the Tariff Reform League, said he accepted heartily and frankly the attitude of the Govt.—Lord Spencer (L.) pressed for precise answers to the questions addressed to the Covt.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.) said that those who differed from Mr. Chamberlain must recognise the great services which he had rendered to the The Govt. intended to stand by their supporters, some of whom desired to go further than the Covt., and some did not want to go so far. They also stood by Mr. The conference was to be "free and unfettered," and its Balfour's declarations alone. conclusions would be placed before the electors. In the meantime the country was to suspend its judgment. Any verdiet of the conference could be reversed by public opinion. The demand that the Unionist party should be unanimous was strange, as coming from a party which was not unanimous now, and was not likely to be so in the future. The motion would inconveniently bind the conference beforehand, and pass judgment on a matter which had not been presented to Parliament.—The previous question was carried by 121 to 57.

L—Germany and England.—In reference to the action of the German Govt. against British traders in the Marshall and Caroline Islands, Lord Lansdowne said the matter was engaging close attention. C—Government, Defeat of the.—The Govt. having been defeated in Supply on a vote for the Irish Land Commission (q.v.), Mr. Balfour announced that a statement would be made on the 24th. Up to the present the Govt. had received the unfailing support of the Unionist party, but unless they could continue to carry on the business of the country with dignity they would retire.

July 20.

L—Lord Spencer (L) asked whether any statement would be made by Lord Lansdowne respecting the position of the Govt. in consequence of the vote in the House of Commons.—Lord Lansdowne declined to deal with the adverse vote, pending a meeting of the Cabinet.

July 21.

6—In Committee on the Churches (Scotland) Bill (q.v.), Sir H. C. Bannerman moved to report progress, as he considered it unseemly that they should ask the House togo on with work in the interval before the Cabinet decision was known.—Mr. Balfour referred, in reply, to the precedent of 1895, and hoped that progress would be made with the Churches Bill, which should be passed whether the Govt. resigned or not.—The Opposition did not challenge a division, and the motion was negatived. July 21.

L—Lord Lansdowne stated that the Govt. did not intend to resign or dissolve in consequence of the vote, as there were no constitutional reasons for so doing, and precedents pointed the other way. The vote did not express the deliberate judgment of Parliament.—Lord Spencer (L.) said there were precedents the other way, and argued that the bye-elections showed that the Govt. had not the confidence of the country.—Lord Rosebery (L.) said that no Govt. had undergone so much indignity as the present. They had not the confidence of the electors, to whom they refused to appeal. They were straining the very structure of the Constitution, and if a general election were delayed, there might be a violent reaction. He protested against their decision not to resign.—Lord Halsbury (C.), Ld. Chancellor, said the Govt. were the best judges of their dignity and honour. He quoted instances where Liberal Prime Ministers had refused to resign or dissolve on being defeated, or when bye-elections went against them. The majority on July 20 was obtained by the Irish members, and perhaps Lord Rosebery would hold that Mr. Redmond should be sent for.

-Mr. Balfour explained how the Cabinet proposed to treat the adverse vote. He said the idea that the constitutional course was to ask to be relieved of office or to dissolve Parliament had no foundation as a principle. Few, if any, Govts. that had lasted for four or five years had not suffered defeats. Mr. Gladstone, between 1868 and 1874 was defeated nine times, and in 1894 Lord Rosebery was defeated upon the Yet they did not resign. The only conclusive division was when the two parties had had notice, and when the clear issue was whether or not the Government of the day had the confidence of the majority—in fact a vote of censure, or a vote having that character. At this moment the Govt. possessed the confidence of the Their Bills had suffered little change at the hands of the House, and there dissension in the Cabinet. The vote of July 20, taken by itself, was not was no dissension in the Cabinet. sufficient ground for dissolution if the Govt. retained the confidence of the House. Mr. Gladstone would have scouted the idea of resignation or dissolution on the ground of bye-elections. From the point of view of efficient administration, Ministers ought not to be dependent upon chance divisions, as, if parties were nearly even, a small group might force the Ministry to resign at any time. In order that there might be a general debate, he agreed to set up a motion for adjournment, on the understanding that Sir E. Grey's vote of censure was dropped, as he could not give facilities for two votes of censure.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said it was obvious that Sir E. Grey's motion had been superseded.—Sir A. Acland-Hood (C.) then formally moved the adjournment.—Sir H. C. Bannerman asserted that the defeat of the Govt. was not the result of a snatch division. The Ministry had lost the confidence of the country, and he ridiculed the argument that they should remain in office in order to manage our foreign affairs. Their defeat invalidated their power to carry on such business effectively. Mr. Gladstone had always attached serious importance to bye-elections. There were only two courses open to the Prime Minister—dissolution or resignation; to retain office as if nothing had happened was absolutely unconstitutional.-Mr. J. Redmond (N.) described Mr. Balfour's attitude as contemptible, and said the Nationalist party would give and take no quarter, day or night.—Mr. Asquith (L.) pointed out that in 1873 Mr. Gladstone resigned office when defeated in the House, and in 1874, when he found the bye-elections going against him, he dissolved.—Sir E. Vincent (C.) said the division was a mere "chance or false" division, and that the Govt. had never enjoyed a more loyal and compact majority than now.— Mr. Churchill (L.) violently attacked Mr. Balfour as having "flouted the traditions of Parliament and dishonoured the service of the Crown."—Sir E. Grey (L.) said the Unionist party did not support Mr. Balfour on ordinary occasions, but only when plenty of notice was given. The party was not united, but contained two irreconcilable sections.—Mr. Ralfour replied that attacks against him personally were not relevant to the issue. He was accused of being a greedy office-seeker by those who were only anxious to succeed him. None of the constitutional precedents quoted by him had been upset by the Opposition.—The motion was carried nem. con., the Opposition not challenging a division. July 24.

L—Housing Question.—Lord Hylton (C.) moved the 2nd R. of a Public Health Bill to promote the erection of good cottages for the rural population by private enterprise, and to disallow bye-laws which operated contrary to the public interests.—Lord Wolverton (L.U.), for the Local Govt. Board, assented to the 2nd R., and suggested that it should be referred to a Select Committee.—Lord Tweedmouth (L.) objected to the Bill, as introducing an entirely new principle into local government.—Read a second time and referred to a Select Committee.

May 11.

The Bill was read a 3rd time and sent to the Commons.

L—India—Afghanistan.—Lord Newton (C.) having called attention to the new treaty with Afghanistan, urged greater activity in pressing railways and other undertakings in that country.—Lord Bath (C.), Under Secy., said the Govt. had no intention to interfere with the internal affairs of the Ameer, or to establish a British Resident in Kabul. The treaty made no difference in the arrangement that this country should protect Afghanistan so long as the conditions laid down were observed.—Lord Ripon (L.) said the Ameer should be made clearly to understand that no foreign Power would be allowed to interfere in the internal affairs of Afghanistan.-Lord Lansdowne (L.U.), Foreign Secy., said that while we should not interfere in internal affairs, we should, under carefully defined conditions, assist the Ameer, and his foreign relations were to be under our guidance and control.

6—*Finance.—Mr. Brodrick (C.), Secy. of State, introduced the Indian Budget. He said the revenue in 1903-4 was the largest ever collected, and the Budget for 1904-5 showed a surplus of £3,485,000, in spite of difficulties caused by plague, the partial failure of the monsoon, severe frosts, and earthquake. Trade had greatly developed. The exports and imports together amounted to £174,748,000, and £77,100,000 was between India and this country. The exports to India equalled in amount the exports to Australia, Canada, and the Cane, together. India could claim the first place at any Colonial conference. The military charges were to be increased by £2,439,000 under Lord Kitchener's reorganization scheme, which provided for an increase of the field army from 80,000 to 140,000 men. As to the position of the Commander-in-Chief, the Home Govt. thought he should no longer have to undergo the daily routine of ordering stores and controlling manufacturing departments, and they proposed to substitute two departments, an Army Department under the Commander-in-Chief, and a Military Supply Department presided over by the Military Member of the Council of the Governor-General. By this plan everything appertaining to the combatant service would be supervised by the Commander-in-Chief. He also described the measures which were being taken to develop agriculture, cotton-growing and the tea trade, irrigation and railways.—Sir H. Fowler (L.) hoped the salt tax might be further reduced in another year. He asked, was the additional military expenditure necessary, as India was now less likely to be attacked than at any previous period. Military expenditure should always be under civilian control.—Lord G. Hamilton (C.) said the Govt. were perhaps unduly apprehensive about the danger to the N.W. Frontier. There would be enormous difficulties in moving a large army through Afghanistan.—Mr. C. Wason (L.) moved an amendment in favour of periodical Parliamentary inquiries into the administration of India.—Mr. Brodrick denied that they could serve a useful purpose. Indian affairs ought not to be treated from a party point of view. The negotiations with the Ameer of Afghanistan had not in any respect failed.—The amendment was rejected by 116 to 65. June 21.

L—Forest Service.—Lord Lytton (C.) moved that the Indian Forest Service should be open to all the Universities of the United Kingdom.—Lord Bath (C.), Under Secv., justified the alternative scheme of the Govt. in connection with Oxford University as a temporary measure, and promised an inquiry before the close of three years. The motion was rejected by 30 to 24.

March 7.

G-Ireland-Crimes Act. Mr. John O'Connor (N.) moved a resolution in favour of the repeal of the Crimes Act of 1887.—Col. Saunderson (C.) pointed out that the Act was not directed against ordinary crime, but was necessary in order to cope with agrarian crime; if it should arise.—Mr. Asquith (L.) said he should vote for the motion as his party was pledged to repeal the Act, which embodied principles which were foreign to the spirit and genius of the Constitution.—Mr. Long (C.), Chief Secy., asked why it was not done between 1892 and 1895, when the Liberal party were in power .-Mr. Asquith replied that in those years the Act was a dead letter. -Mr. Long said the Nationalist members did not object to its existence, but to its administration. The condition of Ireland had materially improved; but the Act would enable the Irish Govt. to deal with certain classes of crime, which did not come under the ordinary law, when it might be required.—The motion was rejected by 163 to 106.

Jas. O'Connor (N.) called attention to the question of DRAINAGE.—Mr. arterial drainage in Ireland, and moved a resolution that the Govt. should afford adequate protection for lives and property.—Mr. Long acknowledged the importance of the question, and favoured the appointment of a committee consisting of three experts, which might lead to a reform of the Act of 1888.—Motion rejected by 120 to 79. May 24.

Pension Fund, and moved a resolution, calling on the Govt. to supplement it by an Imperial grant.—The resolution was rejected by 137 to 113.

Mr. Murphy (N.) on going into Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, moved a resolution that University education was quite inadequately provided for and that it did not give Catholics facilities which could be enjoyed without violence to their religious feelings.—Mr. Haldane (L.) deprecated the bigotry which the subject aroused, and said that Parliament ought not to concede all the demands of the priests: two Universities were needed—one in Dublin and another in Belfast.—Mr. J. Gordon (L.U.) said that Irish Unionists would oppose any grant of State aid to a denominational University.—Mr. Dillon (N.) denied that the Nationalists had asked for a University controlled by the Bishops and priests. They agreed to the acceptance of the Test Act, to a majority of laymen on the governing body, and to safeguard professors against arbitrary dismissal.—Mr. Balfour regretted that the question had made no progress, and that Ireland was not provided for adequately in respect of University education, and the means of education for Protestants and Presbyterians were stunted and sterilized. Trinity College should retain its present character and Roman Catholics ought also to have the advantages of a University education. His views, therefore, were personal; and he had not been able to convert the Cabinet or the House or the public. He had no hope of seeing the question settled by one political party or the other. The real obstacle was not Ulster opinion, but that of Great Britain.—The resolution was rejected on a division by 263 to 1(4.

In Supply, on the vote for public education in Ireland, Mr. Dillon (N.), after some personal altercation with members on the Ministerial side, spoke at length on the methods of the National Board of Education, and the condition of education in Ireland, the result being that Ireland was the worst educated country in Western Europe. He moved to reduce the vote.—Several other members also spoke.—Mr. Long, in reply, said that constructive suggestions had been few in number. There was no desire to starve education in Ireland, and liberal Treusury grants had been made. The National Board was trying to remove the difficulties in the way of teachers' promotion.—The debate was adjourned.

FINANCIAL RELATIONS.—See under FINANCE BILL.

Government of .--In reply to a question as to the part taken by Sir Antony MacDonnell, the Under Secy., in the preparation of the devolution scheme put forward in 1904 by Lord Dunraven and others, Mr. G. Wyndham (C.), Chief Secy., said that he had assisted in formulating these proposals, believing them to conform to Unionist principles. The Govt., however, held that as the scheme contemplated the creation of a financial board and the delegation of legislative powers, it was inadmissible, and that the action of Sir Antony MacDonnell was indefensible; at the same time, they were satisfied that his conduct was not open to an imputation of disloyalty.

Feb. 16.

L.-Lord Dunraven (C.) called attention to a speech by Sir E. Carson, Solicitor-General, on the 7th February, charging Sir A. MacDonnell with having pursued a policy disavowed by his chief. He (the speaker) was mainly responsible for the policy put forward, which aimed at obtaining better government for Ireland. It originated with the Land Conference Committee, not with Sir A. MacDonnell; but he had received much assistance from him, who, however, had subsequently withdrawn his connection with it. He (Lord Dunraven) justified his action in the matter, which was perfectly open, and described Sir A. MacDonnell as impartial, high-minded, and fearlessly honest.—Lord Ripon (L.) bore testimony to the great services rendered in India by Sir A. MacDonnell.—Lord Rathmore (C.) said the scheme had set the ball of Home Rule rolling again. He hoped Sir A. MacDonnell would be transferred from Ireland.—Lord Lansdowne pointed out that Lord Dunrayen's scheme was not before the House, and that Sir E. Carson had only claimed that if Sir A. MacDonnell was its originator, the point should be set at rest. It was clear that he was not the originator. The Chief Secy., as soon as his attention was called to the published scheme, had at once stated that the Govt. could not countenance it, and had told Sir A. MacDonnell that he had been led into an error which they were unable to defend, while fully admitting and recognizing his candour and integrity. Lord Lansdowne traced the career of Sir A. MacDonnell in India, and referred to his appointment in Ireland and the steps he had taken to break down that barrier between classes and to pass the Land Act; but he had never received any instructions covering a policy of the kind embodied in the Dunraven scheme. Lord Spencer (L.) said he questioned whether Sir A. MacDonnell was blameworthy in any respect in this matter. He asked if the fact of his communication with Lord Dunraven was known to the Lord Lieutenant.—

L-Ireland-Government of-continued.

Lord Lansdowne said that Lord Dudley was aware that Sir A. MacDonnell was helping Lord Dunraven to discuss the reforms suggested, as he had done previously on the Land and University questions.

Feb. 17.

6—In the debate on the Address, Mr. J. Redmond (N.) moved an amendment, describing the system of government in Ireland as opposed to the will of the people and giving them no voice in the management of their own affairs, and with being ineffective, extravagant, and productive of universal discontent and unrest. He asserted that the government of Ireland was condemned by Unionists as well as by Home Rulers, and that the country was ruled by boards manned by the ascendency Armed rebellion would be a duty were there any reasonable chance of success. Sir A. MacDonnell went to Ireland to carry out a policy of concession and reform, but he had been thwarted, and the government of Ireland had broken down. Parliament ought to apply the remedy, by a radical scheme of reform.—Mr. Moore (C.) attacked the Govt. for the appointment of Sir A. MacDonnell, who held pronounced political and religious opinions and refused to be bound by the ordinary rules of the Civil Service. Ulster could not be ruled in that way. He asked who was responsible for Lord Dunraven's devolution scheme. Lord Dudley knew of Sir A. MacDonnell's action in relation to it, and he himself believed that he was not exceeding his instructions. Irish Unionists believed they had been betrayed by their leaders.—Mr. Wyndham (C.), Chief Secy., denied strongly that he had shown favouritism to certain parts of Ireland at the expense of others. As to the devolution incident, he wrote to The Times disapproving the proposals for a semi-financial board and for a legislative body, except for private Bills. He went on to describe his relations with Sir Antony MacDonnell, who had been rather a colleague than a secretary. He never instructed him to take steps to introduce devolution, to which he strongly objected. When the Irish Reform Association's manifesto was published, he at once repudiated it, and had no idea that Sir A. MacDonnell had helped to draft the proposals. He greatly regretted the misunderstanding, through which the latter had assisted at the publication of proposals to which the Cabinet objected, without first obtaining the approval of his chief. As to the amendment, there was no middle term between the existing system of government and Home Rule.—Mr. Haldane (L.) said Sir A. MacDonnell had been very hardly He should have been either defended or dismissed. His offence was in having tried to administer Ireland in the interests of that country as a whole and not of a particular section.—Lord H. Cecil (C.) said the great mass of the public regarded Home Rule as an extinct issue. The Cabinet had done right to censure Sir A. MacDonnell for doing what they held to be wrong, while commending his general services.-Mr. T. W. Russell (L.) said he should support the amendment, not as a Home Ruler, but because it condemned the system of Irish government.—Mr Churchill (L.) said Mr. Wyndham was morally responsible for the reform scheme, which deserved respectful attention. Feb. 20.

A resolution giving procedence to the debate was carried by 203 to 145.— Mr. Dillon (N.) protested strongly against the campaign of calumny against Sir A. MacDonnell, when it was known that Lord Dudley approved his action.—Mr. Healy (N.) asked the Unionist members for Ulster, who were striving to retain their ascendency over the Catholics, to tell the country what their plan for governing Ireland was.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said that he still supported a fundamental alteration in the whole system of Irish government. No one had said a word in favour of the existing system. Sir A. MacDonnell had been selected with full knowledge of his views, and in censuring him the Govt. were inferentially blaming the Viceroy and Chief Secy. He challenged them to produce the whole correspondence. Arbitrary governm int had resulted in stagnation and want of enterprise, and the propositions contained in the amendment could not be disputed.—Mr. Balfour declared that there had been no concealment, and that Mr. Wyndham had promptly denounced the devolution scheme as soon as he knew of it. Sir A. MacDonnell had no authority to initiate legislative projects independently. If a Civil servant were given such power the Cabinet might find itself committed to a policy of which it had not previously heard. As to Lord Dudley, he, no oubt, did discuss the matter with Sir A. MacDonnell, and he understood from him that Mr. Wyndham knew of it. In this he was mistaken, and in consequence of this mistake—that Lord Dudley thought that the Chief Secv. was aware—the misunderstanding arose, but the honour of neither was in any way affected. Passing to the amendment, he said Home Rule was neither deed nor swooning, but a living and burning question. The Liberal party were being driven by the Nationalists once more. The battle for the Union was not over, and the Unionist party must sink all minor differences.—The amendment was rejected by 286 to 236. Feb. 21.

Mr. Wyndham stated that the terms of Sir A. MacDonnell's appointment had not been altered, but he had been told that the Chief Secy. should see any matter that was likely to be the subject of debate in the House.—Mr. Redmond (N.) moved the adjournment to call attention to the conditions under which Sir A. MacDonnell held his office, and urged that the situation should be thoroughly cleared up. He demanded the production of the correspondence.—Mr. Wyndham said he was prepared to read the letters, and did so.-Mr. J. Morley (L.) said the correspondence was honourable to both parties, but it showed a picture of the confusion in the Irish government.— Mr. Balfour said the letters gave no support to any idea of devolution. As to the appointment of Sir A. MacDonnell, it was temporary, and did not differ from other Civil appointments. The correspondence showed that he had asked for nothing more than was granted to heads of great departments who had to advise the Govt. The matter had been greatly exaggerated, and the Govt. had now made their position clear, both as to the terms of Sir A. MacDonnell's appointment and as to the policy to which, in an unfortunate moment, he had committed himself, but not them --Mr. Asquith (L) said Sir A. MacDonnell had a right to assume that what he did was approved of by the Govt., and yet he was censured.—The motion was rejected by 265 to 223. Feb. 22.

Mr. Balfour stated that Lord Dudley had expressed unhesitating disapproval of the proposal to invest a legislative body in Ireland with power to deal with measures not in the nature of private Bills.

Frb. 27.

Mr. Balfour announced, with the deepest regret, the resignation of Mr. Wyndham, on the ground, in addition to ill-health, that he felt that the recent controversy had greatly impaired, if not wholly destroyed, his power of doing valuable work in the office which he held. He was unable to make a statement to the House until he was sufficiently restored to health.

March 6.

Mr. Long (C.), the new Chief Secy., said that his relations with Sir A. MacDonnell would be the same as those between himself and the permanent heads of departments in England. The Under Secy. would be able to express opinions on administrative acts and to advise on acts of policy, but everything would be subject to the Chief Secy.'s approval, and he intended to exercise to the full his powers of supervision and control.

April 11.

Mr. Hayden (N.) called attention to the distress in the West of Ireland, and moved a resolution censuring the Govt. for having failed to meet it.—Mr. J. Redmond (N.) declared that the Land Act of 1903 had failed utterly to solve the problem of the chronic poverty in Connaught.—Mr. Atkinson (C.), Atty.-Genl., said it was not humanly possible to devise a sudden remedy for the chronic poverty that prevailed, but the efforts made to improve the conditions of the people had resulted in restricting its area. He described the steps taken by the authorities to meet the distress. The Land Act had only been in operation since November, 1903; and a large amount of land had been already purchased for the benefit of the people.—The resolution was rejected by 192 to 144.

March 14.

Mr. Wyndham explained the reasons for his resignation of the Chief Secretaryship. He said it was due to no difference with the Ministry on any issue of policy, or in regard to the administration of Ireland. He held the maintenance of the Union to be the fundamental principle of Irish policy and plans for devolution to be, from some points of view, worse than Home Rule. Circumstances had convinced him that he could best assist the Govt. and his party as an independent member. For the misunderstandings that had occurred he had been partly to blame. He had always desired to promote social reforms in Ireland, he had never been in favour of a financial board, or of any delegation of large legislative powers. He had failed to give adequate attention to the earlier proceedings of the Irish Reform Association, and to the programme published by them in August, 1904. He was away at the time, and no copy was sent to him; but Sir A. McDonnell wrote him a letter, the contents of which he could not recall. The Under-Secy., however, was sincerely, though erroneously, under the belief that he would not object to those proposals. Thus there were misunderstandings and misconceptions, and he came to the conclusion that his power to do useful work had ended.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman moved a resolution demanding the publication of the correspondence in the matter. He charged the Govt. with inconsistency of policy. The ascendency party, he said, had driven Mr. Wyndham from office. The Govt. allowed a small fraction of the Irish people to make use of the British Govt. for the purpose of upholding special privileges against the rights and liberties of other Irishmen. Nothing in Mr. Wyndham's explanation affected the main question, which was why Mr. Balfour accepted his resignation. The House was entitled to have full information. Lord Dudley had made no secret of his sympathies with the projected reforms, yet he remained at his post. The English people would not for long regard as true Unionists a party that flattered, cajoled, and then abandoned Ireland.—Mr. W. O'Brien (N.) said Mr. Wyndham's one mistake was committed when he surrendered at the bidding of the Orange faction.—Mr. Moore (C.) protested against the retention of Sir A. McDonnell, who was influenced by political bias, and was regarded as a Nationalist partisan.—Mr. Dillon (N.) complained that the real facts of the case were concealed. The Govt. should state clearly why Sir A. McDonnell was censured .- Mr. Balfour denied that there had been any new departure in Irish policy when Mr. Wyndham entered the Cabinet. The points discussed between him and Sir A. McDonnell were the maintenance of law and order, land purchase, co-ordination, and the University question, which were entirely different from devolution. Mr. Wyndham was quite justified in seeking to bring together the contending parties, but no departure from Unionist principles was contemplated. Devolution would be worse than Home Rule, for it would not satisfy the Nationalists, and was repudiated by the loyalist minority. He described the first duty of the Govt. as being to secure obedience to the law and respect for private rights. The Union was necessary, on Imperial grounds, and because Ireland needed the powerful support of Great Britain.—Mr. Asquith (L.) having spoken, the motion was rejected by 315 to 252. May 9.

L—Referring to a Nationalist meeting in Co. Monaghan, where an inflammatory address suggesting outrage and murder was delivered, Lord Londonderry said that care would be taken that the power of the United Irish League did not increase, and Mr. Long, the Chief Secy., would insist on law and order being upheld.

May 25.

C—In Supply, on the vote for the Chief-Secy.'s Office, Mr. J. Redmond attacked the administration in Ireland, and the appointment of Mr. Long, who, he said, desired to tighten the grip of the Irish minority upon affairs. The Land Act was administered at the dictation of the Executive so as to destroy its usefulness, and bogus outrages were being manufactured. The Executive were now following a provocative course which would create lawlessness and disturbance. Such a policy would never lead to conciliation. He moved to reduce the vote.—Mr. Moore (C.) expressed satisfaction at the recent change of policy in Ireland, but said he could not have confidence in Lord Dudley or Sir A. McDonnell.—Other members having spoken, Mr. Long said that if by "governing Ireland according to Irish ideas" Home Rule was meant, the Govt. were unalterably opposed to it. A policy of conciliation was compatible with strong government, and the two policies must proceed hand in hand. He desired to accelerate the operation of the Land Act. The charge of manufacturing crime so as to justify coercion and get rid of Sir A. McDonnell, he indignantly repudiated. Ireland was free from ordinary crime, but in places there had been some deplorable actions, which, if continued, must undermine society. He was determined to do his best to protect life and property.—The reduction was rejected by 145 to 98.

May 25.

Mr. J. Redmond moved the adjournment as a censure on the Govt. for putting the Crimes Act in operation in Galway, which, he said, was absolutely free from crime. —Mr. J. Gordon (L.U.) read several local resolutions in which the graziers of Galway were threatened.—Mr. Long denied that he had been influenced by bogus outrages. Overt crime had decreased in Ireland, but illegal pressure was exercised on holders of grazing lands. Special measures were justified by the condition of some districts.—The motion was rejected by 176 to 136.

July 4.

In Supply, on the vote for law charges and criminal prosecutions, Mr. J. Devlin (N.) moved a reduction and called attention to prosecutions in Galway for tumultuous and unlawful assembly and for intimidation.—Mr. Atkinson replied.—The amendment was rejected by 269 to 200.

July 25.

HOME RULE.—Mr. Tuff (C.) called attention to the speeches of members of the Opposition on the question of Home Rule, and moved that, in view of their leaders' conflicting statements, Sir H. C.-Bannerman ought explicitly to declare whether or not it was his intention to recommend to the electors of the United Kingdom the policy of establishing a Parliament in Ireland.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman said the motion was intended to provide the Unionist party with a field day on which they could show some appearance of unity. The question raised by it was one of the gravest that could affect the country. He disputed the right of an hon. member to challenge his opinions upon it, but they were well known, and twenty years' experience had strengthened them. Did the present system of government enjoy the confidence of any section of the Irish people? The old remedy was coercion, but England had become sick of it. The elective principle evolving popular control was the only principle which would avail, but he declined to go into the details of any scheme.—Mr. J. Redmond said the Irish party would not budge one inch on this question. The existing Govt. was one of usurpation. Home Rule was an urgent and insistent question, which would knock loudly at the door of the next Parliament.—Mr. Balfour said it was evident that nothing short of the Bills of 1886 or 1893 would be accepted, and the leader of the Opposition had not made his views clear or disclosed his policy for the next election. He could not do so without being repudiated by members of his own party. If the Liberals obtained a large majority in the next Parliament then the Nationalists might whistle for Home Rule, but, if a small majority, then it would be, "in Heaven's name justice for Ireland." Home Rule for Ireland would be fatal to Ireland and to England; and the Unionist party were absolutely unanimous that the unity of the kingdom should be preserved.—The debate was adjourned, and was not resumed.

April 12

LABOURERS.—In the debate on the Address, Capt. Donelan (N.) moved an amend ment regretting that no legislation was proposed dealing with the condition of the labourers in Ireland.—Mr. Atkinson (C.) Atty.-Genl., argued that the Govt. Bill of 1904 carried out their pledges and that they were not answerable for its failure. They were willing to expedite schemes for cottages, but could not provide money at a cheaper rate.—Mr. J. Redmond said the Bill of 1904 was worthless.—The amendment was rejected by 228 to 184.

March 1.

Land Question.—Mr. K. O'Brien (N.) moved a resolution that Ministers had not fulfilled expectations as to reinstatement of evicted tenants, and asking for fresh legislation.—Mr. J. Redmond said that while the number of evicted tenants was 4,550, the number reinstated was only 137 in all. The Land Act had been a complete failure as far as they were concerned.—Mr. Atkinson (C.), Atty, Genl., denied that the 4,550 claims were all genuine, and said that a large majority of the farms were in the occupation of planters, or held by the landlords, or let to graziers. The landlords declined to evict the planters. The Commissioners were endeavouring to benefit the evicted tenants by securing untenanted land in order to increase uneconomic holdings.—Mr. Morley said one charge against the Govt. was that they had limited and curtailed the Commissioners' action.—The motion was rejected by 220 to 182.

March 7.

In Supply, on a supplementary vote for the Irish Land Commission, the Nationalist members raised several questions relating to the Land Act of 1903, and Mr. Cullinan moved a reduction.—Mr. Atkinson said he would be glad to have more funds for the Estates Commissioners, as there was a glut of applications, shewing that the Act was a success. The reinstatement of evicted tenants was progressing.—The amendment was rejected by 246 to 218, and after the closure had been carried, the vote was passed after another division.

March 9.

In the debate on a vote on account for Civil Services, Mr. Blake (N.) moved a reduction to call attention to matters connected with the Irish Land Act. Other members having spoken, Mr. Long (C.), Chief Secy., replied, stating that the Govt. would give attention to the glut of work in the Land Court.—The reduction was negatived by 224 to 150.

March 20.

Mr. Ffrench (N.) moved a resolution condemning the Land Act as a failure, and in favour of compulsory purchase.—Mr. Long denied the contention. Advances up to 20 millions had already been applied for, and the average reduction in the tenants annual payments was 25.9 per cent. For two years this was a good record. Under compulsory purchase the land would not be obtained on cheaper terms.—The resolution was rejected by 139 to 104.

March 21

Mr. T. P. O'Connor (N.) moved the adjournment to call attention to the action of the Govt. in assisting the landlord to evict a tenant at Dursey Island. He complained that naval forces had been used to evict one man, on an almost barren island.—
Mr. Long replied that the sheriff called for aid in carrying out the decree of a Court, and the Executive Govt. had no choice but to obey. The law was the same in every part of the United Kingdom. The police had carried out their duty with a minimum of violence.—The motion was rejected by 134 to 74.

May 3.

L—Lord Dunraven called attention to an interim report of the Estates Commissioners under the Act of 1903, and the Govt. regulations, which he said nullified the intentions of Parliament.—Lord Londonderry disputed this assertion, and explained the action of the Irish Govt.

July 14

6—In Supply, on the vote for the Irish Land Commission, Mr. Long explained his proposals for expediting the work under the Land Act. The purchase applications involved nearly 28 millions. The Treasury had issued stock to the amount of nearly 10 millions, so that a sum of about 18 millions was required. It was not desirable to issue more than 5 millions a year, and the best way to relieve the block of business experimentally would be to alter the Act, so as to enable vendors who were willing to do so to accept part of the purchase-money in stock instead of cash. He proposed that two-thirds should be the maximum so payable, and the stock would be taken at its If vendors were willing, purchasing would not be affected injuriously, and the landlords who fell in with the scheme would derive some advantages. it would be an optional matter.—Mr. J. Redmond moved to reduce the vote, and said the scheme was proposed without consultation with the Irish representatives. Act of 1903 had broken down. It had failed to put an end to the land war, for the congestion in the West continued, the cattle ranches had not been touched, and little or nothing had been done for the evicted tenants. The new regulations of the Estates Commissioners had placed almost insuperable difficulties in the way of their obtaining untenanted land for the settlement of evicted tenants and for the improvement of holdings.—Col. Saunderson (C.) approved of Mr. Long's plan for expediting sales as a partial solution of the financial deadlock.—Mr. T. W. Russell (L.) said the instructions to the Commissioners were one-sided, and the landlords in the West were refusing to sell, preferring to deal directly with their tenants at exorbitant prices.—Mr. Atkinson (C.) said the main object of the Act was to convert the tenants into owners by voluntary process, and the Govt. could not allow it to be made compulsory by the agency of intimidation and crime.—Mr. Long said that the Act had not failed, and also that the Congested Districts Board had dealt with, in all, 215,000 acres.—On a division Mr. Redmond's amendment was carried by 199 to 196—majority, 3. The Govt. were therefore defeated. (See under "Government, Defeat of the," ante.)

July 20.

Mr. Balfour stated that the Govt. intended to adhere to their regulations for the Irish Estates Commissioners, and that if Mr. Long's Bill was opposed by the Nationalist members it would not be proceeded with.

July 25.

RAILWAYS.—Mr. O'Shaughnessy (N.) moved a resolution declaring that excessive railway rates and defective transit facilities were a bar to the material advancement of Ireland and should receive immediate attention.—Mr. Atkinson (C.) said the question was largely one of capital, which had to be found by England. The Govt. would accept the resolution, which was carried.

March 15.

Govt. would accept the resolution, which was carried.

Town Tenants Bill.—Mr. P. O'Brien (N.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to give the tenants of urban holdings in Ireland a right to compensation for improvements in the premises.—Sir J. Colomb (C.) moved its rejection, and the Govt. leaving the question open, the Bill was read a second time by 146 to 89, and referred to the Grand Committee on Law.

March 24.

July 18.

The Bill was reported on July 10, and further considered.

G—Labour Questions—Coal Mines.—Mr. Rickett (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to compel employers to provide further facilities for check-weighing in coal mines.—Agreed to, and referred to the Standing Committee on Trade.

March 31.

The Bill subsequently passed. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 9, post.)

MINES—EIGHT HOURS BILL.—Mr. Jacoby (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to limit work underground, for youths under 18, to eight hours a day from bank to bank. After much discussion, on familiar lines, the motion was carried by 190 to 132.

March 17.

L—Shors (Sunday Closing) Bill.—Lord Avebury (I.U.) moved the 2nd R. of this Bill to prohibit the Sunday opening of shops and the sale of articles in the streets, by adding to the penalties under the existing law, but exempting the sale of intoxicating liquor, tobacco, and newspapers. The Bill allowed the sale of milk, vegetables, fruit, &c., up to 9 a.m.—After some discussion the 2nd R. was agreed to, and the Bil was referred to a Select Committee.

March 14.

On the motion to go into Committee on the return of the Bill from the Select Committee, Lord Lansdowne described the Bill as a piece of patchwork which could not with advantage be passed. It would operate unfairly and oppress small traders.—
Lord Spencer (L.) agreed that it was doubtful whether it would be judicious to pass the Bill.—The motion to go into Committee was rejected by 35 to 14. June 28.

C—TRADE UNIONS BILL.—Mr. Whittaker (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to make it lawful for the agents of a trade union to picket premises for the purpose of peacefully persuading any person to abstain from working; and for a combination to do any act in furtherance of a trade dispute if such act could be done by one person with impunity; and to exempt a Trade Union from liability for the action of any of its members.—Sir T. Wrightson (C.) moved the rejection of the Bill on the ground that the Royal Commission appointed in 1903 had not reported.—Mr. Asquith (L.) supported the Bill, maintaining that recent legal decisions had made it necessary. The law of conspiracy and agency had been interpreted in a way which the Legislature did not contemplate, and the legitimate exercise of the right of picketing had been curtailed. Peaceful suasion must be permitted. Liability to civil proceedings in cases which were removed from the criminal law of conspiracy by the Act of 1875 should be abolished, and protection should be restored to trade union funds, which had been taken away by the Taff Vale case. The Bill should be referred to a standing committee.—Sir R. Finlay (L.U.), Atty.-Genl., argued that trade combinations ought not to be exempted from the general law without waiting for the Commission's report. The third clause proposed that trade unions should be exempted from a pecuniary liability which attached to all corporations and individuals. They were, under the ordinary law, exempt from liability for acts which they had not authorised. The unions might adopt the simple expedient of separating the funds for fighting purposes from those available for sick pay. The second clause would legalize boycotting, and might enable combinations of employers to retaliate. Peaceful persuasion unaccompanied by "watching or besetting" entailed no liability under the law, but the Bill would legalize watching and besetting even if it were a "nuisance" at common law. The Bill would put trade unions above the law. He should vote against it; but the Govt. would put no pressure on members.—The closure having been carried by 244 to 123 the rejection of the Bill was negatived by a majority of 97, and the 2nd R. was agreed to by 252 to 130. The Bill was afterwards sent to the Standing Committee on Law. March 10.

In the Standing Committee, on Cl. 1 (legalizing picketing for peacefully obtaining or communicating information; and for peacefully persuading to work or abstain from working), Mr. Atherley-Jones (L.) moved to legalize picketing for the purpose of advising men not to enter into a contract, or lawfully to determine the employment. The picket to be limited to three persons.—Negatived.—Mr. Galloway (C.) proposed to limit the picket to two persons.—Mr. Burns (L.) opposed the amendment, and said they might just as well prohibit picketing altogether.—After much debate the amendment was withdrawn.

April 3.

Mr. Cripps (C.) moved to insert words providing that the right of peaceful picketing should not include anything in the way of molestation or intimidation.—Mr. Whittaker opposed, as all offences against the person were punishable by the ordinary law. The question of nuisance was more difficult, but the amendment would make all peaceful picketing impossible. The promoters would accept words limiting it to acts done in a reasonable manner and without threat or intimidation." The trade unions did not desire to do wrong.—Sir R. Reid (L.) contended that it was far better to say in plain simple English what people might lawfully do.—Sir E. Carson (C.), Solr. Genl., supported the limitation proposed.—Sir C. Dilke (L.) said it would wreck the Bill, as it would leave the Judges to decide whether an act was "calculated" to lead to intimidation.—On a division, 26 voted for and 26 against the amendment, and the Chairman gave his vote for the "Noes."

Mr. Galloway moved to prevent picketing at a man's home.—Mr. Burns said the words proposed to be deleted were in Section 5 and contended that workmen had the right to go to the house of a hesitating fellow workman to persuade him peacefully.—Rejected by 32 to 18.—Mr. Galloway moved words to prevent a person from being followed about from place to place. The first sub-section was carried by 28 to 23.—Mr. Galloway moved to allow picketing "for the purpose of protecting any person at work or going to or returning from work."—Negatived by 29 to 24.—Sir C. Renshaw (C.) moved that the law relating to riot, unlawful assembly, nuisance, breach of the peace, or sedition, or any offence against the person, State, or Sovereign should not be affected by the Bill.—The amendment was rejected by 28 to 23.

April 12.

Mr. Galloway moved to add a proviso that no persons should, after being requested by any person annoyed by his conduct, or by any constable instructed by such person, to move away, so act as wilfully to obstruct, insult, or annoy such person.—Carried by 20 to 17. The Clause was carried by 27 to 12.

On Cl. 2, which ran as follows:—"An agreement or combination by two or more persons to do or procure to be done any act in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute shall not be ground for an action, if such act when committed by one person would not be ground for an action," Mr. Duke (C.) moved to render illegal acts which "caused damage or loss."—Sir R. Reid said that a body of workmen ought not be liable to an action if they said to their employer that they would not work with a particular man.—The amendment was defeated by 25 to 24.

May 3.

Mr. Whittaker stated that the acceptance of Mr. Galloway's amendment to Cl. I (May 3) was regarded by the promoters of the Bill as reducing it to an absurdity. He moved that the Bill be not further proceeded with.—Sir E. Carson said this was an attempt to get rid of a Bill which could not possibly pass this year. The amendment simply provided that no one should act so as wilfully to obstruct, insult or annoy

Were they to understand that "peaceful picketing" included such acts? The Labour members were trying to dictate to the Committee.—Mr. Atherley Jones (L.) threw the responsibility for the loss of the Bill upon the Govt.—The motion was rejected by 26 to 22.—The consideration of Cl. 2 was resumed.—Sir E. Carson opposed it as a whole, as a bad example of class legislation, making the law of conspiracy in trade disputes different from conspiracy in other relations.—The promoters of the Bill thereupon intimated their intention to refuse to take any further part in the discussion and left their places.—Cl. 2 was then struck out of the Bill.—On Cl. 3 (disallowing actions against trade unions for damages by reason of the action of any member thereof) Sir C. Renshaw (C.) moved an addition, disallowing such actions unless the acts complained of were done by a person who could lawfully be held to be an agent of the union, or unless the acts were ratified by the union. It also exempted the benevolent or charitable funds of the union from liability for damages due to acts done in furtherance of trade disputes. This was carried, and the clause, as amended, agreed to The Bill was ordered to be reported to the House. May 8.

It was afterwards withdrawn by its promoters.

*Unemployed Workmen Bill.—Mr. G. Balfour (C.), Pres. Local Govt. Bd., introduced a Bill to set up a local body in each metropolitan borough and a central body for the whole, whose duty would be to inquire into the cases of applicants for employment and to classify them according as they were proper objects of ordinary Poor Law relief or persons unable to obtain work from exceptional causes. The central body would supervise the local bodies and establish labour exchanges and registries. The local bodies would endeavour to obtain employment for applicants, but were not to provide work. This power would be in the central body and be discretionary, and they would be able to draw to a very limited extent upon the rates. The organisation for the country differed from that proposed for London. The central funds would be supplied partly by voluntary contributions.—Read a first time.

April 18.

Mr. G. Balfour moved the 2nd R. of the Bill. He pointed out that it did not pretend to deal with the whole question, but was designed to assist a limited class and to exclude loafers, casual labourers and men out of work through their own fault. It would benefit respectable workmen temporarily out of work from causes beyond their control. For 20 years local authorities had at times given relief by special employment, without disfranchisement, and their action been had approved by committees of the House. If the Bill passed, employment would be given under proper conditions, and a permanent machinery would be set up for organization of relief. The difficulty of discriminating between those who ought to be relieved by employment and those who ought not, was, no doubt, great, but it was not impossible. The rates were only to be drawn upon to defray the cost of establishing local and central bodies, to provide and maintain labour exchanges, to assist migration and emigration, and to acquire, equip and maintain farm colonies. Farm colonies could not be improvised in times of distress, but should be established for persons who could be trained to agriculture and who would then emigrate or go from town to country life. To prevent the unemployed in the country being attracted to London, a residential qualification of not less than 12 months would be proposed.—Sir G. Bartley (C.) moved an amendment hostile to the Bill as destructive of self-reliance and independence among the poor.—Mr. Buxton (L.) admitted that it involved risks, but the House ought to be prepared to take them.—Mr. H. Lawson (C.) hoped that the measure would be made compulsory everywhere.—Mr. Cripps (C.) protested against teaching the thriftless that they had a right of employment at the expense of the thrifty.—Mr. Long (C.) said the opponents of the Bill had not proposed any practical alternatives. The labour difficulty of last winter had impressed him greatly, and the House ought not to tell the deserving unemployed in times of distress that nothing could be done for them. Under the Poor Law system, a man temporarily unable to maintain himself must either starve or become a pauper. The Bill would effect reform without weakening the foundations of the Poor Law. The amendment was rejected by 228 to 11 and the Bill was read a second time. June 20.

Mr. Balfour stated that the Bill could only pass if it were treated as non-controversial, and even then the part of it which would enable labour to be paid for out of the rates must be dropped.

July 13

In Committee, Mr. G. Balfour moved to omit the words sanctioning the use of the rates for the payment of labour on farm colonies, and other matters.—Carried by 182 to 108. Other amendments were considered, and the Bill was read a third time-Aug. 7, and subsequently passed the House of Lords. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 18, post)

L—*Workmen's Compensation Bill.—Lord Belper (L.U.) moved the 2nd R. of this Bill, one of the objects being to do away with uncertainty as to the extent of liability. Discretion would be more largely left to the Court. The Bill included a number of trades and occupations not under the existing law: it made the operation of the Act of 1897 more simple and certain by doing away with litigation, and securing fair compensation in dangerous occupations.—After some discussion the Bill was read a second time.

April 4.

In Committee an amendment by Lord Davey (L.) providing that notice of an accident should be given within 14 days after the accident (instead of six) was defeated by 56 to 18. The Bill passed through Committee and was subsequently read a third time.

- C—Mr. Akers-Douglas (C.), Home Secy., moved the 2nd R., and stated the changes which it would effect in the Act of 1897, as recommended by the report of a departmental committee in 1903. Seamen were not included because they could be best dealt with by extending the Merchant Shipping Act. He hoped the Bill would relieve both employers and workmen from anomalies and hardships by simplifying the working; of the Act of 1897, making it less expensive, and removing the temptation to litigation.—Mr. Tennant (L.) moved an amendment in favour of including provisions for compensation for injury to health in "dangerous trades."—The debate was adjourned. June 5. The Bill was subsequently withdrawn.
- C—Land Values Bill.—Mr. Trevelyan (L) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to enact that all valuation lists for local rates should contain a separate assessment of land values, that where houses were unoccupied the land alone should be rated, and that where the land value of premises exceeded the present rateable value, rates should be paid thereon.—Mr. Remnant(C.) moved to reject the Bill, and moved an amendmentdeclaring that reform of local taxation must be by legislation securing fair and equitable results to all classes.—Mr. Asquith (L.) supported the Bill as leading to a reduction in the rates.
 —Sir J. Rolleston (C.) contended that no one ought to be rated on speculative values.
 —Mr. Grant-Lawson (C.), Secy. Local Govt. Bd., said he regarded this as a confiscating measure. The local spending authorities thought that they had discovered a gold mine, but no Commission or Committee had recommended it. There was enormous practical difficulty in valuing sites apart from structures, and enormous expenditure would be entailed. If a community wanted land for any lawful purpose it could obtain it by Provisional Order.—The amendment was rejected by 202 to 112, and the 2nd R. was agreed to, April 14.—The Bill was subsequently dropped.
- L—Legal Questions.—*CRIMINAL CASES BILL.—Lord Halsbury (C.), Ld. Chancellor, moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to give power to the High Court to compel a case to be stated on points of law arising in criminal trials, and to permit the re-trial at assizes of cases tried at quarter-sessions.—Agreed to.

 May 9.

 The Bill was subsequently withdrawn in the House of Commons.

L—Licensing—Intoxicating Liquors (Hours of Closing) Bill.—The Abp. of Canterbury moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to give power to licensing justices to impose conditions as to hours of closing of public-houses, except for guests in hotels; the justices to have regard to representations from inhabitants and resolutions of local authorities.—Lord Wemyss (C.) opposed the Bill as another attempt to worry the publican by fresh restrictive legislation.—Lord Belper (L.U.) also opposed the principle of the Bill as throwing upon local justices the duty which ought to be prescribed by Parliament.—Lord Halsbury (C.), Ld. Chancellor, said the Bill would do nothing to reduce drunkenness, and that recent legislation ought to be allowed a trial.—The Bill was rejected by 66 to 60.

—LIQUOR TRAFFIC LOCAL VETO (SCOTLAND) BILL.—Mr. Craig (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to give the inhabitants of local areas the right to prohibit the sale of intoxicants at any time, or to limit the hours during which they could be sold.—Sir L. McIver (L.U.) opposed the Bill as an unwarrantable interference with private rights, and as class legislation affecting the poor but not the rich.—Mr. Dickson (C.), Ld. Advocate, said the Bill made no provision for compensation, nor did it give a reasonable notice. A chance majority was given extreme powers in licensing matters over a whole district.—Sir R. Reid (L.) said that local option, if granted to Scotland, was not likely to be largely exercised.—The Bill was rejected by 142 to 109.

May 29.

May 29.

SUNDAY CLOSING BILL.—Mr. Perks (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to prohibit in England the sale on Sunday of wine, spirits and beer to anyone except a bona fide traveller or lodger.—Sir J. Fergusson (C.) moved its rejection, contending that it interfered unduly with the liberty of the subject.—Mr. Cochrane (L.U.), Under Secy., said this was an extreme measure; and it had not been shown to be necessary. The only logical conclusion of the arguments on its behalf was total prohibition. Sundayclosing in Scotland had led to illegitimate drinking:—The Bill was rejected by 114 to 108. May 26.

- C—Local Government.—Women.—Dr. Shipman (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to make women eligible for election to county and borough councils, on the same conditions as men.—Sir W. Tomlinson (C.) moved its rejection, but after debate the amendment was rejected by 175 to 25, and the 2nd R. was carried after another division. March 31.
- Cincle Objections.—Education.—Sir W. Anson, speaking on the condition of the non-provided schools in Lendon, said that the condemnation by the County Council of many voluntary schools raised serious questions of municipal administration and experiture. In any case any deficiency of accommodation would have had to be supplied by the public at some time. The burden had not been increased by the Education Act.—The discussion was continued by other members.

 April 18.

POET AND DOCKS BILL.—Mr. Benn (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill similar to the Govt. Bill of 1894, but giving a larger representation to the London County Council.—Lord A. Compton (L.U.) spoke against it, and Mr. Bonar Law (C.), representing the Govt., insisted that a subject of such importance must be dealt with by the Govt., if at all.—The Bill was rejected by 191 to 123.

April 13.

TRAMWAYS.—Mr. Whitmore (C.), on consideration of the London County Council (Tramways) Bill, moved to strike out the clauses sanctioning tramways on Blackfriars and Westminster Bridges and the Embankment. On a division the numbers (171) were equal, and the Speaker voted with the "noes" so as to enable the Committee to consider the matter.

April 3.

L—On the 2nd R. of the Bill, Lord Ridley (C.) moved its rejection, and after much debate the motion was carried by 64 to 33.

July 18.

C—Marriage Law.—Col. Denny (C.) moved the 2nd R. of the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill, being the same measure as that which was carried in 1903, with some alterations to meet the objections of opponents.—Mr. Boscawen (C.) repeated the arguments against the Bill and moved its rejection.—After long debate the 2nd R. was carried by 149 to 64, and the Bill was referred to the Standing Committee on Law after another division.

April 7.

L—Earl Russell (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to amend the law of divorce.— Rejected by 44 to 4.

Aug. 1.

MINES BILLS.—See under LABOUR QUESTIONS.

6-Meter-Cars.—On the vote for the Local Government Board in Committee of Supply there was a long discussion on the subject of motor-cars.—Mr. Long (C.) said that when president of the Local Government Board he had never promised that local authorities would be given discretionary power to impose speed limits. The final decision must in all cases rest with that Board. There was danger in a speed limit, because careless people thought they could always drive at the maximum rate.-Mr. Soares moved to reduce the salary of the President, describing the state of things on some of the roads as intolerable. Fines did not vindicate the law, and power to imprison a reckless driver should be given.—Mr. A. Stanley (C.), as chairman of the Automobile Club, said that the club had determined to expel members who transgressed. The one blot in the Act was the speed limit, which ought to be abolished, and the law should require people to drive with due regard to the public safety, with heavier penalties for breach of it.—Sir H. Fowler (L.) said that local authorities ought to be given more power to regulate motor traffic.—Mr. G. Balfour, Pres. Local Govt. Bd., agreed that public safety could be better secured without the speed limit. The existing Act would be reintroduced in 1906 in an amended form, and in the meantime there would be a full enquiry. June 1.

L—Lord Windsor (C.), First Commr. of Works, stated that he had placed temporary restrictions on the use of Hyde Park by motor-cars on the grounds of noise, dust, danger, and smell.

July 3.

6—Mr. Balfour announced that an enquiry into the working of the Motor Car Act would be conducted by a Royal Commission.

July 10.

L—Navy, The.—Lord Ellenborough (C) called attention to the public danger which might arise during the first few days of a contest with a first-class Power, and asked whether the Admiralty had power to check the dissemination of news and to take other precautions against attack.—Lord Selborne (L.U.), First Lord of the Admy., said the difficulties of a naval invasion had been greatly underrated. The matter was engaging the attention of the Defence Committee. No change was necessary in the law for securing the country against surprise, and existing powers were adequate. The Japanese had had full power to prevent the dissemination of news and the question ought to be considered here.

March 3.

6-On going into Supply on the Navy Estimates, Mr. Pretyman made the usual statement as to naval policy, premising that naval administration had never been, and ought not to be, treated as a party question. Explaining the published statement, he said there was a large reduction in expenditure. Reforms were being carried out in the redistribution of the Fleet and the elimination of out-of-date ships. Increased mobility would avoid the multiplication of naval bases, and would enable the Admiralty to reduce the number of ships. Armoured cruisers and wireless telegraphy were two important new factors on which the scheme of the Admiralty was primarily based; the number of ships removed from the first line was about 160, and heavy expenses would be incurred only for vessels which would be instantaneously ready for war. The training system at Osborne, he said, was an unqualified success. Greater latitude had been given to officers in regard to gunnery. Thirteen submarines had been built and ten more were building; all had so far proved reliable. programme of new construction was based on considerations of efficiency alone.—Mr. E. Robertson (L) asked for a full list of the ships that were to be removed and other information.—Mr. McCrae (L.) moved an amendment approving of the reduction in the Estimates, but regretting that still further relief had not been obtained by negotiations with Foreign Powers for a general reduction of naval armaments.—Rejected by 220 to 164.

After further discussion the closure was carried by 249 to 198, and, after another division, the House went into Committee, and the vote for men was put from the chair pro forma, but not proceeded with.

March 7.

Mr. E. Robertson, on the vote for men, complained that sufficient information had not been given and moved to report progress.—Mr. Pretyman replied, and the motion was rejected by 181 to 160.—Mr. E. Robertson contended that the reasons for the expenditure in 1904 and in the preceding year had never been made plain.—Mr. Pretyman said that as to the distribution of the Fleet, he deprecated discussion of details: the subject should be regarded as a whole, considered from the point of view of the capacity of the Fleet. The essential feature was extreme mobility, which enabled it to command a very much larger area without multiplying bases. The Admiralty had increased the fighting efficiency of the Fleet and at the same time reduced the Estimates by £3,500,000, by laying up a number of ships which would not need repairing. Great attention had been paid recently to night-firing, Morris-tube practice, the improvement of gun-sighting, and the administration of dockyards. The proposed naval base at Rosyth was still regarded as of great eventual value, but the policy to be pursued in 1905 was not yet decided.—Lord G. Hamilton (C.) warmly approved of the main features of the naval policy In time of war our fleets should be concentrated in certain places, no matter what the consequences might be to There should be a small permanent committee appointed to consider designs of ships, and a change would be made in our system of harbour defence by entrusting it to the Marines. Eventually the closure was carried by 205 to 141, and vote was passed after another division. March 13.

On the wages vote, the discussion was continued.—Mr. Pretyman replied on many points which had been raised. He justified the punishment of lads by birching or caning, as being better for boys than confinement. There was no foundation for the charge that punishment had been inflicted unjustly or cruelly. As to destroyers, they were quite up to date. Every new ship would be constructed to carry oil fuel as well as coal. There was no intention to return to the use of Belleville boilers -Mr. Labouchere moved to reduce the vote by £600,000, equivalent to the wages of 10,000 men, contending that as 160 ships were to be removed from the commissioned list the personnel was unnecessarily large. Negatived by 262 to 128.—Mr. MacNeill proposed a reduction as a protest against flogging by birch and cane in the Navy. -Mr. Pretyman repeated that any definite charge of cruelty would be at once enquired into. Boys in the Britannia were liable to the same corporal punishment as those in the seaman class. The amendment, after closure, was rejected by a majority March 14. of 84, and the vote was passed after another division.

The discussion of the Navy Estimates was resumed, on the vote for works, &c.—Mr. Lee (C.) Secy. to the Admy. said there was a decrease in the total expenditure, but an increase under certain heads. As to Rosyth the proposals of the Admiralty would be communicated to Parliament on the Loan Bill.—Mr. Whitley (L.) moved to reduce the vote, objecting to expenditure on works at Wei-hai-wei.—Mr. Lee explained that the money was for dredging a safe anchorage. Wei-hai-wei was to be used as a sanatorium.—

Negatived by 202 to 118.—Mr. Whitley moved a reduction, objecting to the expenditure on a cold-meat storage at Gibraltar,—Mr. Pretyman said the store would provide for the wants of the garrison in the event of its isolation.—Negatived by 151 to 101.—Mr. Whitley moved to reduce the vote for the Commander-in-Chief's residence at Chatham.—Rejected by a majority of 56.—The vote was then agreed to.—On the vote for the Admiralty, Mr. MacNeill protested against caning or birching boys in the Navy.—Mr. Pretyman justified judicious punishment as being better for growing boys than detention. The Admiralty were determined to prevent mock Courtsmartial in the gun-room.

May 18.

L—Lord Spencer (L.) called attention to the First Lord's published statements, and moved for returns. He criticised the great increase in the Estimates in recent years, and asked if some fixed factor could not be arrived at. The two-Power standard had been exceeded, although Russia could now be left out of the calculation. About 120 ships had been condemned, on which large sums had been expended. He doubted whether the enorm o 13 Estimates were justified.—Lord Goschen (C.) said the two-Power standard was gone, and so long as vast changes were going on abroad it was impossible to lay down any standard. The whole situation had changed and the expenditure was justified.—Lord Selborne said the Admiralty had directed their entire efforts to increasing the rapidity of construction which was absolutely necessary in view of development of other Naval Powers. He had never advocated a three-Power standard, which would be too great a drain on our strength; but we must balance one Power against the other, and our preparations did not go beyond that.—

Lord Spencer withdrew his motion.

March 21.

6—On Report of a vote for naval works, buildings and repairs, a discussion took place on the cost of the buildings at Gibraltar, the loan of £50,000 to N.S. Wales for store buildings, and the dredging at Wei-hai-wei. An amendment to the vote was negatived by a majority of 58.

June 5.

The Shipbuilding vote was considered in Supply, and a general discussion took place.—Mr. Pretyman justified the decision to get rid of obsolete ships. The increase of efficiency was enormous, and economy would be effected in addition. demned ships would be of no value in war as they could not defend our commerce against modern arm sured cruisers. The Fleet would have to protect our merchant ships in war as well as to destroy the enemy's fleet. As to Admiralty designs, they could not be made public from year to year as had been proposed.—Sir C. Dilke (L.) said it would be wise on the part of Ministers to be a little more communicative. Sir J. Colomb (C.) said the war in the East had proved that the line-of-battle ship decided an action, and not the torpedo-boat. The nation that was unprepared was lost.—Mr. Kearley (L.) complained that workmen at Devonport were being discharged in large numbers.—Mr. Pretyman said it was not true that the policy of the Admiralty had been suddenly changed, but it had been largely influenced by the teaching of the naval war between Russia and Japan. As to submarines, they were not more liable to accidents than other vessels. The Admiralty would be glad if they had never bee 1 invented; but they could not neglect to build them, as they were now a necessary factor in naval warfare. Stationary submarine mining defences were now considered to be a mistake and would be replaced mainly by gun power and by submarines. It was not intended to keep a large force in the Pacific with a view to obtaining the mastery of that ocean. We only wanted the same freedom for our commerce as was enjoyed by other nations; and our vessels in Australia and China were sufficient to protect British trade and interests. As to dockyard labour, Parliament could not be asked to vote money for men whose services were not required, but the process of dismissal was being carried out gradually.—An amendment by Mr. K. Hardie was rejected by 116 votes to 70, and the vote was passed. June 29.

On Report of the vote for shipbuilding, &c., various questions were discussed, including submarines, the naval station at Wei-hai-wei, and salvage appliances at dockyards.—A motion by Mr. Whitley (L.) to reduce the vote by £100 was closured (157 to 32), and rejected (115 to 84).—The wages of the dockyard workmen were also debated, and the vote was carried after closure by 115 to 74.

July 12.

L—Lord Brassey (L.) called attention to the report of the Select Committee on steamship subsidies and to the reserves of the Navy in ships and men.—Lord Linlithgow replied.

July 17.

C—The Opposition divided on a formal resolution for the introduction of the Naval Works L.ll, which was carried by 222 to 143.

July 18.

On a financial resolution moved for the same purpose, Mr. Lee explained that the total expenditure at Rosyth would be £2,500,000, at Chatham £70,000, and for Coast-guard purposes £200,000. In the next two years it was proposed to spend £5,835,000.

The system of Loan Bills would be discontinued as early as possible. The necessary works would be placed on the Estimates.—Resolution carried by 219 to 168. July 19. Mr. B. Law (C.), Secy. to the Bd. of Trade, referred to an alleged purchase by a German syndicate of a Welsh coal estate. He said the Govt. would object to the acquisition of anything like a monopoly of steam coal by foreigners.

July 20. Further debates and divisions on Naval Expenditure took place on July 31 and

Aug. 2 and 3.

*GOVERNMENT SHIPS BILL.—Mr. Pretyman (C.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to enable the King by Order in Council to make regulations bringing vessels such as the hospital ship Maine, and other Fleet auxiliaries under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and the Naval Discipline Act, in order to regulate discipline and to fix their status.—Debate adjourned.

The 2nd R. was carried by 201 to 164, May 31. Bill afterwards withdrawn.

*Naval Works Bill.—Mr. Lee moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to provide for the eventual issue of £5,835,000 to defray the cost of works sanctioned in previous The Admiralty had decided to push on the works at Rosyth and not to proceed with the Chatham Dockyard extension, as the latter was thought no longer to be necessary owing to the removal of many obsolete ships from the effective list. In future, warships would probably be fewer in number, and less berthing space would be required; but their individual power would be greater, and dock accommodation for larger vessels must be provided. Rosyth was considered to possess greater advantages than Chatham, and it would be a first-class naval base. Only the immediate needs of the Navy would be considered; nevertheless, the works now proposed would by themselves make Rosyth a naval base of the first class. The total estimated cost of the works was £2,500,000. The harbour at Gibraltar was practically completed.— Mr. Buchanan (L.) moved the rejection of the Bill, contending that by continuing the system of loan expenditure for naval works the Sinking Fund was ineffective and the credit of the country injured.—Mr. E. Robertson (L.) said the time had come to put an end to this loan system.—Mr. A. Chamberlain (L.U.), Chan. of Exchr., agreed that borrowings for capital expenditure should be reserved for exceptional occasions, and explained the views of the Govt. on the point. Any new works not connected with those in the Bill would appear in the Estimates.—The amendment was rejected by 203 to 129, and the Bill was read a second time. July 28.

In Committee, Mr. McKenna (L) moved to reduce the borrowing powers to two millions.—Negatived by 209 to 103. Numerous further amendments were considered and negatived after divisions. Aug. 7.

The Bill was read a 3rd time by 180 to 119.

Aug. 9. It afterwards passed the House of Lords and became law. (See Statutes 5 Edw. VII., cap. 20, post.)

- C-Peers and Elections.—The Sessional order against the interference of peers in elections was opposed by Sir W. Lawson (L.), but was carried by 345 to 65.-Mr. Dalziel (L.) then moved a resolution declaring that Lord Alington by his action in an election in North Dorset had committed a breach of privilege.—Mr. Balfour opposed the motion, as no action could be taken upon it, if passed. He moved the previous question, which was carried by 257 to 191.
- L-Physical Deterioration.-The Bp. of Ripon called attention to the report of the Committee on Physical Deterioration, and urged that there should be further inquiry into infant mortality.—The Duke of Devonshire said the question affected the physical unfitness of a considerable portion of the people. He hoped the Govt. were giving attention to the report.—Lord Londonderry (C.), Ld. Pres. of the Council, explained the action taken by the Education Department as to rural education, domestic training, physical exercises, and other matters. The Home Office were also acting on some of the recommendations of the committee.—Lord Lansdowne said the Govt. regarded the report with sympathy, but it included an immense programme. It was intended to be preliminary to a wider inquiry by Royal Commission. July 20. (See also under EDUCATION.)
- C-Plural Voting Bill.-Mr. Soames (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to abolish the right to vote in more than one constituency at a general election.—Mr. Whitmore (C.) moved its rejection.—Mr. Bryce (L.) disputed the argument that a man ought to have a vote in every constituency in which he owned property. Plural voting was a grotesque anomaly.—Mr. G. Lawson (C.) said it was estimated that there were 190,000 plural voters out of an electorate of over six millions. He opposed the principle of the Bill, which on a division was rejected by 191 to 120. June 2.

- C—Poor Laws.—Mr. Balfour announced the proposed appointment of a Royal Commission on the subject of the Poor Laws.

 Aug. 2.
- C.—*Post Office.—In Supply, on the Post Office vote, Lord Stanley (C.), Postmr. Genl., made a general statement as to the work of his Department, and mentioned postal orders, the new system of sorting on Atlantic liners, the extension of the motor service, the facilities for the withdrawal of small sums from the Savings Bank, the revision of the Post Office Guide, and the adoption of penny postage for Australia. He defended his refusal to adopt the "Bradford" report in regard to the wages of officials. He said the committee ought to have compared the wages of the officials with the wages earned in similar employments, which they had not done. Wages in the Post Office compared favourably with the salaries of bank clerks, clerks in the Railway Clearing-house, railway telegraphists, elementary school teachers, and compositors. For every vacancy among postmen there were six applications. There would be a revision of remuneration, based to a great extent on the cost of living in our various towns, and the reclassification was being carried out. Rural postmen who began their daily work in a town were now paid at the same rate as town postmen. The changes would cost £372,300 a year, and would benefit 78,200 persons. If the demands of the employes were granted the cost would be £2,500,000 annually. He deprecated strongly the continuance of the agitation, which was nothing else than blackmail, and ought to be prevented by Parliament.—Capt. Norton (L.) moved a reduction of the vote, and asked for a Parliamentary Committee.—Mr. Ritchie (C.) spoke against a committee to reopen this subject as the officials of the union were using intimidation.—Mr. A. Chamberlain (L.U.), Chan. of Exchr., said that while the Govt. should be a good employer, the taxpayers must be protected, and the integrity and purity of public life preserved. He thought a committee to inquire whether it would be possible to establish some permanent commission, removed from electoral influences, to advise the Govt. in such questions would be useful.—The amendment was negatived by 249 to 205. July 6.

*Telephones.—A Select Committee was appointed to consider the agreement between the Postmr. Genl. and the National Telephone Company, and to report whether it was desirable, in the public interest, that the agreement should become binding. The terms of the reference were discussed and amended.

May 22.

The subject was debated at length on a motion hostile to the agreement, which was negatived by 187 to 110.

Aug. 9.

L—Public Meetings BH.—Lord Burghclere (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Rill to provide for the compulsory grant of public schoolrooms for holding public meetings where there was no other suitable provision.—The Abp. of Canterbury accepted the principle of the Bill.—Lord Londonderry (C.), for the Govt., suggested its reference to a Select Committee, but afterwards withdrew the proposal.—The Bill was read a second time.

May 23.

On the motion to go into Committee, Lord Londonderry said the Govt. would not take the responsibility for the Bill.—Several amendments were disposed of—the members of the Govt. not voting, or speaking, and the Bill was reported.

July 28.

It subsequently passed the 2nd R. in the House of Commons, but made no further progress.

- C—Public Trustee Bill.—A Bill to authorise the establishment of a Public Trustee and Executor was read a second time, Mar. 3, without opposition; referred to the Standing Committee on Law, and considered by them on Mar. 27 and 29, and April 3. It was ordered to be reported with amendments, April 3.—On Report various amendments and new clauses were considered and rejected, June 30. Other amendments were considered, July 7, but no further progress was made.
- C—Railways.—Accidents.—On going into Supply, Mr. Channing (L.) called attention to the administration by the Board of Trade of the Acts aiming at the prevention of injuries to railway men.—Mr. Law (C.), Secy. to the Bd. of Trade, shewed that accidents in shunting were fewer in England than in the United States. As to automatic courlings, none had yet been invented which were satisfactory, and the present system was preferable.

C—*Redistribution of Seats.—The Govt. resolution in favour of the Redistribution of Seats (see "Political Notes") having been laid on the table, Sir H. C.-Bannerman asked whether after a general discussion the House would be given ample opportunities to discuss the details.—The matter was held over in order that the Speaker might look into precedents.

July 13.

The Speaker decided that the Govt. resolution ought to be divided into eight or nine separate parts, to be discussed seriatim in Committee.-Mr. Balfour thereupon announced that he should withdraw the resolution and proceed hereafter by Bill, but not during the present Session.

Mr. Balfour said there would be an enquiry by a Boundary Committee or Commission before 1906. July 18.

L-Russia and Japan.—In reference to the war between Russia and Japan, and the question of an international understanding regarding contraband of war and a second Peace Conference proposed by President Roosevelt, Lord Lansdowne (L.U.), Foreign Secy., said that, as to the question of coal as contraband, the Russian Govt. maintained their original views, but that there had been no case in which an English vessel had been again interfered with by Russian cruisers. As to the negotiations with the United States, the invitation to a second Conference had been accepted without hesitation; but details remained for consideration. The right to destroy prizes was a most controverted subject, and as to floating mines means should be found for dealing with the matter. Wireless telegraphy might also be referred to the Conference. April 13.

6-Mr. Balfour, speaking in reference to an alleged violation by the Russian fleet of French neutrality off Cochin China, said that the French Govt. had made representations to St. Petersburg, and that instructions were telegraphed to the Russian Admiral to leave the bay, which he had done.

L-Lord Lansdowne made a statement as to the Baltic fleet in Kamranh Bay and May 9.

the action of the French authorities in regard thereto.

6-Mr. Balfour stated that the sinking of the British steamer St. Kilda by a Russian cruiser was the subject of correspondence with the Russian Govt. It was a matter as to which H.M. Govt. took a very grave view, because they had received specific assurances that action of this kind would not be taken.

Mr. Balfour stated that the Russian Govt. disapproved of the unjustifiable seizure and destruction of British merchant ships, and that orders had been transmitted which would prevent any repetition of the outrages.

L-Lord Lansdowne said that in most of the cases the claims of the owners and crews of the ships seized or destroyed had been considered and, in some instances, settled. The delay in some cases was due to the fact that the transactions took place in the Chinese seas.

-Scotland.—*Churches Bill.—Mr. Dickson (C.), Ld. Advocate, introduced a Bill for the settlement of the Scottish Church dispute, and explained that the measure was based on the recommendations of the Royal Commission of 1904. It would set up an Executive Commission of five members, with power to deal with all the property of the United Free Church at the date of the union in 1900, and to allocate it between the two Churches, in a fair and equitable proportion, congregational property being allotted to the Free Church, where members of its congregation were equivalent to one-third of what it would have been if the union had not taken place. between the Churches would be put an end to. It was also proposed to empower the Church of Scotland to substitute for existing formularies of subscription such formularies as might be prescribed by the General Assembly, with the consent of the majority of the presbyteries. Sir H. C.-Bannerman disapproved of the alteration in the constitution of the Church of Scotland, but otherwise did not oppose the Bill, June 7. which was read a first time.

The Ld. Advocate moved the 2nd R. of the Bill, and explained the alterations which the Govt. would accept to meet objections. In Cl. 1 it was proposed that the Commission should allocate congregational property to the Free Church in any case where the members and adherents of the Free Church congregation amounted to one-third of the number of the congregation before the union in 1900. It would also be provided that there should be no diversion of foreign mission funds or of any special fund given to the Free Church. The Commissioners would have power to pronounce final judgments. The proceeds of legacies under wills executed before the union would be at the disposal of the Commissioners. As to the formula of subscription in the Church of Scotland, the United Free Church claimed the power to alter its formularies, and similar relief could not be fairly refused to the Church of Scotland. The Clause would ensure ecclesiastical peace in Scotland.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman described the House of Lords' decision in 1904 as a thunderbolt, launched by men who, with one exception, had no personal knowledge of the sentiments of the people of Scotland. The new Commission commanded confidence, and ought to have greater freedom of action. The modifications announced were satisfactory as far as they went. The blot on the Bill was the alteration of the formula of subscription. He should support the second reading, and advised dealing with this point in Committee.—Mr. Hutton (L.) moved an amendment against giving the Church of Scotland the right to modify the formula, contending that a State Church ought not to have such latitude.—Mr. Bryce (L.) argued that an alteration of the form of subscription might be followed by a change in the form of creed.

July 4.

Mr. Balfour said the Clause involved the general interests of Presbyterianism. He looked forward to a possible reunion of all the Scottish Presbyterian Churches. Relief should be given to many conscientious persons who were anxious to be ordained, but who were perhaps over-scrupulous as to the terms of subscription. Cl. 5 would not touch the Act of 1690, which was the legislative charter of the Church, but would modify the Act of 1693, passed to compel the Church to admit certain ministers who had been Episcopalians.—The amendment was rejected by 203 to 63, and the Bill was read a second time.

July 12.

On going into Committee, Mr. Dalziel (L.) moved an instruction for dividing the Bill into two parts.—Rejected by 203 to 103.—Withdrawn.—In Committee, the Ld. Advocate proposed his amendments alluded to on July 4. Agreed to. July 18.

On Cl. 5, Mr. Bryce proposed to abolish all tests for theological professors.— Mr. Balfour opposed the amendment, although sympathising with the demand for an unfettered school of theology.—Amendment rejected (195-135).—Other amendments were considered and rejected.

July 19.

The remaining Clauses were agreed to, and the Bill passed Committee. July 21. On Report, Mr. G. White (L.) moved to reject Cl. 5 (formula of subscription to the Confession of Faith required from ministers of the Church of Scotland). He said the amendment expressed the Nonconformist view that the clause would be held to constitute a precedent for relaxing the control of the State over the Church of England.—Mr. Haldane (L.) spoke strongly in favour of the retention of the clause, to which Mr. Bryce (L.) objected on the ground that it would destroy the national character of the Church of Scotland.—The clause was carried by 270 to 157.—An amendment by Mr. Bryce, who desired that professors of theology should not be required to subscribe to the formula agreed upon by the General Assembly, was rejected by 225 to 168.—

The Bill was read a third time.

L—Lord Linlithgow (C.) moved the 2nd R.—Lord Robertson (C.) said the Bill was a dangerous interference with the rights of property.—Lord Rosebery (L.) thanked the Govt. for the Bill.—After debate, the 2nd R. was agreed to, July 31, and the Bill afterwards became law. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 12, post.)

L—Education.—Lord Balfour (C.) called attention to the question of religious education in Scotland, and asked the Govt. to take security for the capacity of those who were to give that instruction.—Lord Londonderry denied that any Govt. action would weaken religious education in Scotland.

March 20.

6—*Education Bill.—Mr. Dickson (C.), Ld. Advocate, moved the 2nd R. of this Bill, which was in the main the same as that of 1904. Its chief object was to abolish School Boards and to substitute Boards for county districts, enabling them also to combine. Four large towns were to be education districts, and a school fund was to be established, out of which the expenses of a district were to be paid, and to which grants made under various Acts were to be allocated. Four provincial councils were provided for, having power over the training of teachers, and to advise the Scottish Education Department as to higher education.—Mr. Haldane (L.) hoped the Bill would not be sent to a Grand Committee. There should be a provincial council for the Highlands, and the training of teachers should be regarded as a national matter.-Mr. Bryce (L.) said that happily in Scotland education was not under the control of any clerical party. The Bill would effect a number of useful amendments. parish should be the area for dealing with elementary education and the county for secondary education.—Mr. Dickson adhered to the district area as preferable. new education authorities would, he hoped, deal with the question of the medical inspection of children and that of underfed children, without putting an additional charge upon the rates.—The Bill was read a second time. May 8.

In Committee, several amendments were discussed and negatived by large majorities.—(The Bill was subsequently withdrawn).

July 14.

LAND VALUES TAXATION BILL.—Mr. Ainsworth (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill for the taxation for local purposes of land values in burghs: first, by assessing sites apart from buildings; and, secondly, to give municipalities the right to rate every kind of real property which benefited by municipal expenditure.—Sir H. Shaw-Stewart (C.) moved the rejection of the Bill, the results of which, he said, had been exaggerated.—Mr. Dickson (C.), Ld. Advocate, objected to it on the ground that it would annul existing contracts and that some of its provisions were confiscatory, and would impose enormous taxation on open spaces in large towns.—The amendment, after long debate, was negatived by 145 to 131, and the 2nd R. was carried by a majority of 20.

May 19

G—Septennial Act, Repeal of.—Mr. Churchill (L.) asked leave to introduce a Bill to limit the duration of Parliaments to five years.—Leave was refused by 239 to 176.

July 26.

L—Shipping.—Lord Muskerry (C.) called attention to the practice of British ships carrying deck-loads across the Atlantic in winter.—Lord Salisbury (C.), Pres. Bd. of Trade, said the Board had ordered an enquiry.

March 17.

L—Lord Muskerry called attention to the action of foreign Powers in closing certain spheres of trade to British ships, with particular reference to the Philippines, the Canary Islands, and the Marshall Islands.—Lord Lansdowne explained the negotiations that had taken place on the subject with the United States and Germany.

May 22.

C—Mr. C. McArthur (L. U.) called attention to the question of light dues on shipping, and moved that the lighting of our coasts was a national duty, for the efficient performance of which Parliament should provide the cost.—Mr. J. Hope (C.) moved an amendment against increasing the burdens upon the Exchequer for the relief of a particular class.—After several speeches, Mr. A. Chamberlain (L.U.), Chan. of Exchqr., pointed out that shipowners were protected by the Navy, which was freed from these charges, but it did not follow that the mercantile marine should be therefore exempt. In the present state of the finances he could not assent to a further charge on the taxpayers.—The motion was carried by 66 to 62.

June 7.

L—MERCHANT SHIPPING (ALIENS) BILL.—Lord Muskerry moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to exclude aliens from the command, or sole control, of British ships, and from receiving a pilotage certificate for British pilotage waters.—Lord Halsbury (C.) stated that the Govt. could not accept the Bill, which would reimpose the navigation laws. The question could only be dealt with by the Govt.—The Bill was rejected by 53 to 35.

June 26.

G—Shipowners' Negligence Bill.—Sir H. Samuel (C.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to give workmen injured through the negligence of the officers or crew of a ship in dock or port a right to have the vessel detained. Foreign shipowners, he said, could now escape liability in cases of this kind.—Sir R. Finlay (L.U.), Atty. Genl., said there was a real grievance, but there was also danger of legislation of this kind leading to abuse.—The Bill was read a second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Law, March 3; it subsequently passed into law. (See Statutes, 5 Edw. VII., cap. 10, post.)

C—Speaker, Retirement of the.—Mr. Akers-Douglas (C.), Home Secy., announced the proposed retirement of Mr. Gully from the Speakership on the 6th June. June 1. The Speaker rose to announce his retirement on the ground of ill-health. He thanked the House for the generous support which it had always given him, without which the authority and influence of the Chair could not be maintained.—Mr. A. Balfour said it was with the greatest grief that the House had heard the right hon. gentleman's declaration of his intention to resign. He gave notice of two resolutions on the subject.
—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) added an expression of profound regret, and said that they were losing one who was a friend to every member of the House. June 6. Mr. Balfour moved a resolution of thanks to the Speaker for his distinguished services in the Chair for upwards of ten years. In doing so he referred to the growing burden of responsibility thrown on the Chair under the new rules and procedure. The dangers to the House which in other times came from without now came from within. House was grateful to Mr. Gully for the way in which he had borne that burden. Besides having a profound knowledge of its rules and history he loved the House and had discharged his high functions not only with great ability, but with a courtesy that commanded universal respect and affection.—Sir H. C.-Bannerman (L.) seconded the motion, and said that every member was his debtor for public service loyally rendered. Mr. J. Redmond (N.) supported the resolution and recognized Mr. Gully's zeal, ability and impartiality (although with one reservation), and hoped that he might long enjoy his well-earned honours.—Mr. J. Chamberlain (L.U.), Sir A. Thomas (L.) for the Weish party, Col. Saunderson for the Irish Unionists, and Mr. Bell, as representing Labour members, spoke briefly in support of the resolution, which was carried nem. con.—Mr. Gully, in reply, described the resolution as the highest and most precious honour that could be conferred on him. He thanked the House heartily and prayed that it might ever continue to enjoy its privileges and maintain its dignity.-Mr. Balfour moved that the reply should be printed and entered on the journals of the House.—Agreed to.—A resolution praying the King to confer some signal mark of his favour on Mr. Gully was then carried unanimously.

June 7.

ELECTION OF A NEW SPEAKER.—The King's consent having been announced, Sir M. Hicks Beach moved that the Rt. Hon. J. W. Lowther be elected Speaker. He said the work, power, and responsibility of the Chair had become more onerous and difficult in recent years. The choice of a Speaker depended chiefly upon personal qualifications, and Mr. Lowther's successful conduct of business as Deputy-Speaker and Chairman of Committees showed that he had an evenly-balanced mind, and deep respect for the traditions of the House.—Sir W. Hart Dyke (C.) seconded the motion.—Mr. J. W. Lowther rose to submit himself to the House, and assured it that he recognized the great difficulties and vast responsibility of the position, and that he was deeply sensible of his disqualifications. If elected, he would always do his utmost to maintain its rights and privileges intact. No other member being proposed no question was put, and Mr. Lowther was conducted to the Chair.—Mr. Lowther tendered his sincere acknowledgments to the House for the great honour conferred upon him, then took his seat in the Chair as Speaker-elect, and received the congratulations of Mr. Balfour and Sir H. C.-Bannerman.

June 8.

1.—The Id. Chancellor announced His Majesty's allowance and confirmation of Mr. Lowther as Speaker of the House of Commons.

6—On returning from the House of Lords the Speaker put on his official robes, and repeated his acknowledgments to the House for the honour conferred upon him. June 20.

In Committee a resolution was submitted, providing for an annual grant of £4,000 to Mr. Gully.—Mr. K. Hardie (Soc.) moved to reduce it to £1,000.—Rejected by 245 to 17.

STREET BETTING BILL.—See under BETTING BILL.

C—Sugar Convention.—In the debate on the Address, Mr. Kearley (L.) proposed an amendment declaring that the Brussels Sugar Convention had inflicted heavy losses upon trade, diminished employment, and increased the cost of food to consumers without any compensating advantage.—Sir W. Palmer (C.) denied that the rise in the price of sugar was due to the Convention.—Mr. J. Chamberlain defended the Convention, and asserted that sugar was as cheap in England as in any foreign country. The rise in price was due to short crops of bestroot. The allegation that the Convention had ruined jam manufacturers was also untrue. In the sugar trade well-managed firms had made gigantic profits, but the business had always been subject to fluctuation, caused by bounties. Their removal would before long prevent fluctuations. Free traders were now advocating a return to bounties, to give the growers of beet a monopoly. The Convention had brought 400,000 additional tons of cane sugar into the market. The Opposition were simply trying to make political capital out of the question by mixing it up with the fiscal controversy.

Feb. 27.

capital out of the question by mixing it up with the fiscal controversy. Feb. 27.

Mr. Ll. George (L.) insisted that the Convention was responsible for the greater part of the rise in the price of sugar, and for cheaper sugar on the Continent. It had doubled the price in this country and reduced it by one-half abroad. The Govt. prophesied a decline in price; they prophesied increased employment, and thousands of men had been thrown out of work.—Mr. Bryce (L.) advanced the same arguments. He added that the Opposition had never advocated bounties, but they did not object to foreign bounties which cheapened goods sent to this country. The abolition of bounties had done little good for the West Indies.-Mr. B. Law (C.), Secy. Bd. of Trade, said the fall in the price of sugar abroad was due to the lower excise duties. The Convention was in no sense a step towards protection, and he denied that it had raised the price, as the average price since 1902 had been below that of the three preceding The rise was due to the shortage of the beet supply, and had been somewhat counterbalanced by increased production of cane sugar. In 1889 confectioners were suffering as they were now, and begged that the bounties might be removed. Their abolition would confer benefit on the West Indies and improve the prospects of the sugar-refining industry, which had fought foreign competitors for 30 years.—Mr. Ormsby-Gore (C.) denounced the Convention, and Mr. Crooks (Lab.) asserted that it had affected the working classes injuriously.—Mr. G. Balfour (C.), Pres. Bd. of Trade, asserted that the importation of bounty-fed goods was inconsistent with free trade. The object of the Convention was to restore natural prices according to supply and demand, and it would prevent fluctuations of price. The rise of price in England was due to shortage in supply and to a larger demand. Drought accounted for a deficiency of 800,000 tons. He hoped the rise would only be temporary, and that it would shortly return to the normal level. Our exports showed no falling off, and our industries were holding their position in foreign markets, while imports of foreign confectionery showed a decline.—Amendment rejected by 276 to 211. Feb. 28. SUNDAY CLOSING.—See under LABOUR QUESTIONS, and LICENSING.

C-*Supply.—CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.—In Committee on the Civil Services Supplementary Estimates, Mr. Whitley (L.) moved a reduction of £1,000 on the vote, and raised a discussion on the Whitaker Wright case.—Sir R. Finlay (L.U.), Atty. Geal., explained that if it had been a public prosecution the fees payable to counsel in the case would have gone to the law officers. The taxed costs in the case would be paid to the prosecutors.—Sir E. Carson (C.), Solr. Geal., said that in advising against a public prosecution he had exercised his judgment to the best of his ability.—Sir R. Finlay said he took the full reaponsibility for the decision not to prosecute. March 9.

Finlay said he took the full responsibility for the decision not to prosecute. March 9.

Mr. Lough moved to reduce the vote.—Negatived by 237 to 173.—Mr. Lough moved to reduce the vote by £5,000, the amount paid as compensation for wrongful imprisonment to Mr. Adolf Beck, his object being to criticise the conduct of the police in this case.—Sir A. Rollit (C.) considered that £5,000 was hardly adequate compensation.—Mr. Asquith (L.) attributed the miscarriage of justice not to the police but to the ruling of the judge, and said there ought to be some form of criminal appeal. It was not for the Home Office to deal with mistakes of law.—Mr. Akers-Douglas (C.), Home Sevy., said that a Bill had been introduced to enable certain criminal cases to be reviewed on points of law. He defended the Home Office action in the case, but said the legal branch had now been strengthened. As to the compensation paid to Mr. Beck, it was impossible to compensate a man fully for undeserved imprisonment, but the sum was a larger sum than had ever been previously given.—The amendment was negatived by 257 to 204.—The vote was carried after another division. March 21.

CLOSURE.—The closure resolution for the outstanding votes for 1904-5 came into force, and they were passed after a series of divisions.

March 21.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.—On Report of the supplementary vote for law charges, the Whitaker Wright case was again discussed, and an amendment was negatived by 247 to 158.—At 10 p.m. the closure resolution was applied, and the vote was agreed to after divisions.

March 23.

Houses of Parliament.—On the vote for buildings a reduction was moved, and a general discussion on numerous questions was raised.—After a division (202-114) the vote was agreed to, as was the vote to complete the sum of £62,500 for expenditure on the Royal Palaces.

May 4.

BOARD OF TRADE.—Sir A. Rollit and other members discussed points relating to the administration of the Board.—Mr. B. Law (C.), Seoy. Bd. of Trade, said that a Bill had been drafted to effect a change in the status of the Board. The Commercial Intelligence Committee had been strengthened. In the selection of Consuls the Foreign Office proposed to select men qualified from the point of view of the interests of trade.—The vote was agreed to after a division.

June 6.

SCOTLAND.—On the vote for the office of the Secretary for Scotland, a variety of subjects were discussed, including that of the fishing industry in the Moray Firth.—On the vote for the Local Government Board, Mr. E. Wason (L.) advocated the extension of allotments, to which the Ld. Advocate replied that there was no very general demand in Scotland.

June 22.

TRADES UNION BILL.—See under LABOUR QUESTIONS.

For further debates in Supply, see under specific subjects.

C—Turkey.—In the debate on the Address, Mr. Stevenson (L.) moved an amendment in favour of taking further steps to place the execution of reforms in many Turkish provinces under a Governor responsible to the Powers.—Lord Percy (C.), Under Secy., described the improvements which had been made in the government of Macedonia by the introduction of European officers into the Gendarmerie. He said H.M. Govt. would not act independently of other Powers.—The amendment was negatived without a division.

Feb. 27.

L—Lord Lytton (C.) called attention to the affairs of South-Eastern Europe and moved for papers.—Lord Lansdowne (L.U.), Foreign Secy., admitted that the state of things constituted a menace to the peace of Europe, but he demurred to the idea that England should undertake single-handed the settlement of the Macedonian question.—Lord Spencer (L.) hoped the Govt. would do all it could to put pressure on Turkey.—Motion withdrawn.

March 28.

Lord Lansdowne, speaking on the question of the government of Macedonia, said a distinct improvement had taken place. Repatriation had gone on, and the European officers had produced a good effect. The control of the scheme of reform was proposed to be put under general international control, each Power nominating a financial delegate to watch over reforms and the application of the scheme. The Porte had refused to agree, but the Powers would insist on a different reply.

July 18.

UNEMPLOYED WORKMEN BILL.—See under LABOUR QUESTIONS.

C-Vehicles (Lights) Bill.—Mr. Bigwood (C.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to compel every vehicle upon a highway at night to exhibit a white light in front and a red light behind.—Mr. C. Wason (L.) opposed, on the ground that it was a Bill to satisfy the demands of selfish motorists, who desired to travel along the roads at a high rate.-Sir H. Maxwell (C.) also objected that it would cause much inconvenience to farmers. —Mr. Cochrane (L.U.), Under Secy. Home Dept., said the Home Office bye-laws provided all necessary safeguards.—The Bill was rejected by 109 to 108. May 12.

C-West Indies.—Mr. Lamont (L.) called attention to the administration of the British West Indian Colonies, and moved a resolution to extend federal institutions therein. The islands, he said, were overburdened with officials and conflicting tariffs. Sir C. Dilke (L.) moved an amendment in favour of recognizing the predominant interest of the majority of the taxpayers in the administration.—Mr. Lyttelton (L.U.), Colonial Secy., said that some of the islands had enjoyed, practically, self-government, but some were separated by 1,000 miles, and federation was an extravagant idea. There was much community of interests between the islands as a whole, and he hoped they might gradually be brought closer together. Union was the policy of the Govt., but it could not be forced. The tariffs imposed were revenue duties, and not protective ones.—Sir E. Grey (L.) said he was against imposing anything on the islands which would be offensive to the sentiments of the Colonies; but federation should be encouraged.—Motion, and amendment, withdrawn. May 17.

G-Women's Franchise.-Mr. Slack (L.) moved the 2nd R. of a Bill to place women. both married and single, in the same electoral position as men.—Mr. Labouchere (L.) opposed, and the Bill was talked out. May 12. June 2.

The 2nd R. was further discussed, but no progress was made. Workmen's Compensation Bill.—See under Labour Questions.

Prorogation.—Parliament was prorogued by Royal Commission. Aug. 11.

King's Speech.—The Speech from the Throne referred in the passages relating to foreign and colonial affairs to the visit of the King of Spain, the negotiations for peace in the Far East, the conference respecting Morocco, the crisis in Norway and Sweden, the State of Macedonia and Crete, the King of Italy's award concerning Barotseland, the Italian agricultural conference, the defence of Halifax and Esquimault, the constitution of the Transvaal, and the Treaty with Afghanistan.

It recorded the passage of Acts dealing with Agricultural Rates, Alien Immigration, Unemployed Workmen and the Scotch Churches, and the issue of a Commission on the Poor Laws.

The Speech concluded by invoking the blessing of Almighty God. Aug. 11.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

SUBJECTS OF SOME OF THE PRINCIPAL DIVISIONS DURING THE SESSION OF 1905.

Nore.—The following list contains particulars of eight important divisions which took place during the Session of 1905.

In order to ascertain how any particular member voted in any of these divisions, reference should first be made to the number it bears in the consecutive list printed below, and then under the heading indicating the number of the division will be found the letter A or N, showing that the member in question voted with the "Ayes" or with the "Noes."

The last column but one contains the number of divisions attended by each member during the Session of 1905, and the last column contains the total attendances at Divisions of each member for the six Sessions of this Parliament. It will be understood that this is not a record of the number of sittings each member has attended, but only of his attendance at divisions.

The total number of divisions during the Session of 1905 was 364. The aggregate number of divisions during the present Parliament is 2,106.

Particulars of the principal divisions which took place between the years 1880 and 1904 will be found in the previous issues of the Constitutional Year Book,

No. 1.—CHINESE LABOUR. February 17th.

Dr. Macnamara's amendment to the Address, stating that assurances given by the Government were shown not to have been fulfilled, and regretting that public opinion in the Transvaal had not been secured on this question, especially as opinion in the British Colonies, so far as officially expressed, appeared to be vigorously opposed to that policy.—Ayes, 214; Noes, 275.

No. 2.—HOME RULE. February 21st.

Mr. Redmond's amendment to the Address, representing that the present system of Government in Ireland was in opposition to the will of the Irish people, and gave them no voice in the management of their own affairs, and that the system was consequently ineffective, costly, did not enjoy the confidence of any section of the population and was productive of universal discontent and unrest, and had proved to be incapable of satisfactorily promoting the material and intellectual progress of the people.—Ayes, 236; Noes, 286.

No. 3.—REDUCTION OF NAVY. March 6th.

Amendment by Mr. M'Crae, expressing satisfaction at the reduction of Naval Estimates effected by the proposed scheme of Distribution of the Fleet, but regretting that the Government had not taken steps to procure still further relief by negotiations with Foreign Powers for a general reduction of naval armaments. Motion to reject.—Ayes, 220; Noes, 164.

No. 4.—NAVY. March 14th.

Motion by Mr. Labouchere to reduce the vote for wages of officers, seamen, marines, coastguards and boys by £600,000.—Ayes, 128; Noes, 262.

No. 5.—AGRICULTURAL RATES BILL. April 17th. Second Reading.—Ayes, 174; Noes, 59.

No. 6.—CRIMES AC Γ, 1887. May 31st.

Mr. John O'Connor's motion expressing the opinion that the presence of the Criminal Law and Procedure (Ireland) Act on the Statute Book was a gross violation of the Constitution, without parallel in any other portion of His Majesty's dominions, and that the Act should be immediately repealed.—Ayes, 106; Noes, 163.

No. 7.-NAVAL WORKS. July 18th.

Mr. Pretyman's motion to consider making further provision for the construction of works in the United Kingdom and elsewhere for the purposes of the Royal Navy, and authorising the payment, out of the Consolidated Fund, of such sums as might be necessary for those purposes.—Ayes, 222; Noes, 143.

No. 8.—AL!ENS BILL. July 19th.
Third Reading. Motion to reject Major Seely's amendment to throw out the Bill.
Ayes, 214; Noes, 136.

VOTES IN DIVISIONS—SESSION 1905.

Note.—The last column but one contains the number of divisions attended by each Member during the Session of 1905, the total number of divisions being 364. The last column contains the number of divisions attended by each Member during the present Parliament (1900-05), the total being 2,106. Members elected since the end of the Sessien of 1906 are not included in this list. A signifies that the Member voted with the Ayes, N with the Noes. The number at the head of each column refers to the list of divisions on the preceding page. * Elected during Session 1905.

THE STATUTES OF 1905.

An Abstract of the Public General Statutes of the Sixth Session of the Twenty-Seventh Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5 Edward VII.

* The Acts marked by an Asterisk were introduced by the Government.

The dates are those on which the Royal Assent was given.

. Ī

CAP. 1. *CONSOLIDATED FUND ACT (No. 1).

(Introduced by Mr. V. CAVENDISH, L.U.)

An Act to apply certain sums out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the years ending 31st March, 1905, and 1906.—30th March.

CAP. 2. *ARMY (ANNUAL) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. Arnold-Forster, L.U.)

An Act to provide, during twelve months, for the discipline and regulation of the Army. This annual Act contains no new provisions.—14th April.

CAP. 3. LICENSING (IRELAND) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. NANNETTI, N.)

An Act to amend the law as to the hours of closing of licensed premises on Christmas Day in Ireland.—30th June.

CAP. 4. *FINANCE ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. A. CHAMBERLAIN, L.U.)

This Act contains the provisions of the Budget of 1905-6. It reduced the tea duty to 6d. in the lb.; continued the customs duties on tobacco, beer and spirits, and the additional excise duties imposed in 1900, and abolished the warehouse delivery charges which were created in 1869. Stamp duty on export bonds and on delivery orders, charged by the Stamp Act of 1891, is abolished. The Income Tax was continued at the rate of 1s. in the £. Other provisions dealt with the repayment of debt, fixing the permanent annual charge at 28 instead of 27 millions, and providing for the repayment of Exchequer bonds issued under the War Loan Act of 1900.—30th June.

CAP. 5. *MR. SPEAKER'S RETIREMENT ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. A. Balfour, C.)

The Act confers an annuity of £4,000 upon the Rt. Hon. W. C. Gully (now Viscount Selby), the late Speaker.—11th July.

CAP. 6. *CONSOLIDATED FUND ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. V. CAVENDISH, L.U.)

An Act similar to Cap. 1 (above), but relating only to the year ending 31st March, 1906.—11th July.

CAP. 7. *WAR STORES (COMMISSION) ACT.

(Introduced by SIR R. B. FINLAY, L.U.)

An Act to facilitate the proceedings of the Commissioners appointed to hold an investigation respecting War Stores in South Africa.

The Commission referred to in Parliamentary Summary (ante, under Africa, S.) was by this Act supplied with powers similar to those exercised by the High Court or any judge thereof.—11th July.

CAP. 8. *AGRICULTURAL RATES ACT, 1896, &c., CONTINUANCE ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. W. H. Long, C.)

An Act to extend the above Act for four years, up to 1910.—11th July.

CAP. 9. COAL MINES (WEIGHING OF MINERALS) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. RICKETT, L.)

An Act to amend the Coal Mines Regulation Act of 1897 as to the weighing of minerals.

The Act enables miners to appoint a deputy "check weigher" to protect their interests, and secures him in his position.—4th August.

CAP. 10. SHIPOWNERS' NEGLIGENCE ACT.

(Introduced by SIR H. SAMUEL, C.)

An Act to enlarge the remedies of persons injured by the negligence of shipowners.

This Act authorises the detention of foreign ships which have caused damage, involving personal injury, under the same conditions as British ships are liable to detention.—4th August.

CAP. 11. RAILWAY FIRES ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. MOUNT, C.)

An Act to give compensation for damage by fires caused by sparks or cinders from railway engines.

By this Act railway companies are made liable for damage to agricultural land or crops arising as above.—4th August.

CAP. 12. *CHURCHES (SCOTLAND) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. Dickson, Lord Advocate, C.)

An Act to provide for the settlement of certain questions between the Free Church and the United Free Church in Scotland, and to make certain amendments of the law with respect to the Church of Scotland.

The Act empowers a Royal Commission established thereunder to allocate Church property between the Free Church and the United Free Church in such manner as appears to the Commission to be fair and equitable, subject to certain directions contained in the Act.

In making their allocation, the Commission will allocate congregational property to the Free Church in any case where they consider that one-third at least of the congregation were members or adherents on the 30th October, 1900.

The Commission will also make adequate provision for the education of the students of the ministry of the Free Church, for the support of aged ministers, of widows and orphans of ministers, and for general purposes.

All property is to be available for allocation which belonged to the Free Church on the 30th October, 1900.

Section 5 deals with the formula of subscription to the Confession of Faith in the (Established) Church of Scotland, and enables the General Assembly of that Church to vary such formula with the consent of the majority of the presbyteries.—11th August.

CAP. 13. *ALIENS ACT.

(Introduced by MB. AKERS-DOUGLAS, C.)

An Act to amend the law with regard to aliens.

The Act provides that no immigrant shall be landed (1) except at a port where there is an immigration officer, or (2) without leave of that officer after inspection.

Where leave to land is refused, appeal may be made to an immigration board.

The immigration board is to consist of three persons having magisterial, business or administrative experience. Rules as to the working of the board may be made by the Secretary of State.

An undesirable immigrant is defined as one who:-

- 1.—Cannot decently support himself or his dependents.
- Is a lunatic or idiot, or is likely, owing to disease or infirmity, to become a charge on the rates.
- Has been sentenced in a foreign country for an extradition crime, not being a political offence.
- 4.—Has had an expulsion order made against him.

But leave to land is not to be withheld:-

- 1.—On grounds of want of means, to one who proves that he is seeking admission "solely to avoid prosecution or punishment on religious or political grounds, or for an offence of a political character, or persecution, involving danger of imprisonment or danger to life or limb, on account of religious belief."
- 2.—From an immigrant who, having resided in the United Kingdom for not less than six months, and having taken his ticket here direct for another country, has been refused by that country and returned direct to the United Kingdom.
- For want of means, from an immigrant born in the United Kingdom, his father being a British subject.

The Secretary of State may exempt from the Act any immigrant ships where he is satisfied that undesirables are prevented from embarking; or are embarked only for transit.

An expulsion order, requiring an alien to leave the United Kingdom within a certain time, may be made by the Secretary of State:—

- (i.) In case of aliens convicted of felony or misdemeanour without the option of a fine; or of prostitution. Expulsion may be in addition to or in lieu of sentence.
- (ii.) If within 12 months of landing an alien has been in receipt of parochial relief; has been found wandering without visible means of support; or has been living under insanitary conditions due to overcrowding.
- (iii.) If the alien has been sentenced in a foreign country for an extradition crime not of a political nature.

Expenses caused by the expulsion of an alien within six months of landing are to be paid by the master of any ship belonging to the owner of the ship bringing over the alien so expelled. Also if required by the Secretary of State, he shall receive the alien and his dependents (if any) on board his ship, and afford them free of charge a passage to the port of embarkation and proper accommodation and maintenance during the passage.

Other general provisions require returns to be made by masters of ships as may be required; provide for the appointment of officers to carry out the Act; and the payment of the expenses of administration.

Offences against the Act are punishable on summary conviction by a fine up to £100, and if committed by an immigrant or alien he may be deemed a rogue and vagabond under Section 4 of the Vagrancy Act, 1824. Fines may be recovered by process under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, section 693.

Any immigrant who is conditionally disembarked, and any alien in whose case an expulsion order is made, may be kept in custody until his departure.

False statements or false representations are punishable by imprisonment up to three months with hard labour.

Definitions.—The expression "immigrant" means an alien steerage passenger who is to be landed in the United Kingdom, but excludes passengers in transit to some destination out of the United Kingdom; or those holding prepaid through tickets to some destination if security is given that, except for the purposes of transit, they will not remain in the United Kingdom.

The expression "immigrant skip" means a ship which brings more than twenty alien steerage passengers to be landed in the United Kingdom.

Any question on an appeal to an immigration board whether any ship is an immigrant ship, or whether any person is an immigrant, a passenger, or a steerage passenger, within the Act, or whether any offence is political, or whether a crime is an extradition crime, shall be decided by the Secretary of State in accordance with rules made under the Act.

The Act comes into operation on 1st January, 1906.—11th August.

CAP. 14. MEDICAL ACT (1896) AMENDMENT ACT.

(Introduced by GEN. LAURIE, C.)

An Act to amend the Medical Act, 1886.

For the purposes of the Medical Act, 1886, where any part of a British possession is under a central and also under a local legislature, His Majesty may, by Order in Council, declare that the part which is under the local legislature shall be deemed a separate British possession.—11th August.

CAP. 15. TRADE MARKS ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. Moulton, L.)

An Act to amend and consolidate the law relating to Trade Marks.

The effect of the Act, which is highly technical and complicated, is expressed in its title. The alterations of the existing law are not numerous.—11th August.

GAP. 16. *ISLE OF MAN (CUSTOMS) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. V. CAVENDISH, L.U.)

An Act to amend the law with respect to customs duties in the Isle of Man.—11th August.

CAP. 17. *APPROPRIATION ACT, 1995.

(Introduced by Mr. V. CAVENDISH, L.U.)

An Act to apply certain sums out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the years ending 31st March, 1905 and 1906, and to appropriate the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament.—11th August.

CAP. 18. *UNEMPLOYED WORKMEN ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. G. W. BALFOUR, C.)

An Act to establish organisation with a view to the provision of employment, or assistance for unemployed workmen in proper cases.

London.—The Act establishes by order of the Local Government Board a distress committee of the council of every London borough, consisting of members of the council and of the board of guardians, and of persons experienced in the relief of distress; and a central body for the administrative County of London, consisting of members appointed by the distress committees and by the London County Council, and of persons co-opted as additional members, and of persons nominated by the Local Government Board, the latter two classes not to exceed one-fourth of the total number (one member at least to be a woman.)

The committee must make themselves acquainted with the conditions of labour within their area, and may be required by the central body to receive, inquire into, and discriminate between applications from unemployed persons who have resided in London for not less than 12 months.

If the committee are satisfied that such applicant is honestly desirous of obtaining work, but is temporarily unable to do so from exceptional causes over which he has no control, and that his case is capable of more suitable treatment under the Act than under the poor law, they may endeavour to obtain work for him or they may refer the case to the central body, but they shall have no power to provide, or contribute towards the provision of, work for any unemployed person.

The central body will superintend and co-ordinate the action of the distress committees, and aid them by establishing, taking over, or assisting labour exchanges and employment registers, &c.

The central body may assist an unemployed person, referred to them by a distress committee, by aiding his emigration or removal to another area, or by providing temporary work to enable him to obtain regular work or other means of supporting himself.

The expenses may be defrayed out of a central fund which shall be supplied by voluntary contributions and by levies upon the council of each metropolitan borough. Expenses paid out of the rates are to be limited to:—

- (i.) Establishment charges.
- (ii.) Emigration expenses.
- (iii.) Expenses incurred by acquisition of land.

Rate aid to be limited to ½d. in the £; or, with the consent of the Local Government Board, may reach 1d.

Assistance under the Act is not to disfranchise any person.

The City of London is to be treated as a metropolitan borough, and the Act may be extended to any district or borough near London.

Outside London, the Local Government Board shall order to be established for boroughs and urban districts of not less than 50,000 inhabitants, a distress committee with similar powers. In boroughs and urban districts with population between 10,000 and 50,000, a similar authority shall be set up upon the application of a local council to the Local Government Board, and with its consent.

In any county or part of a county, the central body and distress committee may be set up by the Local Government Board with or without application by a local council. In such a case county boroughs of less than 50,000 inhabitants are to be included in the county.

The Local Government Board may make regulations for carrying out the Act and may provide for various administrative details.

The Act applies to Scotland and Ireland and is to continue in force for three years, unless Parliament shall otherwise determine.—11th August.

CAP. 19. *EAST INDIA LOANS (RAILWAYS) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. Brodrick, C.)

An Act to empower the Secretary of State in Council of India to raise money in the United Kingdom for the construction, extension, and equipment of railways in India, by State agency, or through the agency of companies, and for other purposes.——11th August.

CAP. 20. *NAVAL WORKS ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. J. A. CHAMBERLAIN, L.U.)

An Act to make further provision for the construction of works in the United Kingdom and elsewhere for the purposes of the Royal Navy.

The amount authorised to be borrowed is £5,835,000.—11th August.

CAP. 21. *EXPIRING LAWS CONTINUANCE ACT.

(Introduced by MR. V. CAVENDISH, L.U.)

An Act to continue various expiring laws, among them being the Corrupt Practices Acts, the Ballot Act, the Vaccination Act, &c.—11th August.

CAP. 22. *PUBLIC WORKS LOANS ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. V. CAVENDISH, L.U.)

The annual Act to authorise the transactions of the Public Works Loan Board.—11th August.

CAP 23. *PROVISIONAL ORDER (MARRIAGES) ACT.

(Introduced by Mr. COCHRANE, L.U.)

An Act to enable Provisional Orders to be made for removing any invalidity or doubt attaching to certain marriages by reason of some informality.—11th August.

PARLIAMENTARY PUBLICATIONS, 1905.

NEARLY all the general State publications of the United Kingdom appear in the form of Parliamentary Papers; the exceptions being some few which are issued by and at the expense of the respective departments, e.g., "The Post Office Guide," or "The Board of Trade Journal," and also certain publications of general interest, such as "The London Gazette," or the Statutes.

The information contained in the Parliamentary Papers appertains to every conceivable object of political and statistical interest. Besides Bills representing all the legislative projects of each session, and Returns specially relating to them, theme are periodical statements of the working of different departments of the Government, of the results of recent legislation, Reports of Royal Commissions or of Committees of either House, Treaties, Correspondence with foreign countries or with our Colonies, Reports of diplomatic and consular agents abroad, Census and other returns, Statistics of all kinds, Accounts, Estimates, and many miscellaneous papers that cannot be included under any of the above heads.

Parliamentary publications are divided as follows:-

- 1 Bills introduced into either House, either by the Government or by private members. They are numbered in a new series for each year.
- 2 Papers by Command include all such Reports, Papers, &c., as equally concern both Houses of Parliament. They are distinguished by the letters Cd., with numbers in brackets. The numbering runs for a series of years.
- 3 Reports and Papers. These comprise Reports, Returns, &c., specially ordered to be printed by either House, and sometimes afterwards communicated to the other House. They, also, are numbered in a fresh series for each year.

The following résumé is intended to supply materials from which may be obtained information respecting—(1) The objects of the most important of the Public Bills which were introduced in the Session of 1905 but failed to pass into law. (The Statutes of the year will be found in another part of the work.) (2) A list of such Parliamentary Papers as relate to subjects of general interest or importance issued during the same period.

The explanatory notes are confined to those publications of which the substance is not contained in the statistical tables or other parts of the Constitutional Year Book.

The distinguishing numbers will enable those who desire further details to purchase the publications either through a bookseller or from Messrs. WYMAN & SONS, Fetter Lane, E.C.; and Messrs. OLIVER & BOYD, Tweeddale Court, Edinburgh; E. PONSONBY, 116, Grafton Street, Dublin.

PUBLIC BILLS.

THE following list shows the objects of some of the measures introduced into Parliament during the Session of 1905 as were of general interest, but which failed to pass into Law. Government Bills are marked with an asterisk (*).

*ACCIDENTS (MINES AND FACTORIES) BILL (73).

To amend the Law relating to Returns and Notification of Accidents in mines, quarries, factories, and workshops. This Bill provides that notices of accidents in mines, quarries, factories and workshops shall be sent to the inspector of the district in which they occur, in such form and with such particulars as the Secretary of State prescribes.—Mr. Cochrane (L.U.).

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS [BILL (96).

The Bill amends the Agricultural Holdings Acts of 1883 and 1900 by giving the tenant a statutory right to carry out all improvements suitable to his holding, and necessary for its proper working; by giving compensation to the tenant for the whole value he has added to the holding on a renewal of the tenancy whether he quits or remains in the holding, and also for the value he has added by continuous good farming and by the laying down of permanent pasture; by checking the power of unreasonable landlords to capriciously evict, etc.; and by placing the landlord and tenant on an equal footing in making claims for improvement or determination of the holding.—

Mr. Channing (L.).

COAL MINES (EMPLOYMENT) BILL (4).

To amend the provisions of the Coal Mines Regulation Acts which relate to employment. It provides that males under eighteen shall not be employed below ground for more than eight hours during any consecutive twenty-four hours, and obliges the owner, agent, or manager of every mine to keep in the office of the mine an "Hours of Work Book," in which records of the times during which persons are employed below ground are to be entered.—Mr. Jacoby (L.).

*CONGESTED DISTRICTS (SCOTLAND) BILL (134).

To amend the provisions of the Congested Districts (Scotland) Act, 1897, as to the style and title of the Commissioners, the execution of deeds by them, and the application of the Fund constituted by the said Act.—Mr. Scott Dickson (C.).

CORONERS' INQUESTS (RAILWAY FATALITIES) BILL (172).

To amend the law relating to Coroners' Inquests in the case of fatal accidents on railways, by obliging the Coroner to give notice of the place and time of any inquest or adjourned inquest to the Board of Trade, and providing that inquests shall not be held unless an inspector or some person on behalf of the Board of Trade is present to watch the proceedings. -Mr. Channing (L.).

*COUNTY COURTS (No. 2) BILL (180).

A Bill to amend the Law relating to County Courts. It re-arranges districts and business, extends the Lord Chancellor's power to recommend pensions to judges in certain cases, and enlarges the jurisdiction of certain registrars, &c.—Sir R. B. Finlay (L.U.).

*CROWN LANDS BILL (118).

To amend the Crown Lands Acts, 1829 to 1894. It gives power to effect transfers of the management of foreshore between Commissioners of Woods and Board of Trade, allows Board of Trade, &c., to settle disputes as to foreshore, permits Commissioners of Woods to pay for certain improvements out of capital, and abolishes enrolment of assignments of Crown leases, &c.—Mr. Victor Cavendish (L.U.).

*CRIMINAL CASES (RESERVATION OF POINTS OF LAW) BILL (261) (H.L.).

An Act to amend the Crown Cases Act, 1848, by giving power to the High Court to compel a case to be stated on points of Law arising in criminal trials, by extending powers of Court of Crown Cases Reserved, by making provision for legal aid on hearing of a case stated, and by giving power to direct the re-trial at assizes of a case tried at quarter sessions, &c.—The Earl of Halsbury (C.).

*DOGS BILL (86).

To consolidate and amend the enactments relating to injury to live stock by dogs, and otherwise to amend the law relating to dogs.—Mr. Aŭwyn Fellowes (C.).

EDUCATION (FEEDING OF CHILDREN) BILLS (126), (132), (196).

No. 126, permits that meals for school-children attending public elementary schools may be provided by local authorities.—Mr. Claude Hay (C.).

Nos. 132, and 196 make similiar provision.—Mr. Arthur Henderson (Lab.).

*EDUCATION (SCOTLAND) BILL (88).

To amend the laws relating to education in Scotland, and for other purposes connected therewith.—Mr. Scott Dickson (C.).

*EXTRADITION BILL (83) (H.L.).

FACTORY AND WORKSHOP ACT (1901) AMENDMENT BILL (204).

To amend the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, in respect of laundries by distributing the working hours more regularly over the week, by substituting for variable periods of employment definite hours for the work to begin and close, and by bringing charitable and religious institution laundries, &c., within the scope of the Factory Act.—Mr. Cameron Corbett (L.U.).

*FALSE STATEMENTS (COMPANIES) BILL (130).

To amend the Law relating to false statements with respect to the financial position of companies or other bodies.— $Sir\ R.\ B.\ Finlay\ (L.U.)$.

*FERRIES (ACQUISITION BY LOCAL AUTHORITIES) BILL (189).

HOUSING OF THE WORKING CLASSES BILLS (55) AND (111).

No. 55, facilitates the housing of the working classes in rural districts. It provides a simpler method of purchase of land, being that at present enjoyed by parish councils for various purposes under the Local Government Act, 1894; a power of compulsory hiring of land, adapted from the same statute; powers of delegation to parochial committees and parish councils as to building, furnishing, and management; and makes provision for easier repayment of loans. It further gives to the parish council, in default of action by the rural district council, the option of appeal, either to the County Council or the Local Government Board, and also facilitates the amendment of bye-laws which have been found so stringent as to restrict unduly the building of cottages, &c.—Sir Walter Foster (L.).

No. 111, makes provision as to loans and the application of surplus funds, allows larger gardens for rural districts, confers on the medical officers of health, &c., the power of making representation in respect of the insufficiency of the existing supply of houses for the working classes, and lays down regulations as regards unhealthy areas and unhealthy houses and cubic space, &c.—Mr. Nannetti (N.).

INFANT LIFE PROTECTION ACT (1897) AMENDMENT ACT (128).

To extend the provisions of the Act of 1897 to cases where only one child is taken in to be nursed or maintained, and to any child received in consideration of a sum of money paid down, whatever the amount may be; to raise to seven years the age limit of children within the Act; to enable the local authorities to remove an infant kept by a person who is unfit by reason of character, or otherwise, to have its care and maintenance, or who is in a house or premises unsuitable for the purpose, although such person or premises are not so unfit as to endanger the child's health; and to require notice to be given of all changes of residence of a person having the care or custody of children within the Act, under penalty of imprisonment or fine, &c.—Mr. Spear (L.U.).

*JUDICATURE AND DEVELOPMENT GRANT (IRELAND) BILL (248).

To augment the Ireland Development Grant by means of the abolition of two judgeships and the reduction of the salary of the Lord Chancellor and the transfer of certain accumulations, and to make provision with respect to the application of portion of that grant.—Mr. Walter Long (C.).

JUVENILE SMOKING BILL (99).

To provide for the prevention of juvenile smoking.—Dr. Macnamara (L.).

LAND VALUES TAXATION (SCOTLAND) BILL (10).

To provide for the taxation for local purposes of land values in burghs in Scotland.

—Mr. Ainsworth (L.).

LAND VALUES ASSESSMENT AND RATING BILL (7).

LAND TENURE BILL (169).

To extend, cheapen, and simplify the law of compensation for tenants' improvements. Among other provisions, it allows the tenant, on the determination of the tenancy, to claim compensation for adding to the agricultural value of the holding; makes unnecessary the consent of the landlord for the repairing of buildings, &c.; limits the landlord's right of distraint for rent to one year; places landlord and tenant on an equality in making claims; and provides that disputes are to be settled, in default of agreement, by a single arbitrator appointed by the Board of Agriculture.—Mr. Lambert (L.).

LEASEHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT BILL (27).

To provide for the enfranchisement of leaseholds.—General Laurie (C.).

LOCAL AUTHORITIES (TAXATION AND PURCHASE OF LAND) BILL (125).

To provide for the taxation and purchase of land by local authorities.—Dr. Macnamara (L.).

LIQUOR TRAFFIC, LOCAL VETO (SCOTLAND) BILL (8).

To give the ratepayers a direct veto on the liquor traffic in their respective areas in Scotland.— $M\tau$. Hunter Craig (L.).

*LOCAL AUTHORITIES (TRANSFER OF TREASURY POWERS) BILL (81).

To transfer to the Local Government Board the powers of the Treasury under enactments relating to local authorities.—Mr. Victor Cavendish (L.U.).

*LONDON (EQUALISATION OF RATES) BILL (295),

To make provision for the taking of a census in 1906 for the purpose of the London (Equalisation of Rates) Act, 1894.—Mr. Gerald Balfour (C.).

*LUNACY BILL (179).

To amend the Lunacy Acts.—Sir R. B. Finlay (L.U.).

*MARINE INSURANCE BILL (85).

To codify the law relating to marine insurance.—Sir R. B. Finlay (L.U.).

MERCHANT SHIPPING BILLS (37), (80), (210).

Three Bills were brought in :-

No. 37, the MERCHANT SHIPPING (ALIENS) BILL [H.L.], prevents aliens from obcaining the sole control of British ships and property.—Lord Muskerry (C.).

*No. 80, the Merchant Shipping Bill, amends the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1894 to 1900, by requiring foreign-going ships to be provided with certificated cooks, extending the rules relating to the inspection of provisions, and prohibiting the engagement of seamen with an insufficient knowledge of English.—Mr. Gerald Biljour (C.).

No. 210, the MERCHANT SHIPPING (PILOTAGE) BILL, amends the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, by enforcing restrictions on the granting of pilotage certificates to masters and mates.—Sir H. Seymour King (C.).

*MILITARY MANŒUVRES BILL (163) [H.L.].

To amend the Military Manœuvres Act, 1897.—Earl of Donoughmore (C.).

MINISTER OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY BILL (68).

To establish a bureau for a Minister of Commerce and Industry.—Mr. Louis Sinclair (C.). MOTOR CAR BILLS (207) AND (258).

No. 207 is to require a non-resident alien, on applying for a driver's licence, to furnish to the Council of the county or county borough to whom he makes application, particulars of his nationality, place of birth, and place of residence, and also evidence, in writing, from the police authority of his place of residence that his character and conduct as a driver of motor-cars has been satisfactory, &c.—Mr. Scott Montagu (C.). The object of No. 258 is to increase the penalties for reckless driving.—Mr. Soares (L.).

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE (COMPANIES) BILL (39).

AGRICULTURE—

AGRICULTURAL LABOURERS-

Report on Wages, Earnings, and Conditions of Employment of Agricultural Labourers in United Kingdom. (Cd. 2376.)

This Report by Mr. Wilson Fox deals mainly with the rates of wages and the total yearly earnings.

The figures are for 1902, but substantially apply to 1903 and 1904, as there has been but little movement in the wages of the agricultural classes during the last two years.

The average earnings per week of ordinary labourers are :-

Ū	·	-	19	02.	•	18	98.
			8.	d.		8.	d.
England			17	5		 16	9
Wales			17	7		 16	6
Scotland			19	5		 18	2
Treland			10	Ď.		 10	2

The rise here shown is chiefly due to increases of time wages, which took place between 1898 and the end of 1901.

There has been a marked increase of wages since 1870 in the United King. dom, amounting for 1850-1903 to 57 per cent. per week in the case of 69 farms in England and Wales, whence figures were taken. In Scotland a similar increase is noticeable.

Cottage rents in rural districts of England and Wales in 1904 were from ls. to 2s. a week. The decline in number of farm labourers between 1891-1901 has resulted in decrease of over-crowding in cottages.

In Ireland usual rent is 1s. a week. In Scotland, cottages valued at £3 to £5 a year are given free as part wages to most married men.

Highest average weekly earnings in 1902 varied from 22s. 2d. in Durham and Lanark to 13s. in Co. Down.

Lowest average weekly earnings ranged from 15s. 3d. in Norfolk to 10s. in Dorset.

The lowest weekly earnings were Roscommon and Sligo—namely, 7s. in both winter and summer, COAL...

EXPORTS.—Return for the year 1904. (112.)

SUPPLIES.—Final Report of Royal Commission; Minutes of Evidence, Plans and Diagrams. (Cd. 2353) to (Cd. 2365.)

The following are the more important conclusions the Commissioners came to :-

Adopting (as in 1871) 4,000 ft. as limit of practicable working depth, and 1 ft. as minimum workable thickness, the available coal in proved coalfields of United Kingdom is estimated at 100,914,668,167 tons, as against 90,207,285,398 tons estimated in 1871.

Present output is 230 million tons per annum, and the average increase for the last 30 years in annual output has been 21 per cent.; this increase is likely, owing to physical considerations, to decline gradually.

Among possible economies, coal-cutting machines, more careful preparation for market, and coking are the chief suggestions offered, but the Commissioners say:—"We are convinced that coal is our only reliable source of power, and that there is no real substitute."

The general opinion was expressed that the maintenance of a large export trade in coal is of supreme importance to the country.

The Navy consumes about one-sixteenth of the output of the special class of coal required (Welsh).

Principal competitors are Germany and the United States of America. Since 1870 Germany's output has increased over four-fold; that of the United States of America ten-fold; whilst that of the United Kingdom has little more than doubled.

In the United Kingdom the cost of working has steadily increased, and the rate of increase in export has been greater than that of our total output.

"We cannot doubt that an export duty must restrict the tonnage exported," was the expressed opinion of the Commissioners on the Coal Duty.

From the existing information, the Commissioners came to the conclusion that: -- "In view of the estimated coal resources, and of an anticipation that the present rate of increase in output will soon be checked by natural causes, there seems no present necessity to restrict artificially the export of coal in order to conserve it for home supply."

Of the 122 settlements, 85 were effected by arbitration, and 37 by conciliation.

EGYPT-

Reports by H.M.'s Agent and Consul-General on the Finances, Administration and Condition of Egypt and the Soudan in 1904. (Cd. 2409.)

The year 1904 was to Egypt "one of unexampled presperity." Revenue shows a surplus over expenditure; trade is increasing; there is an enormous increase in the river traffic as a result of the removal of the lock dues on the Nile.

The following extracts from Lord Cromer's Report are proof positive of the gain from the Anglo-French Agreement:—" Both England and France have gained in the removal of a difference of opinion which has for long embittered the relations of two nations whose common interest it is to strengthen the bands of close friendship." (Page 4.)

"One of the numerous advantages which have resulted from the recent Anglo-French Agreement, is that the law relating to the Egyptian Debt has been greatly simplified." (Pages 9, 10.)

Lord Cromer further says:—"That the feeling of renewed security, engendered by the conclusion of the Anglo-French Agreement, attracted European capital to the country." (Page 32.)

And in referring to the Egyptian railways, he writes:—" One of the most beneficial results of the Anglo-French Agreement has been to leave to the Egyptian Government a free hand to deal with this subject." (Page 37.) In concluding, Lord Cromer says:—"The new aspect under which all questions of an international character will be treated, now that the Anglo-French Agreement has been signed, affords additional justification for expressing a belief that the year 1905 opens under auspices of a peculiarly favourable nature for the cause of Egyptian progress and reform." (Page 90.) The full value of the Soudan to Egypt could not be rightly estimated until Sir William Garstin's report appeared.

Lord Cromer points out that: - "It was always sufficiently obvious that the Power which held the head waters of the Nile commanded the Egyptian supply. Sir William Garstin showed, in addition, that, if the supply was to be increased, the scene of action would have to be, not in Egypt itself, but in the most remote provinces of the Soudan." (Page 119.

The next sentence may be recommended to the consideration of Mr. Morley and those other gentlemen who defined the Soudan expeditions of 1896-98 "as nothing short of madness," and who commented upon "the unwisdom, the impudence, and the folly of the expedition."

"To contest the value of the country to Egypt would, therefore, be flying in the face of facts which do not admit of any manner of doubt." (Page 119.)

The Report shews that at the end of 1904, there were 104,472 factories and 145,172 workshops under inspection. The approximate number of persons employed in factories and workshops were 4,000,000 and 700,000 respectively. The total number of accidents reported under the Factory Act rose from 92,600 in 1903 to 92,968 in 1904, but there was some reduction in the number of fatal accidents which decreased from 1,047 to 1,018. During the year there were 3,000 prosecutions, an increase of 365 over the previous 12 months.

FOOD SUPPLY-

Report of Royal Commission on Food Supply in time of War, with Minutes of Evidence and Appendices. (Cd. 2643.) Cd. 2644.) (Cd. 2645.)

The main conclusions of the Commission, subject to certain reservations by individual Commissioners, are as follows:-

Taking wheat as the article of food of the "greatest importance," they conclude (a) that our stock of wheat within the United Kingdom "will seldom fall so low as seven weeks' supply," and (b) that taking five weeks' supply as the average amount of wheat afloat for the United Kingdom, a fifth of this will probably be within one week's sail of our shores.

After expressing an opinion that International Law will contribute "in an important degree to the maintenance of our security by placing restrictions upon the operations of our enemies," and drawing attention to the benefit we obtain by getting our supplies from as many sources as possible, the Commission go on to say that they consider that "the effect of the naval and shipping evidence is conclusive as to the point that, while there will be some interference with trade and some captures, not only is there no risk of a total cessation of our supplies, but no reasonable probability of serious interference with them, and that, even during a maritime war, there will be no material diminution in their volume.'

They conclude in short, that a situation is not likely to arise "in which there would be a risk of actual starvation of our population into submission.'

The Commission then turned their attention to the possible effect of war upon prices and upon the condition of the poorer classes, and to a consideration of what steps should be taken "to minimise the risk of panic and to maintain, so far as possible, a steady level of prices in time of war."

Schemes for maintaining national granaries, and others involving the Government in the actual purchase and sale of food stuffs, were not favourably entertained; though the Commission was of opinion that if larger stocks were to be held in this country, "a scheme for offering storage room rent free would be open to few objections." A proposal that subsidies should be paid to farmers to induce them to keep their grain in the rick for a longer period, was also found to be open to objections.

The Commission, on the other hand, recommended that steps should be taken to see that more satisfactory returns of stocks of wheat held in this country are available, and made a further more important recommendation for the setting up of a system of National Indemnity, whereby it is proposed that the Government shall undertake to make good to shipowners and merchants loss of ships and cargoes by capture in time of war. The advantages to be gained by such a system seem, in the opinion of the Commission, to outweigh any objections.

In conclusion, the Committee recommend the appointment of a "small expert Committee," who should investigate the subject and frame a scheme of National Indemnity after consultation with underwriters and others interested in our mercantile marine.

IMPORT DUTIES-

Statement of Rates of Import Duties levied in European countries, in the United States, in Japan, China, and Persia, upon the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom, 1904. (Cd. 2340.)

The following are the principal changes recorded:-

In Sweden the import duty on electrical machinery has been increased from 10 per cent. to 15 per cent., ad valorem, and the duties on various kinds of perfumery have also been increased.

As a consequence of the exemption of sugar used for certain industrial purposes from excise duties in Belgium, imported sugars to be used for like purposes are now only subjected to duty at the rate of 5 frs. 50 cts. per 100 kilogs.; and rates have been established for machinery made of aluminium, and for machine belting of leather or of india-rubber.

In France, alterations have taken place in the duties on clocks and clock movements, on sugar-candy and on sweet biscuits containing chocolate. Modifications have been introduced into the Customs tariff of Spain with regard to books, playing cards, fresh fish, alcohol, and wheat and wheat flour.

In Greece the duties on wheat and wheat flour have been increased, and it should be noted that all Customs duties in Greece, except those the rate of which is fixed by commercial treaties, have now to be paid in paper currency, 1.45 drachmes being fixed as the equivalent of the gold drachme.

In Japan, additional import duties have been imposed temporarily under the head of a war tax on certain articles not covered by the various commercial treaties with Japan.

In China, margarine, silk piece goods, and paper are to be dutiable at 5 per cent. ad valorem, instead of at specific rates in each case.

In addition to the new tariffs framed by Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Switzerland, a tariff has now been issued by Roumania. Colonial Import Duties, 1905.

Copy of the Indian Financial Statement for 1905-6, and the proceedings of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General thereon.

This statement shows that notwithstanding local misfortunes Indian finances are in a satisfactory condition. It is expected that 1904–5 will close with the large surplus of £3,485,500, whilst for 1905–6 there should be a surplus of £3,398,800, on the present basis of revenue and expenditure. Large remissions of taxation, however, have been decided on, and also the setting aside of considerable sums for improvements in civil administration. These are estimated at £2,495,000 per annum. The effect will be to reduce the estimated surplus of 1905–6 to £903,800.

The revenue has increased from £77,400,000 in 1900-1, to £84,699,100 in 1904-5, whilst the expenditure in 1904-5 shows an increase of over £500,000 compared to 1903-4. There is an estimated revenue for 1905-6 of £83,433,000, and an estimated expenditure for 1905-6 of £82,529,200.

The actual increase in revenue for 1904-5 over that estimated was chiefly due to the remarkable elasticity of the railway revenue, whilst opium contributed a large addition.

The rise in expenditure for 1904-5 was due mainly to the Tibet mission, and to outlay connected with the reorganization and redistribution of the army. (167.)

^{*} Exclusive of Government Stores.

Correspondence regarding the Administration of the Army in India. (Cd. 2572).

The correspondence arose out of a difference of opinion between Lord Kitchener and the Government of India; the former alleging that in the present military organization in India there was a duality of control, the latter denying such to be the case or that there was any friction between the two departments. Lord Kitchener formulated certain proposals to abolish dual control, the acceptance of which proposals was opposed by Lord Curzon, and the Imperial Government gave the following decision on the matter. The Government start with drawing a clear distinction between purely military services, which should be controlled by the Commander-in-Chief, and the services of supply and manufacture, which will be under the control of a separate officer. There will be two departments:—
(1) The "Army Department" will be in charge of the Commander-in-

Chief as Member of Council. He will be directly responsible for command, staff and regimental appointments, promotion, discipline, training, and

(2) The "Department of Military Supply" will be in charge of another Member of Council, whose duties will be limited to responsibility to Government for the control of army contracts, the purchase of stores, ordnance and remounts, the management of military works, the clothing and manufacturing departments, Indian medical service, and Indian marine.

It is suggested that the Military Finance Department should be transferred to the Finance Department of the Governor-General.

The relations between the two departments are, of course, the most important thing. The business of the Military Supply Department is more of a civil than of a military nature. Purely military proposals will not be criticised or vetoed by the Department; that rests exclusively with the Rovernor-General in Council. It will be the duty of the Member of Council in charge of Military Supply to specially advise the Governor-General in Council on questions of general policy, as distinct from purely military questions.

INDIA-continued.

An additional officer of superior rank will be appointed as Chief of the Staff, in view of the increasing duties of recent years. The Commander-in-Chief must of necessity be in a position to submit his schemes direct to the Governor-General in Council, which is not at present the case. It is, therefore, essential that there should be a Secretary to the Government of India in the Army Department, to prepare cases and documents, and to deal with correspondence. By such measures as these the Government hope that the present conflict of authorities will be ended, and greater freedom of working given to the Commander-in-Chief who will wield powers and possess machinery adequate for the furtherance of his military schemes, but not such as to free him from proper financial and political criticism; for the undoubted supremacy of the Governor-General in Council is maintained.

Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction. Report for 1903-4. (Cd. 2509.)

The Report testifies to the fact that the Conservative party is continuing its policy of successful development.

The details of the Department's operations are arranged under the six following heads:—agriculture, technical instruction, fisheries, statistics and intelligence, veterinary, and transit and markets. As advisory bodies of the Department, there are the Council of Agriculture, the Agricultural Board, and the Board of Technical Instruction. The funds available are the Endowment Fund and the Parliamentary Vote. The former amounts to £171,000. The latter, into which are brought the grant for the payment of salaries of officers transferred to the Department, amounts to £191,000.

The work done by the agricultural branch is treated under the following heads:—(a) Agricultural instruction; (b) improvement of live stock; (c) special investigations.

As regards agricultural instruction the number of itinerant instructors was increased last year from 10 to 17, and their services were much appreciated. They delivered during the year 1,159 lectures, at each of which there was an average attendance of 64.

Special investigation has been carried on mainly on the influence of manures and seeds in the yield of crops. The reports of the results have been issued in the form of leaflets, and have been largely distributed among farmers. Over 30,000 reports and returns dealing with agricultural subjects were distributed, and 27 new leaflets and bulletins were prepared and over 2 million copies circulated. The year 1903 was the best the Irish sea fisheries have had in the past decade, save 1899; and the Department continued to afford instruction in various matters concerning fishing. The schemes of technical instruction have also continued to make encouraging progress in the cities and towns.

MINES AND QUARRIES-

General Report and Statistics for 1904. (Cd. 2540.) (Cd. 2734.) (Cd. 2745.)

During 1904, there were 877,057 persons employed in and about the mines of the United Kingdom. Of these no less than 847,553 were at work in coal mines. This is an increase of 5,487 persons over the previous year. Of those working in coal mines, 681,683, or over 80 per cent., were at work underground. Of the 165,870 surface workers, 5,513, or 3·32 per cent., were females. The number of young persons under 16 at work underground in these mines was 44,628, or 6·54 per cent. of the underground workers, whilst the total number of workers under 16 was 60,360, or 7·12 per cent. of all the workers. Of the 29,504 persons at work in mines other than coal mines, 17,284 persons, or nearly 59 per cent., were at work below ground. There were 97,577 persons employed at quarries under the Quarries Act; 62,249 worked inside the actual pits or excavations and the remainder outside.

The output of coal during the year was 232,411,784 tons. In addition, 16,488 tons were produced from open quarries, so that the total output of coal was 232,428,272 tons, which is an increase of 2,093,803 tons on that of the previous year.

The output of other minerals was 3,246,336 tons, of which 1,603,855 tons were iron ore. Altogether, the total output of iron ore from both mines and quarries was 13,774,282 tons. The total quantity of stone and other minerals obtained from the quarries under the Quarries Act was 45,701,818 tons.

There were 1,055 deaths at the mines under the Coal Mines Act. This is a decrease of 17 in the number of deaths during the previous year. In other mines there were 35 accidental deaths, which is an increase of 10 over the previous year; 112 accidental deaths occurred in the quarries. 3,512 non-fatal accidents were reported at mines under the Coal Mines Act, 232 at other mines, and 1,278 at quarries.

These figures, however, are no guide to the number of fatal accidents which actually occurred, because much latitude is allowed as to notification.

(i.) The appointment of Special Committee on Designs to assist the Board and the Director of Naval Construction.

(ii.) Withdrawal of all vessels from peace commission which would in war be found of inferior fighting efficiency.

(iii.) Home Fleet to be called Channel Fleet, with headquarters at Home; composition, 12 battleships and sufficient cruisers.

(iv.) Channel Fleet to be called Atlantic Fleet; based at Gibraltar; composition, 8 battleships and sufficient cruisers.

(v.) To the above two fleets Cruiser Squadrons are to be affiliated, each composed of 6 armoured cruisers.

(vi.) Separate South Atlantic Squadron abolished.

(vii.) Mediterranean Fleet to consist of 8 battleships, with cruisers, based at Malta, as before. The large cruisers to be known as the Third Cruiser Squadron.

(viii.) Repairs: Channel Fleet, Home Dockyards; Atlantic Fleet, Gibraltar; Mediterranean Fleet, Malta. Never more than 2 battleships of Channel Fleet and I each of Atlantic and Mediterranean Fleets are to be in dock-yard hands at same time.

(ix.) Atlantic Fleet to be under orders of Commander-in-Chief of Mediterranean Fleet twice a year, and of Commander-in-Chief of Home Fleet once a year, for combined exercises.

(x.) Cruisers in extra-European waters to be grouped as follows:-

(1) Eastern Group-Cruisers of China, Australia, and East Indies ... Stations.

(2) Cape of Good Hope Squadron.

(3) Western Group—Cruisers of North American and West Indian Stations, and new Particular Service Squadron.

(xi.) Particular Service Squadron to serve as training squadron, replace present vessels, and consist of modern fighting ships.

(xii.) All commissions to be reduced to 2 years.

(xiii.) Fleet Reserve—Fighting Ships to have a nucleus crew of two-fifths of war complement, to include all expert ratings, and to be grouped at 3 Home Ports.

(xiv.) Manœuvres in 1905 and 1906 to test this scheme.

(xv.) Modern cruisers will be substituted for the older ones at present acting as schools of navigation or tenders to gunnery schools.

(xvi.) A certain number of ships of small fighting value will be withdrawn from commission, leaving sufficient on every station to serve as Imperial Police. Four cruiser squadrons will be employed to demonstrate in force wherever advisable, for political or strategical reasons.

RUSSIA-

Correspondence respecting Contraband of War in connection with the Hostilities between Russia and Japan. (Cd. 2348.)

Correspondence relating to the North Sea Incident. (Cd. 2350.)

This Parliamentary Paper covers the period from night of the outrage (21st-22nd October, 1904) to signature of Anglo-Russian Convention in St. Petersburgh (November 25th, 1904).

On October 23rd the Foreign Office received information from Messrs. Jackson & Co. of the attack on the fishing fleet off the Dogger Bank, with details of damage.

On October 24th, Sir Charles Hardinge called on Count Lamsdorff to ask for an explanation of the occurrence.

On October 27th, Lord Lansdowne was informed of telegraphic statement received at Russian Embassy from Admiral Rojestvensky, 'that the North Sea Incident was caused by the action of two torpedo boats steaming at full speed, with no lights, towards the leading Russian ship, but every effort was rande to spare the trawlers, and that no assistance was rendered the latter on account of their apparent complicity.

This explanation Lord Lansdowne pronounced inacceptable, and formulated British demands for an inquiry before the fleet left Vigo, responsible persons, as also witnesses, to be left behind, also that a full inquiry as to facts should be held at once by an independent court of international character, and that Russian Government should punish adequately any persons found guilty by the Commission.

Meanwhile the Emperor and Bussian Government at once expressed profound regret, and promised liberal compensation, and agreed to an inquiry being held into the facts by an International Commission. Instructions would also be issued by Russian Government to secure the immunity of neutral commerce and prevent repetition of such incidents. The substance of this was communicated to the world in Mr. Balfour's speech at Southampton, October 28th, 1904.

After the landing of certain Russian officers at Vigo for the purposes of the inquiry, Count Benckendorff stated that there was no reason the Russian ships should be detained longer. Lord Lansdowne, however, desired to learn of actual issue of instructions for future prevention of such incidents, and requested information as to rank of officers landed, and a settlement of terms of reference to International Commission, such to include the authority to apportion responsibility and blame.

This latter question produced a discussion between the two Governments, which ended in the revision of the disputed Article II as follows: "The Commission shall inquire into and report on all the circumstances relative to the North Sea Incident and particularly on the question as to where the responsibilities lies, and the degree of blame attaching to the subjects of the two High Contracting Parties, or to the subjects of other countries in the event of their responsibility being established by the inquiry." This remained the final wording of Article II in the Convention signed 25th November, 1904.

Previous official inquiries of the various Foreign Powers had elicited assurances that no foreign torpedo boats were on the Dogger Bank at the time of the incident.

The Japanese Ambassador gave a similar assurance, and the British Admiralty stated that no British torpedo boat or destroyer was in the North Sea between the afternoon of October 21st and October 24th.

lands amount to a total of £151,503. This has been wholly paid out of funds accumulated from annual income. Improvements in connection with the breeding of live stock continue to be appreciated.

During the seven years, 1898 to 1905, the expenditure on works has been:—Marine works, £43,984; roads, bridges, and paths, £44,359; minor lights and sea-marks, £2,071; miscellaneous works, £8,588; in all £99,002.

and sea-marks, £2,071; miscellaneous works, £8,588; in all £99,002. Liability has also been incurred to the annual amount of £445 for telegraph extensions, and £12 10s. for Money Order and Savings Bank Offices.

STRIKES AND LOCK-OUTS—

Report, 1904. (Cd. 2631.)

The following comparison of a year of Radical rule with a year of Conservative rule is of interest:—

	Radical. 1894.	Conservative. 1904.
Number of Disputes	 929	354
Workpeople affected	 325,248	86,888
Duration of Disputes in working days	 9.529,010	1,454,220

As a matter of fact, the disputes recorded in 1904 affected under 1 per cent. of the industrial population of the United Kingdom. Of the working days lost, more than two-fifths was accounted for by disputes in the mining and quarrying industries. If spread over the whole industrial population, the amount of working time lost would be about one-seventh of a day per head during the year.

SUEZ CANAL-

Returns of Shipping and Tonnage, 1902-3-4. (Cd. 2528.)

The Returns still show a marked increase upon previous years, due to heavy shipments of wheat from India to Europe, and to the large consignments of coal for the Far East. The net tonnage of 1904 shows an increase of 1,494,547 tons over that of 1903, and of 2,153,422 tons over that of 1902. The transit receipts amounted to the record figure of 115,818,479 fr. Nearly 500 more vessels passed through than in 1903, 400 of which carried the British flag.

The tonnage of British vessels has increased over that of 1903 by 1,430,376, while 196,296 represent Germany's increase. The percentage of British vessels and their net tonnage increased in 1904, being 63.2 and 65.9 respectively, as against 60.6 and 62.2 in 1903. The percentage of German vessels and their net tonnage was 12.8 and 14.7, as against 13.1 and 14.9 in 1903. Of the other maritime nations the percentage of net tonnage remained practically stationary.

Classification. Total. Tonnage. British. Tonnage. Merchant Vessels . . 3,287 10,316,600 2,433 7,847,307 The British proportion being, thus 74 per cent. of the total number and fully 76.06 per cent. of the tonnage.

Second Series of Memoranda, Statistical Tables, and Charts prepared in the Board of Trade with reference to British and Foreign Trade and Industrial Conditions. (Cd. 2337.)

This volume of Memoranda, Statistical Tables, and Charts deals (I. to VI.) broadly with questions directly relating to the conditions of the working classes-i.e., consumption of food, cost of living, &c.-and the fluctuations in employment, pauperism, emigration, and savings banks deposits.

IX. to XI. deal with Customs Duties, and more especially with the relative incidence of Foreign and Colonial tariffs on the exports of British manufactured goods, including a revised and more complete statement of the tariff treatment of British goods by foreign countries.

XII. to XVI. relate to various aspects of foreign trade, and include a table showing six months' results of new method of registering imports by country of consignment, together with information on the subject of drawbacks and kindred methods of remitting duties.

The last memorandum (No. XVII.) gives preliminary results of an analysis from various official returns of information respecting the distribution of population engaged in the chirf industrial occupations.

WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOUR-

Report on Changes in rates of Wages and Hours of Labour in the United Kingdom in 1904, with Comparative Statistics for 1895-1903. (Cd. 2674.)

Wages during 1904 resulted, as in each of the three preceding years, in a net reduction. The industries principally affected were coal mining, iron mining, iron and steel manufacture, ship-building, glass bottle making, and building.

The industries for which definite statistics can be obtained show that about 801,000 workpeople had their wages changed in 1904. The changes were:—

INCREASES.

16,000 people to the amount of £1,200 per week.

DECREASES.

785,000 to the amount of £40,400 per week.

The net result of all these changes was thus a decrease of over £39,200 in weekly wages. Figures of decreases for previous years are:—

1001						70.000
1901		• •	• •		• •	 76,600
1902	••			• •		 72,600

WEST INDIES-

Despatch to Governors respecting Mail Contract. (Cd. 2481.)

This despatch sets forth the views of His Majesty's Government, with the object of removing the prevailing misunderstanding upon the matter which was then closed. After pointing out the disadvantages and difficulties of the ten existing contract, the despatch recorded that to a call for tenders for 5½ years' mail service, returnable October 1st (1904), one company only, the Royal Mail, had responded. Of their three tenders the Lords of the Treasury would only consider one, viz., a subsidy of £100,000 per annum. This, in view of the known inability of the Colonies to increase their subsidy was rejected by His Majesty's Government, who recommended that the contract should be allowed to lapse, and this decision was arrived at, and the discontinuance fixed as from July 1st, 1905. The discontinuance of the contract, in view of the decided opposition shown by two important Colonies, and of the indications of unfavourable official feeling in the others, was regarded by His Majesty's Government as the safer, though not the more convenient, course.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION-

Report of the Departmental Committee to Inquire into the Law relating to Compensation for Injuries to Workmen. Vol. i., Report and Appendices; Vol. ii., Minutes of Evidence; Vol. iii., Memorandum on Colonial and Foreign Laws. (Cd. 2208); (Cd. 2334); (Cd. 2458.)

Copy of the Acts, 1897 and 1900, showing Amendments proposed by Bill as brought from the Lords. (188.)

Statistics of Proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1897 and 1900, and the Employers' Liability Act, 1886, during 1904. (Cd. 2727.)

The Report gives an emphatic answer to the charge that the Act occasions too much legislation. During 1904, 34 cases were taken to the Court of Appeal, or little more than one out of every hundred that came before the County Courts. The great majority of claims were settled by agreement, and only a small percentage were made the subject of formal arbitration. Even in cases of death, where a large sum is payable, and likely therefore to be the subject of dispute, not more than one-quarter came before the Courts in any form. Many of these cases were finally settled out of Court, and the only question was the division of the compensation among the dependents.

In cases of claims for injury no official figures exist, but from unofficial figures, it seems probable that less than one out of every 100 cases is the subject of litigation.

Last year 2,435 cases came before the County Court judges or arbitrators in England and Wales; 705 of these cases were either withdrawn or settled out of Court. Out of the 1,730 cases settled by the Court, the applicant gained the day in 1,207 cases. In 557 cases a lump sum was awarded; in 650 there was a weekly payment. Out of the 557 cases in which a lump sum was awarded 452 were on account of death. The average amount of compensation in these cases was £177 10s. 11d. The remaining 105 cases dealt with grants of compensation for injury, the average of which was £34 12s. 8d. In the 650 cases of injury in which a weekly sum was assigned, 409 were

In the 650 cases of injury in which a weekly sum was assigned, 409 were cases of total, and 241 cases of partial, incapacity. The weekly amount of compensation in cases of total incapacity averaged 11s. 9d.; of partial incapacity, 10s. 8d.

In 3,625 cases, memoranda of agreement were registered in County Courts. This represents but a very small proportion of the agreements under the Act. In these cases the awards to dependents in cases of death averaged £151 7s. 5d.; and the weekly payments in cases of incapacity averaged 12s. 11d.

Information as to the charge placed upon industries by the Act is only available in the case of railways. In this industry the amount paid as compensation works out at less than 10s. per £100 of wages paid.

WORKMEN'S TRAINS.—Report from Select Committee and Minutes of Evidence. (270.)

POLITICAL DIARY, 1904-5.

Proceedings in Parliament are included in the Parliamentary Summary, page 262.

NOVEMBER, 1904.

21st. Mr. Asquith, M.P., in a speech at Cambridge, said that the Liberal contention was that Mr. Chamberlain's scheme was one of open and avowed protection, and that Mr. Balfour's so-called policy was either absolutely meaningless or involved indirectly a return to protection.
22nd. The Times: Correspondence between Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., and

22nd. The Times: Correspondence between Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., and Mr. Chaplin, M.P., with reference to a statement by Sir Henry that Mr. Chaplin said that Colonial Preference involved the taxation of raw materials. Mr. Chaplin denied this statement, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman expressed his regret at his inaccuracy.

23rd. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., speaking at Rugby, said that we ought to resume the old power of making bargains with foreign countries. By following this course we should regain some of the markets we had lost. He could not understand the attitude of those who opposed the Prime Minister's pr posal for a Colonial Conference.

Lord Londonderry spoke at Wynyard Park.

24th. Mr. Ritchie, M.P., in a speech at Croydon, said economy of public finance was needed.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., speaking at Perth, said that the real test of the rival merits of free trade and protection was in manufactured exports.

Mr. Rigg, M.P., announced that his views on the chief questions of the day were no longer in accord with those of the Liberal party, and offered to resign his seat. His resignation was accepted by the Liberal organisation for the Appleby Division of Westmorland.

the Appleby Division of Westmorland.

26th. Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Haslemere; Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., at Folkestone; Mr. Wyndham, M.P., at the Annual Dinner of the United Club; Earl Percy, M.P., at Huddersfield; and Sir E. Grey, M.P., at Hastings.

28th. Mr. Balfour, speaking at a Primrose League dinner at the Hotel Cecil, urged the Unionist party to adopt offensive rather than defensive tactics.

Mr. Atkinson, M.P., speaking at Londonderry, dealt with the question of devolution.

Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., spoke at Manchester.

29th. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., spoke at Croydon. He expressed his confidence in the value of the reforms that were being effected in the Army. As to the fiscal question, he was in full agreement with Mr. Balfour.

The Duke of Marlborough spoke at Liverpool.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., in a speech at Manchester, said that the policy of tariff reformers was to raise prices at home in the interests of individuals. The Government was committed to this so-called fiscal reform. It was playing fast and loose with its own honour and the interests of the Empire.

30th. Mr. Long, M.P., spoke at Bristol.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., addressing a deputation of unemployed at Manchester, said that a special session of Parliament, to deal with the question, was not likely. He thought that recipients of temporary relief ought not to be disfranchised.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Southend on the fiscal question.

DECEMBER.

1st. Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., spoke at Glasgow on the fiscal proposals of the Govern-

2nd. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., speaking at Oxford, denounced many of the main propositions of the tariff reformers as fallacious, and urged that our commercial liberty should be preserved.

Mr. Haldane, M.P., speaking at Bristol, said that to reform the administrative machine, to redeem secondary education from its chaotic condition, and to put the national expenditure on a proper basis would be the first work of the Liberal party in office.

Lord Rosebery spoke at Glasgow on the fiscal question.

Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., spoke at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Mr. Herbert Gladstone, M.P., spoke at Leeds.

Sir H. Kimber, M.P., at the Constitutional Club, discussed redistribution, and indicated the outlines of a plan which he had suggested to Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Walter Long, M.P., spoke on the unemployed at the Holborn Restaurant. Mr. Bryce, M.P., spoke in South Aberdeen, and Mr. H. Gladstone, M.P., spoke at Leeds.

Mr. Walter Long, M.P., spoke at Bristol on the sugar question. 7th.

- 8th. Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., at Herne Bay, said that the need for maintaining an invincible Navy would always remain.
 - Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., at Dunfermline, denounced Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal proposals and condemned the Brussels Sugar Convention. claimed the programme of the Liberal party to be definite, bold, and frank.

Sir H. Fowler, M.P., at Warwick, said that Colonial preference and retaliation were other names for protection in its extreme and most indefensible form.

9th. Mr. Walter Long, M.P., spoke at Banbury, and Earl Percy, M.P., spoke at Worcester.

Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., speaking at Edinburgh, denied Mr. Asquith's assertion that his Army reform scheme had been allowed to fall into abeyance.

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., speaking at Culross and Inverkeithing, said that the expenditure on the Boer War was the real cause of the outcry for protection.

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, M.P., spoke at Leeds, and Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., at Carmarthen.

10th. In reply to a deputation of the Imperial Federation (Defence) Committee, requesting that in any conference that might be held with the representatives of the Colonies, the subject of the Colonies' contribution towards Imperial defence might be considered, Mr. Balfour said that the future safety of the Empire called for yet greater watchfulness and greater efforts than had ever been the case in the past. As to the projected Colonial Conference, it was impossible that that should be restricted only to a consideration of the question of closer commercial union. It must meet unhampered and unfettered, but he earnestly trusted that the temper in which it would meet would not be how much each fragment of the Empire could get out of the other fragments, but how much each could give to the common whole.

12th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., at Spark Hill, dwelt on the necessity of checking Imperial and local expenditure and restricting borrowing, and commented on the absence of a definite policy on the part of the Opposition.

13th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., spoke on the fiscal question at Hay Mills.

Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., spoke at Spalding, and Mr. E. G. Pretyman, M.P., at Woodbridge.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Shere in support of Mr. Balfour's policy of retaliation.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., at Preston, said that Liberals were fighting, not against progress, but against reaction. The policy of the Government was to burke a fair and square fight between free trade and protection, and the proposed Colonial Conference was only another move in the game of procrastination.

Lord George Hamilton, M.P., spoke at Ealing condemning protection. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., spoke at Hanley.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Windsor.

Sir E. Grey, M.P., at Kendal, referred to the fiscal question, and strongly condemned any change in the present policy of the country.

15th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., discussed the sugar question at Redditch. Mr. Chamberlain spoke at Limehouse in continuation of his fiscal campaign. Referring to the alien problem, he said it was only part of the greater question of the employment of their own people. This was not, as their opponents asserted, a rich man's question; it was a matter of life and death to the working man.
Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., spoke at King's Heath.

16th.

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, M.P., at Birkenhead, commented on Mr. Chamberlain's Limehouse speech.

DECEMBER—continued.

17th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., speaking at Cotteridge, said he had no difficulty in following both Mr. Balfour and Mr. J. Chamberlain. He advocated retaliation and Colonial preference.

19th. Mr. A. Lyttelton, M.P., speaking in Glasgow, defended the introduction of Chinese labour into the Transvaal. He justified the Government's proposal to summon a Colonial Conference to deal with fiscal relations, and contended that all the reasons which Lord Rosebery had advanced against such a conference were really arguments in favour of it.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., at Cardiff, defended our present fiscal policy.

20th. Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., at Limehouse, said that the unemployed problem should be treated from the point of view of London as a whole. Referring to Mr. Chamberlain, he denied that he had any authority to speak for the Empire. He described the new fiscal proposals as essentially a part of a retrograde and anti-democratic system. As to alien immigration, the Liberal party was no more in favour of the introduction of undesirables than Mr. Chamberlain, but did object to a measure which would subject every passenger arriving at our ports to the indignity of search and inquisition. The Bill of last Session was a farce.

JANUARY, 1905.

4th. Lord Selborne, at Wolverhampton, said that the grandest dream that had ever been dreamed was Mr. Chamberlain's ideal of a united Empire. What would be the position of this country a couple of generations hence, with possibly a population of 40 millions, as against the hundreds of millions of Russia, France and Germany, if we refused to adopt the policy put forward by Mr. Chamberlain, and stood alone.

Lord Selborne, at Hardsworth, insisted on the necessity of Imperial unity, and 5th. urged that the proposed Colonial Conference would greatly contribute to that end.

Mr. Graham Murray, M.P., spoke at Rothesay.

Bye-election: Stalybridge: Mr. J. F. Cheetham (L.), 4,029; Mr. J. Travis 7th.

Clegg (C.), 3,078: Majority, 951.

Lord Percy, M.P., speaking at Selby, said that the Opposition would be given 9th. an opportunity next Session of remedying their tactics on the alien immigration question. He claimed that the Government had remedied the criminal apathy of their predecessors as regards armament.

Sir Robert Finlay, M.P., spoke at Inverness.

11th. Mr. Chamberlain spoke at Preston in continuance of his fiscal policy, and dealt especially with the cotton trade. He expressly declared that under no circumstances would he tax raw cotton. As regards the sugar duty, it was his object to reduce it, putting the burden on articles of luxury.

Mr. Walter Long, M.P., spoke at Weston-super-Mare in defence of the record of the Government, and Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., spoke at Croydon. Bye-election: Tower Hamlets (Mile End):—Mr. H. L. W. Lawson (C.), 2,138; Mr. B. S. Straus (L.), 2,060; Conservative majority, 78.

Mr. Balfour, speaking at Glasgow, said, with regard to the fiscal question, that he had nothing to add to, or take away from, what he had said at Edinburgh in the autumn. Concerning the Army, the important questions were the defence of India and the question of re-armament. He could confidently say that the whole Army would be re-armed in about two years, when we should be, in that respect, in advance of any other nation in the world. After urging that the development of the Empire had not kept pace with its magnitude and potential power, he emphasised the importance of the recent changes in naval organisation effected by the Admiralty. In conclusion, he urged the importance of strengthening union with the Colonies, and hoped that Colonial conferences would soon be as essential a part of the working machinery of the Empire as the House of Commons.

13th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., in reply to a deputation representing the sugarusing trades who urged the remission of the duty on sugar, disputed some of their contentions as to the consequences of the Brussels Convention in benefiting foreign competitors, and cited various facts to show that the gloomy picture of the condition of the sugar-using industries had been somewhat overdrawn. He could not hold out any hope that in the present condition of the national finances it would be possible for him, or for anyone in his position, to dispense with the revenue derived from sugar.

JANUARY—continued.

Lord George Hamilton, M.P., at Blackburn, upheld the principles of free trade as essential to the well-being of the nation and to the true unity of the Empire.

14th. Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Deganwy.

16th. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., presiding at a lecture in the course of instruction on military subjects in the University of London, said the diffusion of intelligence and education among officers was not so great as it ought to be, and unless the public schools better satisfied the necessary requirements, the War Office would have to look elsewhere for the supply of officers.

Sir Edward Grey, M.P., spoke at St. Andrews.
Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Conway.

17th. Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., speaking at Stirling, said the costly expenditure of the present Government on military adventures was far more responsible than foreign tariffs for the increase in the number of the unemployed. The only remedy was retrenchment. As regards the Ministry's attitude to the fiscal problem, it was to Mr. Chamberlain, and not to Mr. Balfour, that the country would look for the signal of the dissolution which it ardently desired, and for the terms of the appeal to the constituencies.

Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., at Glasgow, denied that the advance in the price of sugar was due to the Brussels Convention.

Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P. speaking at Manchester, severely criticised the Government, and said that the gravest count in the indictment against them was "constitutional misdemeanour."

Lord Brassey and Mr. Haldane, M.P., spoke at the Eighty Club on the subject of naval and military expenditure.

Lord Onslow spoke at Derby.

Mr. John Morley, M.P., spoke at Brechin. He held that the present Government was, at that moment, in the most humiliating and dishonoured position that any British Ministry had occupied since the days of the Stuarts. Both enterprise and public confidence were checked by the prolonged suspense regarding the fiscal agitation which had been forced on the country with so little wisdom and foresight.

19th. Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., spoke at Whitstable on the efficiency of the Army.

They had every reason to believe that within two years from March the entire Army would be re-armed with guns far and away better than anything possessed by any foreign Power, and exactly adapted to the requirements of the service.

Mr. St. John Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Shalford; Lord Onslow at Richmond criticised Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman's recent speech.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Reading, dealt at length with the question of alien immigration.

Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., spoke at the National Liberal Club.

20th. Mr. John Morley, M.P., speaking at Montrose, said the present Government had outraged the maxims and the principles which, since the time of Charles II., had animated all the Governments of this country. As regards retaliation, he said that if the Sugar Convention and its results were regarded as the Conservative idea of what was good for the country the outlook was very serious. One of the most scandalous incidents in our political history was that nobody knew what Mr. Balfour meant, and what he was going to ask the country to support him in securing.

Mr. Haldane, M.P., spoke at Worcester, indicating some general features of the Liberal policy.

Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., speaking at the centenary dinner of the Leeds 21st. Incorporated Law Society, said it was not the present intention of the Government to introduce any measure for the compulsory extension of the operation of the Land Transfer Act.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Glasgow.

24th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., speaking at Moseley, defended the Education and Licensing Acts.

Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., at Croydon, urged the importance and desirability of establishing a fiscal union between this country and the Colonies.

Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., speaking at Dover, said that unless the divisions in the lobby of the House of Commons compelled them, the Government had no intention of appealing to the country until the end of their term of office.

JANUARY-continued.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Wednesbury. Mr. Bryce, M.P., at Weston-super-Mare, in the course of criticising the Government, denounced as a mere sham the proposal of a Colonial Conference to deal with the fiscal question.

26th. Bye-election: Dorset (North):—Mr. A. W. Wills (L.), 4,239; Sir Randolf

Baker (C.), 3,330; Majority, 909.

Mr. Balfour, speaking at Manchester, said that the charge made against the Government by the Opposition, namely, that they were remaining in office immorally, illegitimately, and without a mandate, was fundamentally vicious, and one that he absolutely repudiated. After recapitulating his previous fiscal declarations, Mr. Balfour said he desired, in the first place, such alterations in our fiscal system as would give us the freedom of action, which was impossible while we held ourselves bound by the maxim that no tax should be imposed except for revenue. That would be useful in checking the importation of foreign protected goods. Then he desired closer fiscal union with the Colonies, and he advocated the reference of that Lastly, he did not wish to raise home subject to a Colonial conference. prices for the benefit of home producers.

Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., spoke at Canterbury; Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., spoke at South Queensferry; Sir E. Grey, M.P., and Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., spoke at the annual dinner of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce; Sir John Gorst, M.P., spoke at Oldham; and Mr. Winston Churchill, M.P., spoke at Manchester.

27th. Mr. Balfour, at Manchester, re-affirmed the views as to his constitutional position which he had expressed on the previous night. The country, he said, must place its faith in the Unionist party if it was to have security at home and peace abroad.

Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., speaking at Leeds, said that as regards the fiscal policy he agreed with the declarations of the Prime Minister at Manchester, and advocated conference with the Colonies on the question. The policy of the Government was not Protection, but Free Trade, because they desired freer and fairer trade with foreign countries, and also closer commercial unity with the Colonies.

Lord Stanley, M.P., speaking at Sheffield, acknowledged himself a free fooder, but at the same time he welcomed the aspirations of closer communications and closer harmony between the sons and daughters of the Empire beyond the seas.

Lord Goschen spoke at Cambridge, and said that while he now understood Mr. Balfour's policy he did not understand the methods by which he was going to carry it out.

Mr. Churchill, M.P., and Sir John Gorst, M.P., spoke at a Free Trade demonstration in Manchester.

28th. Mr. Chaplin, M.P., speaking at Cambridge, said he believed in free exchange between nations. He contended that Mr. Chamberlain's scheme would not increase the price of food, for the consumer would gain on the balance. 30th. Mr. Bryce, M.P., speaking at Lewes, declared that Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal proposals rested on contentions which had been proved to be untrue, and described Mr. Balfour's policy as unworkable.

31st. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., speaking at a house dinner of the Auxiliary Forces Club, said the problem before the country was to get rid of what was superfluous, in the sense of being inefficient, and to make more efficient that which remained.

Mr. Long, M.P., spoke at Bristol.

Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., spoke at Preston, and Mr. Chaolin, M.P., spoke at Oakham. FEBRUARY.

Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at Gainsborough, said that he had always considered that the improvement and elevation of the condition of the people, and the future of the Empire were the most important objects that could be dealt with by any statesman. The Empire had been built up by sacrifice, and only by sacrifice could it be maintained. Alluding to Coolen's indifference to the retention of our Colonial Empire, Mr. Chamberlain observed that posterity had, in this matter, given judgment against Coolen. The burden of our Imperial responsibilities was great, and the time might be coming when we should not be able te bear it alone. The experience of our recent war had turned the minds of both British and Colonial statesmen to a consideration of our mutual relations, and they had found them to be unsatisfactory, and had come to the conclusion that a practical tie was wanted which would only be found in preferential arrangements. He deprecated treating the proposed Colonial Conference as a party question.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., spoke at Malvern.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at the Merchant Taylor's Livery dinner.

2nd. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., speaking at Chelmsford, said we required an Army, in the first place, to carry on war against possible enemies outside these islands, and, secondly, to defend us against invasion. The Navy at present really constituted our home defence. The Army must be organised for its work over-sea, and we must improve the quality of the Volunteer and Militia forces.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., spoke at Birmingham on the Education Act and the fiscal question.

3rd. Mr. Brodrick, M.P., replying to a deputation from the Indian Tea Association, said that he found it difficult to follow the argument that the present depression in the trade was due entirely to the taxation which had been imposed. He pointed out reasons for thinking that the consumption of tea per head in this country, which was over 6 lb., was about the utmost that could be expected, and after commenting on the important fact urged by the deputation that the greater part of the duty fell on the producer, suggested that one remedy for the depression might be the conquering of new markets.

Mr. Morley, M.P., at Newbury, criticised Mr. Balfour's position on the fiscal question; and various aspects of the fiscal question were dealt with by Mr. Bryce, M.P., at Stroud; Mr. Haldane, M.P., at Chertsey; and Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., at Warrington.

4th. Sir Edward Carson, M.P., speaking at Manchester, and referring to Irish Unionist members, said that nothing afforded him so much grief and so much pain in his political life as to find those members intimating that they could no longer support his Majesty's Government.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Heywood, said that the blunder of the new protectionists was that they had professed to discover the weakness of our trade exactly where it was strongest.

6th. Mr. Chamberlain, at Birmingham, announced that the Chancellor of the Exchequer had undertaken to propose in the next Budget the doubling of the Government grants for University education.

7th. Mr. Balfour, in answer to a deputation of trade union representatives who laid before him suggestions for dealing with the problem of the unemployed, after pointing out that certain of those suggestions would be only temporary palliatives, said it would be an ill day for the industries of the country if it were attempted to substitute the State machinery for the machinery of private enterprise. He entirely agreed that anything which could reasonably be done to prevent hardship in connection with Government factories should be done, but what was the use of denouncing the Government for their bloated armaments, if at the same time they were attacked for obvious and necessary economies permitted by the change of circumstances? He deprecated rash experiments or tampering with the Poor Law; but the President of the Local Government Board was considering methods for establishing permanent machinery to deal with the distress due to the exceptional lack of employment.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., at a dinner of the Imperial Industries Club, referred to the enormous development of Indian trade, and expressed the opinion that, whatever fiscal policy might ultimately be adopted by this country, India would have to be considered even before the Colonies.

Lord Dunraven spoke at Dublin on Irish Reform, and Mr. Herbert Gladstone, M.P., speaking at Leeds, outlined the policy of the Liberal party.

8th. Mr. Wyndham, M.P., speaking at Kendal, defended the policy of Mr. Balfour in advocating retaliation and periodical conferences with the Colonies.

9th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., replied to a deputation of representatives of ship-owners, that he could not consent, at a time when the tax-payer was heavily burdened, to the transfer to the Imperial Exchequer of half-amillion a year which the shipping industry had always hitherto borne, and must therefore give a negative answer to the deputation's request to be relieved of the payment of light dues.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., at Epsom, defended the policy and administration of the Government.

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., at High Wycombe, sharply criticised the position of the Ministry and the position of Mr. Balfour on the fiscal question.

Bye-election: North Kildare: -Mr. John O'Connor (N.), unopposed. 14th.

Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., in reply to a deputation of trade unionists, who laid before him resolutions adopted at the last Trades Union Congress, with reference to the immunity of foreign shipowners from payment of compensation for personal injuries, the certification of locomotive enginedrivers, and other questions, expressed his sympathy with the proposal in reference to the responsibility of foreign shipowners, and said it was under the consideration of the Home Secretary with a view to legislation, but he was unable to concur with the deputation on the other questions.

16th. Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., received and replied to a deputation from the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress who made representations in regard to various labour questions.

17th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., in reply to a deputation of miners' delegates urging the repeal of the export duty on coal, promised consideration of the statements of the deputation.

Lord Selborne, replying to a deputation from the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress, who waited on him in support of resolutions of the Congress, in regard to wages and the publication of particulars of contracts, explained the action of the Department with regard to rates of wages, and held that it must be left free to organize labour in the dockyards in the manner which it found most convenient.

The Duke of Fife, Lord Derby, and Mr. Haldane, M.P., spoke at a meeting 18th.

of the British Empire League, held in the Marylebone Town Hall.

21st. Lord Londonderry, replying to a deputation representing education authorities in West Yorkshire, who waited on him to urge an increase in the State grants for the training of teachers, intimated that there was no likelihood of his being able to comply with the request, and suggested that much might be done for the higher training of teachers by the co-operation of authorities in large areas.

22nd. Bye-election: Liverpool (Everton):—Mr. Harwood-Banner (C.), 3,854; Mr. Hanbury Aggs (L.), 2,543; Majority, 1,311.

Lord Londonderry and Sir W. Anson, M.P., replied to a deputation from the Church Schools' Emergency League, referring to various aspects of the position of religious education in non-provided schools. The views of the deputation were stated by Mr. Cripps, M.P., Sir John Gorst, M.P., and others.

23rd. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., who received a deputation representing the coal-owners, exporters, and shippers of the United Kingdom, urging the remission of the export duty on coal, said, in reply, that he could only promise to take the statements of the deputation into careful consideration.

Mr. Walter Long, M.P., in reply to a deputation from the Workmen's National Housing Council, said that the Department had always aimed at such regulations as would secure that houses should be well built, sanitary, and suitable for human habitation. He questioned the wisdom of making bye-laws generally compulsory, and pointed out the difficulty of framing bye-laws applicable to mixed districts.

24th. Lord Spencer, speaking at St. Albans, said the uncertainty which existed on the fiscal question was most damaging to trade, because no one knew what was going to happen during the next few years. Reviewing the Irish devolution scheme, he held that Sir A. MacDonnell's action was perfectly justifiable under the conditions of his appointment.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Birmingham, and said that the House of Commons had assembled, not to do business, but to mark time. Referring at length to the MacDonnell incident, he said it still remained an unsolved enigma.

Mr. Arthur Elliot, M.P., spoke at Sutton on the fiscal question.

27th. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., replying to a deputation from the tea buyers' associations, urging the repeal of the tea duty, agreed that the duty was a high ad valorem tax, and was open to some objection, but the Government had to raise a great revenue, and every tax could be objected to for some reason or other.

28th Sir Edward Grey, M.P., speaking at Cheltenham, said, with reference to the Japanese alliance, that the successors of the Government would honourably carry out all the obligations it imposed on them. The agreement with France would also be maintained in a sympathetic spirit. Alluding to the proposed Colonial Conference, Sir Edward said he was strongly in favour of a conference between the leading colonial and home statesmen, a policy which had always been favoured by Liberals; but he would have such conferences regularly called to consider general topics; he would not throw among them the apple of discord in the form of a proposal for preferential tariffs.

The Times: Death of Mr. Middleton, late Principal Conservative Agent, announced.

MARCH.

Mr. John Morley, M.P., spoke at the Welsh National Dinner, held in London. lst. Sir Howard Vincent, M.P., Mr. Churchill, M.P., Mr. Austin Taylor, M.P., Lord Avebury, and others spoke at the meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce at the Hotel Métropole.

2nd. Bye-election: Westmorland (North):-Mr. Leif Jones (L.), 2,922; Major

Noble (C.), 2,702; Majority, 220.

The Duke of Norfolk spoke at Dorking on the question of Home Rule.

The Times: Announcement of Lord Milner's resignation of the offices of High Commissioner in South Africa and Administrator of the Transvaal and Orange River Colonies, and appointment of Lord Selborne as his successor.

3rd. Bye-election: Buteshire:—Mr. N. Lamont (L), 1,460; Mr. E. T. Salvesen, K.C. (L.U.), 1,426; Majority, 34.

Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., speaking at the annual dinner of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, dwelt on the importance of the commercial and financial relations between Great Britain and the Colonies. With regard to Colonial conferences, he wished there could be in continual session some body in which the Colonies could be represented as well as the Mother Country.

Lord Salisbury spoke at St. Albans on the fiscal question and on Home Rule. Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., replied to a deputation of the liquor trade urging a remission of the war taxation on beer and spirits.

Mr. Chamberlain, at a meeting of the executive committee of the Tariff Reform League, delivered a speech on the present position and prospects of the movement.

4th. Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Dalston on the fiscal question. The official policy of the Government on the fiscal question, he said, was summed up in one blessed and comprehensive word-retaliation. He had asked again and again, where, when, and how, against whom, and in respect of what commodities, that retaliation should be applied. Mr. Asquith proceeded to argue that there was no country in the world which stood to lose more and gain less by retaliation than this country.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Gloucester.

8th. Lord Spencer, speaking at Wandsworth, said he very much regretted Mr. Wyndham's resignation. With regard to the fiscal policy, he defied even Mr. Balfour's best friend to understand his position. The Government sacrificed everything for office, even principles.

9th. Lord Rosebery, speaking at the City Liberal Chib, said he did not believe that it was attachment to the Tory Government that kept the City aloof from Liberalism, for during the past year and more he had never heard one good word about the present Government. Referring to the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, he said it must be remembered that the understanding was founded by the Liberal Government of 1895. In respect to Home Rule, there was no need for apprehension. In regard to the fiscal question. that was a matter upon which the City ought to give a clear lead to the rest of the country. Let the City assert itself, and make it perfectly clear that it would not touch the fabric on which its presperity had been built, and would have nothing to do with protection, 10th. Lord Londonderry, speaking at York, denied that the Government was in any way involved in the inception of the devolution scheme for Ireland, and defended their policy in regard to education and Chinese labour.

MARCH—continued.

Mr. Haldane, M.P., speaking at Godalming, commented on the attitude of the Government in regard to the Trades Dispute Bill and the fiscal question, endorsed Lord Rosebery's vindication of Liberal foreign policy, and criticised the attitude of Ministers with regard to the MacDonnell incident.

Mr. Bryce, M.P., spoke at Wolverton condemning the conduct of the Government in yielding to the Ulster Unionists.

13th. The Times: Ministerial changes: Appointment of Mr. Walter Long, President of the Local Government Board, to be Chief Secretary for Ireland, in the room of Mr. George Wyndham, resigned; of Mr. Gerald Balfour, President of the Board of Trade, to succeed Mr. Long at the Local Government Board; of Lord Salisbury, as President of the Board of Trade in succession to Mr. Gerald Balfour; and of Mr. Ailwyn E. Fellowes, as President of the Board of Agriculture in succession to Lord Onslow, now Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords.

14th. Mr. L. Courtney presided at a meeting held in the Queen's Hall in support of the enfranchisement of women. A letter was read from Mr. John Morley, expressing sympathy with the object of the meeting.

15th. Sir Edward Grey, M.P., speaking at Northallerton, urged the desirability of an early dissolution, but expressed the opinion that, unless the Liberals obtained a majority independent of the Irish Nationalist party, it would be inexpedient for them to take office.

- 16th. Lord Stanley, M.P., received a deputation of members of Parliament, urging him to make a reduction in the postal rates of magazines and newspapers from this country to Canada. His lordship pointed out that the reduction asked for would involve a loss to the revenue of at least £3,000,000 a year, and regretted that he could hold out no hope of meeting the deputation's views.
 - Mr. Redmond, M.P., speaking at an Irish Nationalist banquet in London, strongly condemned Lord Rosebery's attitude on the question of Home Rule.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Highbury.

Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., received a deputation of the West India Committee.

17th. Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., dealt at Warrington with the fiscal question, and especially insisted on the importance of developing preferential trade within the Empire.

T. G. Bowles, M.P., addressed his constituents at King's Lynn. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., also spoke, condemning the protectionist movement as a proposal to go back to the edge of the abyss where other nations dwelt.

Mr. Churchill, M.P., at Cardiff, said the results of the protectionist campaign had been the breaking up of the Cabinet and the profound weakening of the Unionist party.

18th. Lord Rosebery, speaking at Esher, dealt with Mr. Redmond's criticism of his recent speech in the City. He did not believe it would be possible for the leaders of the Liberal party to make an appeal to the constituencies on the question of Home Rule at the next General Election. Referring to other topics, he characterised the present Government as a national discredit and a national disaster. He urged the need for an inquiry into the state of things in South Africa, and contended that a Liberal Government, if it presided over the next Colonial Conference, must state quite frankly that it had no mandate to deal with the taxation of food or raw material. The next Government must revise the Education and Licensing Acts, and must aim at efficiency in administration, especially of the War Department, in regard to which he thought the country would yet accept his nostrum—the appointment of Lord Kitchener.

Mr. J. Redmond, M.P., speaking at Liverpool, commented on the MacDonnell incident, and reiterated his antagonism to what he termed the Rosebery view of Home Rule.

Morley, M.P., at the Queen's Hall, denounced the tactics of the Prime 20th. Mr. Minister and his colleagues, especially with regard to the fiscal question, as lowering to the dignity of Parliament. He also dealt with the question of Ireland.

Mr. Redmond, M.P., speaking at an Irish meeting in London, replied at some length to Lord Rosebery's references to the Home Rule question in his speech of the 18th.

In reply to a deputation from the United Kingdom Alliance, and the National 21st. Temperance Federation, who presented a statement in regard to prospective temperance legislation, Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., said that the first and most urgent thing they had to do was to repair, as far as possible. the damage done by the Licensing Act of last year; in the first place by restoring their full powers to the local licensing authorities, and extending those powers, and secondly by introducing a time-limit into the Act. Mr.

Asquith, M.P., who was also present, concurred with Sir Henry's views. 23rd. Mr. Bryce, M.P., spoke at an "At Home" of the Eighty Club on the Near Eastern question.

24th. Lord Tweedmouth at Ipswich dealt with the questions of fiscal reform, the Army, and Ireland, and described the Government as a junta of amiable men whose policy was one of evasion.

Sir Alfred Thomas, M.P., Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., and others spoke at Shrewsbury on the Education Act in Wales.

29th. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., addressing his constituents at Greenwich, defended the attitude assumed towards the fiscal question by himself and other free food Unionists, as absolutely consistent with real loyalty to the Conservative Party. It was absolutely certain that the late Lord Salisbury was opposed to the salient feature of Mr. Chamberlain's policy, namely, the taxation of food.

Lord Spencer, in a speech at Rochdale, dealt chiefly with the fiscal question.

30th. Mr. Churchill, M.P., spoke at Manchester.

Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., spoke at South Norwood. Lord Salisbury spoke at Chelmsford. Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., spoke at Carlisle. Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Canterbury. Mr. Haldane, M.P., spoke at Epsom. Mr. Churchill, M.P., spoke at Sheffield, and Mr. Cripps, M.P., spoke at 31st. Manchester.

APRIL

Sir Edward Carson, M.P., spoke at Brighton.

5th. Bye-election: Brighton (on the appointment of Mr. G. Loder as a Junior Lord of the Treasury):-Mr. E. A. Villiers (L.), 8,209; Mr. G. Loder (C.), 7,392; Majority, 817.

Lord Onslow and Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Guildford, and Sir H. Fowler,

M.P., and Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Wolverhampton.

6th. Lord Balfour addressed a free-trade meeting at Tunbridge Wells. Lord Crewe at Nottingham discussed the causes of the Liberal victory at Brighton.

7th.

Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., spoke at Leeds. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., addressing a meeting of his constituents at Greenwich, defended himself against the charge of disloyalty to his party.

10th. The Duke of Devonshire, speaking at the first annual meeting of the Unionist Free Trade Club, said he did not think it could be doubted that the attack on free trade was serious and formidable, and that the proposals of the Tariff Reform League controverted every principle held by free traders, while as to those more moderate proposals, which were believed to have the approval of the Government, he thought it was only too true that they controverted, in at least one essential principle, the doctrines always strongly held by free traders.

12th. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at the annual meeting of the Liberal Union Club. after advocating a mutual defensive understanding between Japan and Great Britain in the interests of a lasting peace in the Far East, and urging that Home Rule still constituted a serious danger, proceeded to criticise the recent speech of the Duke of Devonshire, and maintained that, whatever might be the position of the Government and the Unionist party, it had not, so far as the signs showed, been affected by the tariff reform agitation.

Sir Edward Carson, M.P., spoke at St. John's Wood.

13th. Lord Rosebery, speaking at the annual dinner of the Liberal League, urged that, whatever the Irish policy of the next Liberal Government might be, it could not be too explicit or too clear. His own belief was that their policy towards Ireland would be one that he would be able to support. He believed that it should be to apply justice, and generous justice, to Ireland without hope of gratitude and without expectation of immediate results. In regard to the attitude of the House of Lords towards Liberal legislation, he anticipated that after the first year of the new Government it would be as aggressively and offensively Tory as it had ever been in the past. Mr. Asquith, M.P., Sir Henry Fowler, M.P., and Mr. Haldane, M.P., also spoke.

APRIL—continued.

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., and Mr. Asquith, M.P., replied, at the House of Commons, to a representative deputation of Scottish temperance advocates.

14th. Mr. Balfour received a deputation of Tariff Reformers; the proceedings were private. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., spoke at Croydon. Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., at Finsbury. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., at Greenwich. Lord Windsor at Birmingham. Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., at Poplar; and Mr. Churchill, M.P., at Salisbury.

The Times: Mr. Balfour, writing to the Editor of the Yorkshire Herald, in reference to the action of Messrs. Reckitt, in transferring part of their business to the United States in order to overcome the American tariff, said it really was beyond argument that tariffs which withdrew capital and plant from this country did it a serious injury.

20th. Mr. Long, M.P., speaking at Belfast, said it must be his duty, and the duty of any Chief Secretary in a Unionist Government, to do nothing himself, to promote nothing himself, and to countenance nothing on the part of those who served under him which should tend in the smallest degree to weaken the foundation upon which the Union rested. It was the duty of the Unionist Government to administer fairly and honestly as between all classes and creeds, to hear grievances and complaints from whatever quarter they might come and consider what was the best way to remove them.

27th. Mr. Brodrick, M.P., speaking at Godalming, said he was opposed to protection, but in favour of retaliation. Mr. Balfour's retaliation policy would exist long after that of the protectionist, and would out-live the policy of free trade.

28th. Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Guildford on the importance of preserving efficiency in religious teaching. Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., addressed a meeting of the Liberal Association of Carnarvon Boroughs on the Education Act. The Duke of Devonshire spoke at Chatsworth on local taxation.

MAY.

2nd. Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Bala on the education question as regards Merionethshire.

3rd. Mr. Ailwyn Fellowes, M.P., spoke at Wantage, chiefly on agricultural problems. 5th. Mr. Balfour, speaking at the Albert Hall at the annual demonstration of the Primrose League, referred to the wonderful tissue of misrepresentations with which the Opposition had flooded the country in connection with the question of Chinese labour in the Transvaal. And, after characterising the numerous votes of censure with which the Government had been assailed as either antiquarian or prophetic, he said he was sure that the forces which made for Home Rule and Welsh disestablishment 12 years ago existed still, undiminished in force and unchanged in quality.

Mr. Chamberlain, addressing a Liberal Unionist meeting at Birmingham, said they were face to face with the prospect of a general election, and personally he wished that election had come sooner. The coming fight would be a fight between two ideals; were they to be Imperialists, or were they to cringe to their enemies, and be indifferent to the fate of their friends? In conclusion, Mr. Chamberlain warned his hearers that they must be prepared for another fight over Home Rule.

6th. Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Huddersfield.

10th. Mr. Chamberlain spoke at the annual dinner of the London School of Tropical Medicine. Lord Salisbury spoke at the annual dinner of the Bristol Chamber of Commerce.

11th. Mr. Fellowes, M.P., replied to a deputation which waited on him to urge the removal of the embargo on the importation of Canadian live cattle into Great Britain. He was unable to hold out any hope that the request of the deputation could be complied with.

12th. Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Farnham; Mr. Law, M.P., at Kidderminster; Lord Dunraven at Manchester; and Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., at Bilston.

17th. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at the annual conference of the organised labour branch of the Tariff Reform League at the Westminster Palace Hotel, affirmed that his two great objects in public life had been to improve the condition of the working classes and to maintain the greatness of the Empire. He contended that the attitude of those labour leaders who advocated free imports and yet sought to protect labour was altogether inconsistent. The principle of Cobdenism was to encourage competition and increase the struggle for existence. The fact was that restriction on unfair competition in labour was right, but it was perfectly useless without restrictions on the products of labour. His policy, in a word, was more employment for the people. If we had that, our foreign export trade would increase immensely, instead of being stationary, as it had been for the last 30 years.

Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., spoke at the annual meeting of the Army Temperance Association.

18th. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., speaking at Croydon, said he believed there would be a great and happy re-union in the Conservative party.

The annual meeting of the Council of the National Liberal Federation was opened at Newcastle-on-Tyne. Mr. Birrell, K.C., presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, discussed the position of the Government, and urged that the policy of the Liberals must be patience in working and waiting. The report was adopted and various resolutions were afterwards carried. Speeches were delivered by Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., and others.

19th. Lord Londonderry spoke at Poole, and Earl Percy, M.P., at Oxford.

The annual meeting of the Council of the National Liberal Federation was concluded at Newcastle-on-Tyne. Resolutions were passed on the subjects of education and licensing, and enumerating several questions which, it was declared, ought to be dealt with by a Liberal Government. Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M. P., maintained that the continuance in office of the present Government was an act of usurpation, for it did not bow to the will of the constituencies. The Aliens Bill had not been opposed, because it was very different to that of last year; but the Opposition would insist on preserving the character of this country as an asylum from persecution.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., spoke at Stockwell on education.

20th. Mr. Long, M.P., speaking at Dublin, challenged the accuracy of the statements contained in the recent speech by Lord Dunraven at Manchester regarding the situation in Ireland, and maintained that the policy of coercion and that of conciliation were not the antithesis of each other. Both had been pursued by the Unionist Government ever since the present Prime Minister was Chief Secretary.

24th. Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., spoke on Canadian affairs at a dinner given by the Canada

Club

Mr. Ailwyn Fellowes, M.P., replying to a deputation who waited on him to protest against the monopoly enjoyed by chemists in the sale of poisonous compounds used in agriculture, expressed his concurrence with their views, and said that a Bill dealing with the subject was being prepared.

25th. A deputation of labour leaders was received by Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., on the Unemployed Bill.

30th. Major Evans-Gordon, M.P., and Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., spoke at the Caxton Hall, Westminster, at the general annual meeting of the Women's Liberal Unionist Association.

31st. Sir Edward Grey, M.P., speaking at the Eighty Club, after observing that the Liberal party were fully alive to the necessity of maintaining the alliance with Japan, proceeded to deal with the fiscal question. The Liberal party, he said, had no desire to postpone the Colonial Conference, but there was a belief that, unless that Conference were presided over by a Government with fresh authority from the electorate, it would be nothing more than a farce.

JUNE.

1st. Bye-election: Yorkshire (Whitby Division):-Mr. Noel Buxton (L.), 4,547;

Mr. Gervase Beckett (C.), 4,102; Majority, 445.

In the absence of Mr. Balfour, Lord Lansdowne responded to the toast of "Our Leader, the Prime Minister," at the dinner given by Mr. J. Bailey, M.P., to Conservative Agents at the Holborn Restaurant. Referring to the Japanese alliance, his lordship said at no time had there been, either on the side of the Japanese Government or on ours, any question whatever of a withdrawal from that alliance. In the opinion of his Majesty's Government, when the time came to consider what should be done with regard to the renewal of the agreement, the only practical question would be whether it should be renewed in its present form or whether they should not seek for some means of strengthening it.

JUNE-continued.

A reception and conversazione was held at the National Liberal Club, at which speeches were made by Lord Spencer, Sir H. Compbell-Bannerman, M.P.. Mr. Asquith, M.P., Sir H. Fowler, M.P., and others.

2nd. Bye-election: Sussex (Chichester Division), on the appointment of Lord E. Talbot as a Junior Lord of the Treasury:—Lord Edmund Talbot (C.), 4,174; Mr. J. E. Allen (L.), 3,762; Majority, 412.

Mr. Balfour, speaking at the Albert Hall, commented on the persistency with which the leaders of the Opposition kept the secret of their future programme, and on their activity in carrying on the propaganda of misrepresentation. He severely criticised the attitude of Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman on the occasion of the recent scene in the House of Commons. If the Radical party came into power it would be in direct alliance with the Irish and Labour parties, neither of which could be described as freetraders in the Cobdenite sense. He had asked that the question which had touched the whole Empire should be dealt with by a conference representing the whole Empire, free and unfettered. He asked further that the nation should suspend its judgment until they could see what could be done. Was that an unreasonable demand? If the Opposition were returned to power, did they mean to treat with contempt the oftexpressed wish of the Colonies, and, without examination or consultation, to reject their overtures? He feared that, in their haste to snatch a party advantage, they had committed themselves to a position in which they could not, with the best will in the world, carry out their duty to the Empire.

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., at Oxford, unveiled a portrait of the late Sir William Harcourt, at the Reform Club, and subsequently took part in a debate at the Union, at which a motion condemning the Government was rejected.

3rd. Mr. Balfour, who was entertained at the Hotel Métropole by the prospective Conservative Parliamentary candidates of Great Britain, said the Conservative candidates might approach the great contest which, under the Septennial Act, could not, he supposed, be long deferred, in a spirit of confidence and hope. He commented on the inability of the Radical party to produce a programme. It was not one party, but many parties; its elements were agreed on no fundamental problem; and its administration was predestined to failure.

Mr. Chamberlain, at St. Helens, maintained that in regard to the fiscal question, parties had changed sides, and their opponents, who claimed formerly to be the party of progress, now wanted no change. After touching on the ابدا question of preferential relations with the Colonies, Mr. Chamberlain urged that national interests, common sense, and patriotism were all on the side of the tariff reformers, and sooner or later their cause must be victorious. Mr. Balfour had said that tariff reform would be the most important part of the Unionist policy, that Colonial preference would be the first item in the future Unionist programme, and that the Colonial Conference should be absolutely free. This was the official programme, to which he most heartily subscribed.

8th. Mr. Balfour received privately a deputation of representatives of heavily-rated districts with regard to the question of relief from the excessive burden of the education rate, and promised full consideration to the points put before him.

r. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., replying to a deputation who waited on him to urge the further reduction of the cable rate to India, China, and West Africa, pointed out the difficulties arising from the circumstance that increased traffic did not always necessarily mean increased profits; but he announced that there would be a reduction on the Indian rate from 2s. 6d. to 2s. a word in a few months, that a further reduction would be made if the traffic responded, and that he hoped the rate to Egypt would shortly be reduced to 1s. a word.

10th. Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., presided and spoke at the annual convention of the United Irish League of Great Britain at the Finsbury Town

13th. Mr. Haldane, M.P., spoke at Tranent, and dealt with the questions of fiscal policy, the Japanese alliance, and the Scottish Churches Bill.

JUNE—continued.

14th. Bye-election: Cork:—Mr. Augustine Roche (N.), unopposed.

Lord Londonderry, speaking at Belfast, condemned the devolution scheme, and protested against the doctrine that Ireland should be governed according Lord Rosebery, at Bathgate, commented on some aspects of the Scottish Church crisis.

15th. Bye-election: Donegal (North):—Mr. John Muldoon (N.), unopposed.

Mr. Chamberlain replied to a deputation which waited on him at Highbury to solicit hi: assistance in the movement for putting the Shop Hours Act into operation.

17th. Lord Linlithgow, at Edinburgh, replied to a deputation representing the School Boards of the four large cities in Scotland, with reference to the Scottish Education Bill.

20th. Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., presided and spoke at the annual banquet of the Corona Club at the Hotel Cecil.

22nd. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., spoke on the Education Act at Huncote. Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., and Mr. Brynmor Jones, M.P., spoke at Cardiff.
 23rd. Mr. Balfour and others spoke at Claridge's Hotel at the dinner given to Mr.

Whitelaw Reid. Mr. Ailwyn Fellowes, M.P., spoke at Aberystwith on agricultural education.

24th. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., spoke at Underley.

27th. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at a luncheon given to the Canadian manufacturers by the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, insisted on the value of greater social intercourse between the members of the Imperial family.

28th. Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., spoke at the annual New Zealand Dinner at Prince's Restaurant.

29th. Bye-election: Finsbury (East):—Mr. J. A. Baker (L.), 2,320; Mr. L. Cohen (C.), 1,552; Majority, 768.

Lord Spencer, speaking at the National Liberal Club, commented on the manner in which the Government were clinging to office in the teeth of the reiterated decisions of the constituencies.

JULY.

3rd. Bye-election: Staffordshire (Kingswinford Division):—Mr. H. Staveley Hill (C.).

5,490; Major Dunne (L.), 4,887; Majority, 603.
7th. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at the annual meeting of the Tariff Reform League at the Albert Hall, referred to the progress the League had made towards the realization of its object—namely, the material improvement of the people and the assurance of the organization of the Empire.

8th. Lord Lansdowne spoke at a dinner given by the American Society at the Hotel Cecil in celebration of Independence Day.

10th. Bye-election: Down (West Division):—Mr. H. Liddell (C.), 4,036; Mr. A. Beattie (I.C.), 3,015; Majority, 1,021.

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., spoke at the Eighty Club at a lunch given to the Canadian manufacturers.

14th. Bye-election: Carlisle:—Mr. F. W. Chance (L.), 3,616; Mr. L. L. Sanderson, K.C. (C.), 2,586; Majority, 1,030.

Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., spoke at the annual dinner of the Imperial South African Association, at the Hotel Cecil.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., speaking at the Mansion House, referred to the condition of public expenditure.

Mr. J. Redmond, M.P., speaking in London at a meeting of the Irish Parliamentary branch of the United Irish League of Great Britain, discussed the redistribution proposals in relation to the representation of Ireland.

17th. Mr. Balfour and Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman replied, at the House of Commons, to deputations of women interested in the unemployed question.

18th. Mr. Balfour, presiding at the Foreign Office at a meeting of the Conservative party, explained the reasons which led to the wi hdrawal of the redistribution resolution, and stated that a Bill would be brought in early next Session, while a committee or commission would be appointed in the autumn to consider and report upon the proposals of the Government. Mr. Balfour also pointed out how necessary it was that efforts of the Ministerialists should in no way be relaxed for a moment until the House rose.

JULY-continued.

- 22nd. Speeches were delivered by Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., at Dartford, and by Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., at Woodford Green, referring to the Ministerial crisis. Sir E. Carson, M.P., and Lord Edmund Talbot, M.P., spoke at Petworth Park.
- 24th. Lord Halsbury spoke, justifying Mr. Balfour's decision, at the annual dinner of the United Club.
- 25th. Mr. Pretyman, M.P., replied to a deputation from the Corporation of Portsmouth and the Poor Law Guardians and others, urging that every consideration should be shown to the men who were being discharged at Portsmouth, Devonport and Chatham, owing to the want of work.
 - The Duke of Devonshire dwelt on housing and kindred problems at the Garden City, Letchworth.
- 29th. Mr. A. Lyttelton, M.P., speaking at Warwick, criticised the conduct of the Opposition in the House of Commons, and defended the introduction of Chinese labour on the Rand. AUGUST.
 - 1st. Lord Roberts spoke with reference to the present state of the Army at a special meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce.
 - Mr. Asquith, M.P., at Sheffield, severely criticised the Government's record.
- 12th. At a luncheon given in Westminster Hall to Vice-Admiral Caillard and the officers of the French Fleet, Mr. Balfour, in proposing the toast of the French Navy, said that on occasions like the present, party differences were forgotten. Such a gathering as theirs implied no menace to other communities. It was a harbinger of peace all the world over. No greater security for the greatest of all human good could be found than in the warm and enduring friendship of two great neighbours who were able to feel that their world interests were identical.
- Lord Curzon's resignation announced: Lord Minto appointed Governor-21st. General of India in his stead.
- 23rd. Mr. Brodrick, M.P., speaking at Godalming, said he deeply regretted the termination of Lord Curzon's career in India. Having been called on to act in a controversy between a great administrator and a great soldier, he (Mr. Brodrick) had done his duty to the best of his ability; and he had had the unanimous support, not only of the Cabinet and of his Council, but of a strong committee called together expressly to consider the
- 26th. Mr. Walter Long, M.P., speaking at Bristol, expressed confidence that when all the facts in connection with Lord Curzon's resignation were fully disclosed, it would be conceded that while Lord Curzon's retirement was greatly to be regretted, it was due to no fault, indiscretion, or unfairness on the part of the Government.
- 30th. The Times: Japan and Russia.—Announcement that the Peace Conference had arrived at a complete accord on all questions, and that it had been decided to proceed with the elaboration of a treaty of peace.

SEPTEMBER.

- 2nd. Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Abercairney, said that, while reserving his liberty of judgment as to the details of the new alliance with Japan, he believed the alliance to be heartily approved by the people of this country, by whom it had come to be regarded as an integral part of our policy in the Far East.
- 8th. Bye-election: Elgin Burghs: .-Mr. J. E. Sutherland (L.), 2,474; Mr. P. Rose-
- Innes (C.), 1,021; Majority, 1,453.

 Mr. Balfour, speaking at North Berwick, dealt with the Volunteer problem in its relation to Imperial Defence. After touching on the problems of Indian and insular defence, Mr. Balfour said that the Volunteers were an integral and necessary part, not merely of home defence, but of Imperial defence. Their existence had a bearing, not merely on the safety of these shores, but on the safety of the far-distant frontiers of India.
 - Lord Londonderry spoke at Wynyard Park, and Lord Ripon, at Fountain's Abbev.
- The Times: Letter from Mr. Long, M.P., to Sir John Colomb, M.P., with reference to the Irish Land Act of 1903, stating that he had come to an arrangement with the Treasury under which they had agreed to provide additional funds.

26th.

Belfast (North):—Sir D. Dixon (C.), 4,440; Mr. William 14th. Bye-election: Walker (Lab.), 3,966; Majority, 474.

Mr. J. Redmond, M.P., presided and spoke at Dublin at the annual meeting of the National Directory.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Fishguard, on the Welsh education question. Lord Londonderry spoke at Wynyard Park.
Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Porth. 15th.

16th.

20th. 25th. Mr. Birrell, K.C., speaking at Bristol, said the time was not ripe for any appeal to this country on the great question of Home Rule, They would have to show English and Scottish people bit by bit, step by step, that the Irish people were well qualified to govern themselves; and that could be done administratively by investing them more and more with the Government of their country, by calling in their aid, and by removing the Dublin Castle legislation from which Irishmen were debarred. He believed a Liberal Government would be able to do something during the next few years in the way of familiarising the people of this country with the problems of Home Rule.

Lord Crewe spoke at Crewe. The Times: Correspondence between Mr. Herbert Roberts, M.P., and Mr. Brodrick, M.P., with reference to the partition of Bengal.

27th. Lord Londonderry spoke at Bradford.

Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., spoke at Sheffield. Mr. George Wyndham, M.P., speaking at Dover, reviewed the record of the Government in regard to foreign, colonial, and domestic affairs as furnishing reasons why the national confidence in them should be continued, and insisted that something must be done to defend industry in this country by resuming the power to drive a bargain for fair play.

The Times: Letter from Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., to Colonel Rutherford, M.P., on Chinese Labour.

Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., spoke at Glasgow. 29th.

Mr. George Wyndham, M.P., spoke at Dover.

Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at a meeting of the Welsh Campaign Committee at Wrexham.

OCTOBER.

4th. Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., speaking at the Leeds Conservative Association, said, in reference to the Redistribution question, that, after the Committee's report had been received, a scheme would be framed and submitted to a Commission. He trusted that next Session it would be possible to submit a final scheme in the form of a Bill.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Ladybank, dealt with the Redistribution question. He said that a fatal objection to the Government's scheme was 7th. that it would not attempt to deal with the anomalies in regard to the franchise. He deprecated any attempt to determine in advance the order of procedure in regard to the questions which the next Government would have to deal with.

Mr J. Redmond, M.P., at Doon, appealed to the Irish people for such an expression of opinion as would show that Ireland would tolerate no dissension.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Auchtermuchty, complained of the beggarly 9th. legislative achievements of last Session, the acquiescence of the Government in the stifling of debate on questions of policy, and the application:

of the guillotine to Supply.

10th. Mr. Haldane, M P., speaking at Haddington, expressed his satisfaction with the new Japanese Treaty, which he thought was in the interests of peace. There was a much more serious danger than Home Rule incurred from the present Government. The House of Lords blocked, obstructed and injured most Liberal measures, and it never hindered any Conservative measures: consequently, were Protection to be brought forward by the Unionist party -say if Mr. Chamberlain came to power as leader of the Conservatives the House of Lords would pass Protection, whereas if any measure, evenof a comparatively harmless description for extending self-government to. Ireland, were produced by the Liberal party, its fate in the House of Lords.

would be certain, unless there had been for at least six years previously the fullest discussion which showed the mind of the country in a way that inspired the House of Lords with awe.

The Times: Letter from Mr. Henniker Heaton, M.P., on Universal Penny Postage.

11th. Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Earlsferry, ridiculed the allegation that the Liberals were lukewarm with respect to the maintenance of the Empire. In reply to a question, Mr. Asquith said the establishment of an Irish Parliament would not, and could not, be any part of the policy of the next Liberal Government.

12th. Mr. Walter Long, M.P., speaking at Canterbury, ridiculed the demand that the Government should resign at the moment the Opposition desired it.

Mr. Asquith, M.P., speaking at Leven, devoted his remarks chiefly to the financial "quagmire," in which, he said, the Government had landed the country by extravagance. He characterised the introduction of Chine se labour into the Transvaal as a gigantic blunder. The dominating issue, however, at the next election would be that between Free Trade and Protection.

13th. Bye-election: Yorks, W.R. (Barkston Ash):-Mr. J. O. Andrews (L.), 4,376; Mr. G. R. Lane-Fox (('.), 4,148; Majority, 228.

Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., discussing Conservatism as a school of thought at Glasgow, said he was confident that in the great controversy raised by Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Balfour was more on the side of the Unionist free-traders than on the side of Mr. Chamberlain. It was their belief that Mr. Balfour could be reckoned as a free-trader who had enabled the Unionist free-traders in very trying circumstances to retain their allegiance to the Conservative party.

Sir E. Grey, M.P., at Manchester, censured the Government for not appealing to the constituencies. He believed the Liberal party accepted the Anglo-Japanese Alliance and the Anglo-French understanding, and it was in their spirit that the foreign policy of a Liberal Government would be conducted. But such a Government would stop the importation of Chinese labour into the Transpal and would refuse to put a toy of food labour into the Transvaal, and would refuse to put a tax on food.

16th. Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., spoke at Cardiff on the Welsh Education Controversy.
 17th. The Times: Appointment of Mr. J. A. Clyde, K.C., to be Solicitor-General for Scotland.

18th. Mr. Arnold-Forster, M.P., speaking at Croydon, said that his policy regarding the Army remained unchanged—to make it an efficient instrument for war; and he prophesied that in three years it would in all respects be better than it had been for a very long period.

19th. Lord George Bamilton, M.P., at Lincoln, extolled the foreign policy of the Government, adversely criticised their course in regard to the controversy between Lords Curzon and Kitchener, and condemned Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal proposals.

Mr. Akers-Douglas M.P., spoke at Chartham, and Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Kingston.

20th. Sir Edward Grey, M.P., speaking at the Cannon Street Hotel, said there was no foundation for the suspicion which was abroad that a change of Government in this country would bring some new and unwelcome change in foreign policy. The three cardinal features of British foreign policy at the present time were the growing friendship with the United States, the alliance with Japan, and the French Agreement, and none of these did the Liberal party desire to see changed.

Mr. Morley, M.P., speaking at Forfar, sharply condemned the conduct of Ministers in refusing to face the constituencies, and discussed the Irish question at considerable length.

21st. Lord Rosebery, speaking at Edinburgh at a Liberal demonstration, challenged certain statements that had been made with regard to the Liberal party having no policy but that of stagnation and drift, and declared that the Empire had been built up by Liberalism, and only by Liberalism could it be maintained. Mr. Asquith, M.P., also spoke at the same demonstration, and analysed the figures as to imports and exports during the last two years, as illustrating the unsoundness of the assumptions on which Mr. Chamberlain had based his propaganda. Mr. Haldane, M.P., spoke in the evening at a dinner of the Scottish Liberal Club.

OCTOBER—continued.

Lord Stanley, M.P., speaking at West Houghton, explained and defended his 23rd. attitude in regard to the demands of certain sections of those employed in the postal and telegraph service, and announced that increases of pay would be granted in cases where the cost of living was exceptionally high.

Mr. Morley, M.P., at Arbroath, criticised the measures and policy of the Government during the past 10 years, and declared that the moving force at the General Election would not be Imperialism or militarism, but social Lord Rosebery, at Stourbridge, urged the need for caution in the framing of a programme, and mentioned education, temperance, housing, and kindred social questions as calling for immediate attention. proceeded to insist on the duty of the Liberal leaders to make a clear statement of their attitude on the Irish question. He said that one of the first duties of the Liberal Ministry would be to overhaul very thoroughly the national expenditure. The Japanese Alliance he characterised as an engine of tremendous power and liability, which might provoke many animosities against the powers involved in it. He was glad the He was glad the Opposition leaders supported the Anglo-French Agreement, for the sake of continuity in foreign policy.

Bye-election: Hampstead: -Mr. J. S. Fletcher (C.), 4,225; Mr. G. F. Rowe, 26th.

(L.), 3,803; Majority, 422.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., speaking at Guildford, said that there was no outstanding question of difference between the Governments of Great Britain and Germany, nor anything to prevent their friendship.

Mr. Bryce, M.P., spoke at Newport, Isle of Wight, and Sir Robert Reid, K.C., M.P., at Dundee.

The Times: Letter from the Duke of Devonshire to a Hampstead elector saying that personally, as a free-trader, he could not give his vote to a candidate who professed himself in favour of the policy of the Tariff Reform League, but his support of the free-trade candidate would depend upon the opinions which he might hold on many other questions as to which, in the present case, the Duke had no knowledge.

27th. Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., spoke at Warwick.

Lord Tweedmouth and Mr. Lloyd-George, M.P., spoke at Kirkcaldy.

Mr. Gerald Balfour, M.P., speaking at Bradford, said he wanted to correct a misconception with regard to the Unemployed Workmen's Act. The Act was not intended to carry out the principle of "right to work," either in 31st. the form in which it was introduced, or in the form in which it was ultimately passed; and, as for the principle itself, he repudiated it absolutely.

Mr. Brodrick, M.P., spoke at Godalming, and Sir Edward Grey, M.P., at

4th.

NOVEMBER.

lst. Lord Londonderry, at Sunderland, said he had always regretted that fiscal reform had been made a political or controversial question. Time had shown that Mr. Chamberlain's forecast had not been borne out by the figures which were being placed before them. 2nd.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P., spoke at Stirchley; and Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., at Leamington, discussed the Chinese Labour question.

3rd. Mr. Chamberlain, at Birmingham, continued his campaign of fiscal reform. Sir Charles Dilke, M.P., spoke at Nottingham; and Mr. John Redmond. M.P., at Wexford.

The Duke of Devonshire and Mr. John Morley, M.P., spoke at the unveiling of the London Memorial to Mr. Gladstone.

6th. Mr. Balfour received and replied to a deputation of representatives of the London unemployed.

Lord Lansdowne, at the Junior Constitutional Club, said the character of the Japanese Alliance and the understanding with France were prompted by no desire whatever to encroach upon the rights and privileges of other peoples.

Austen Chamberlain, M.P., spoke at Acocks Green; and Mr. Herbert.

Gladstone, M.P., at Leeds.

7th. Mr. Akers-Douglas, M.P., discussed agricultural problems at Canterbury. Mr. Asquith, M.P., at Basingstoke, commented on the differences of the ${f Government}.$

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, M.P., at Leeds, said that he remained exactly where he was on the Irish question. He was a Home Ruler and always should be.

Sir Charles Dilke, M.P., spoke at Dunfermline.

9th. Mr. Balfour, speaking at the Guildhall, said that during ten years the foreign policy of this country had been guided by two of the greatest Ministers the country had produced—Lord Salisbury and Lord Lansdowne; and the Government of which they had been members had during that period struggled to develop the principle of arbitration. In ten years no fewer than sixteen separate cases had been brought to arbitration by this country, and he did not believe there was now outstanding any serious question of boundary in America, Africa, Europe or Asia.

Resignation of Captain Wells, chief Conservative Agent, announced.

10th. Announcement of the appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel A. B. Haig, C.V.O., C.M.G., to be principal agent of the Conservative party, in the room of Captain Wells, resigned.

llth. Mr. Balfour, opening a new dock at Seaham Harbour, alluded to the old friendship between himself and Lord Londonderry.

Mr. John Redmond, M.P., at Motherwell, severely criticised the Government and insisted on the right of Irish Catholics to a national university to which they could send their sons.

13th. Sir Alexander Acland-Hood, M.P., speaking at a preliminary meeting of the annual conference of the National Union of Conservative Associations at Newcastle-on-Tyne, emphasised the necessity of increasing the efficiency of Conservative organisation all over the Kingdom.

Mr. Lyttelton, M.P., at Bristol, said the Unionists placed the desire of closer commercial union with the Colonies in the forefront of their programme.

I4th. The National Union of Conservative Associations opened its annual conference at Newcastle-on-Tyne. Mr. Balfour, at the evening meeting, said the time could not be very long before an appeal to the country. He asked the party to agree on the fiscal policy which was before them-a policy which was called retaliation. He took a serious view of restrictions on our trade and industry by unfair competition. No one could deny that these dangers existed, and the next Unionist Government should be free to deal with them and to draw the Empire closer together. He was not, and never had been, a protectionist, but he believed that the doctrine of laissez faire was antiquated and illusory. He deprecated the discussion in the constituencies of possible differences which might arise when their constructive policy might be carried out. It was of no use to be a leader unless followed, and if his advice was rejected disaster would ensue.

15th. The National Union of Conservative Associations concluded its conference at Newcastle-on-Tyne. Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, M.P., at Portsmouth, and Mr. Asquith, M.P., 16th. at Blyth, criticised Mr. Balfour's Newcastle speech.

POLITICAL NOTES.

RIGHT HON. A. J. BALFOUR, M.P.,

ON

NEGOTIATION AND IMPERIAL TRADE.

"My utterances on a certain great question have been received with as many commentaries as if I were a classic, and they have been subjected to, or invested with, as many different meanings as if they were inspired. I suggest, and it is the only suggestion I make, that no man, in or out of this hall, should judge of my writings or of my speeches upon the economic question by seeing what other people say of them, but he should read them for himself. If he will do that I am confident he will find that they are neither obscure, nor difficult, nor inconsistent; that they represent a well-thought out body of ideas which may be right or may be wrong, but at all events stand there for public criticism, and must be judged for themselves and not by their self-appointed commentators."—Mr. Balfour at Southampton, 28th October, 1904.

I.—NEGOTIATION.

OUR INDUSTRIAL POSITION .- "Call to mind the speeches, pamphlets, and articles written on the subject of technical education, and on the necessity of meeting foreign competition by increased educational efforts; if you call to mind these utterances, delivered by men of all shades of opinion, you will see that I am not exaggerating when I allege that there has been for some years past a feeling of growing uneasiness as to the industrial position of Great Britain among the industrial nations of the world.

"Therefore, when Mr. Chamberlain made his speech—a speech to which we naturally date back this particular movement—the speech itself would have had no effect comparable to that which it has actually produced had it not fallen on ground prepared for it by circumstances, had it not dealt with a problem about which men's minds were beginning to feel disquiet.

"Now that feeling was greatly intensified by what occurred in relation to Canada's Imperial effort to give preferential treatment to this country. You all have the particulars of that incident in your mind-how Canada gave preferential treatment to our manufacturers, and how thereupon Canada was threatened by at least one foreign Power with pains and penalties for what she had done. That brought home to many minds the consciousness of our helplessness under our existing fiscal system to deal with fiscal injuries.

"You cannot go to war over tariff questions. Tariff attacks can only be met by tariff replies, and I think every Englishman felt, when he heard there was some danger lest a British Colony should be penalised for her efforts after closer Imperial union with Britain—every Englishman, I say, felt that if old weapons were insufficient to meet the peril, new weapons must be forged."—Sheffield, October 1st, 1903.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS TO HAVE BEEN .- "Mr. Cobden supposed that the world was going to be a free trade world, in which commerce would follow its natural courses unhampered by the devices of statesmen and politicians, untouched by the influence of international treaties. That is what he hoped, that is what he believed."—Sheffield, Oct. 1st, 1903.

And as it is.—"But what, in fact, we have got to deal with is a world in which international commerce is largely regulated by treaty, in which trade flows along channels engineered not by Nature but by diplomacy.

"Is it common sense that in such a world we, the greatest commercial nation of all, should come forward and say: 'We will endeavour to arrange treaties with you. have nothing to give you, we have nothing to withhold from you, we throw ourselves upon your mercy, we appeal to your kindly consideration. Remember, please remember, how good we are to your commerce, how we throw no impediment in its way, how we freely open to it our markets; and treat it as if it were our own. please don't forget us when you are making your next treaty.'

"I am incapable of believing that a nation which deliberately deprives itself of its power of bargaining is a nation which is likely to make very good bargains."-

Sheffield, Oct. 1st, 1903.

THE BARRIERS AGAINST OUR TRADE.—" What has happened is that the sentiment of nationality has received an accretion of strength of which no man then living could have dreamed; and that contemporaneously with this growing sentiment of nationality we have found protection in foreign countries, not surviving as the creed of the obscurantist minority, but growing in strength day by day, and day by day more separating the nations commercially from one another. . . We have to take account of the facts of the world in which we live, and neither the individual nor the nation can venture with any prospect of felicity or success to act as if he lived in an ideal world, and not in the world which actually and in matter of fact surrounds him.

"I am afraid that in these years we have too much been in the position of dreamers, confident in the consistency and the worth of our own ideal, refusing to see that it was not conformed to by our neighbours or the world with which we had to deal; and the result is that we have watched for fifty years—we have watched without saying a word or making a sign—we have watched a wall of hostile tariffs growing up, dividing nation from nation, and dividing us from the protective nations of the world."—Sheffield, Oct. 1st, 1903.

THE COMMERCIAL TREATY OF 1860.—"I ought, however, to make one exception.
. . One great effort, and, in its measure, one successful effort, was made, and it was made by Mr. Cobden himself. I allude to the famous commercial treaty with France, negotiated in 1859 and brought to a successful issue in 1860. When I consider the history of that treaty I ask myself whether Mr. Cobden was indeed a Cobdenite.

"What was the essence of the treaty of 1860? We were then in process of completing a great series of tariff reforms, mainly due to Tory and Conservative statesmen, which did so much for English commerce and set so good an example to the world. In 1859 there were certain taxes still in existence which the then Chancellor of the Exchequer and other financial authorities thought might well be repealed, but for the repeal of which they desired to obtain from the Government of France—at that time, perhaps, the most protectionist nation with which we had large dealings—some concessions in the direction of free exchange of goods.

"Now, I want to put to you the question. The duties, the repeal of which was promised to the French Government as a consideration for some diminution of their protective tariffs, were duties to which no value was attached, but the contrary, by the British Exchequer. When Mr. Cobden negotiated that treaty he and those who sont him must either have been resolved to keep on these duties if the treaty failed, or they must have been resolved in any case to give them up. If the latter, then the consideration they were offering to the French Government in exchange for fiscal concessions was purely illusory; and the most complimentary epithet that I can imagine for a diplomatic transaction of that kind is, that it was extremely dexterous.

"I believe that Mr. Cobden, who was the emissary, and Mr. Gladstone, the then Chancellor of the Exchequer, when they were dealing with the French Government of the day, did not mean to indulge in those over-incenious factics. But what they did say to them and meant to say to them was: 'If you will give us increased facilities for our exports we will remit those taxes. If you will not give us increased facilities we will retain those taxes.' That is the only interpretation I can put, consistently with the honour of the persons concerned, upon that great commercial negotiation. But, if so, then, in the opinion of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Cobden, it was legitimate to keep on taxes which would have been from a purely Treasury and revenue point of view illegitimate, in order to put pressure upon a foreign Government to relax its tariff.

"There is no economical distinction whatever between the diplomacy which strives to attain its end by threatening to retain taxes which ought to be repealed and one which threatens to impose taxes which, from a fiscal point of view, ought never to be put on. If Mr. Cobden approved the first, we must assume that he would not have boggled at the second.

"Well, that, so far as I know, is the one exception to our attitude of somewhat self-complacent indifference to the tariff policy of our great commercial friends and rivals and to the tariff policy of our own Colonies."—Sheffield, October 1st, 1903.

INJURIES FROM FOREIGN TARIFFS.—"I take it that it is quite impossible for any man to say—I know it is quite impossible for any free trader to say—that we have not suffered deeply and profoundly by foreign tariffs in this country. Free trade is indeed an empty name, a vain speculation, if the fact that foreign nations are setting themselves to work to divert our industries into channels into which they would never have naturally flowed, to exclude our manufactures from their appropriate markets, and to limit as far as they can the international play of supply and demand—I say that free trade is indeed a farce if those things do not produce an evil effect, not merely upon the country which imposes protective duties, but on the free trade country-and there is still one which has to endeavour to the best of its ability to meet them.

"But real and great as these evils are, they are not the only ones inflicted on us by foreign protection. For there has been a development of which Mr. Cobden and Mr. Cobden's contemporaries never dreamed, the development of the trust system under the protection of these tariffs which inflict an injury upon the capital and still more upon the workmen of these islands. The phenomenon is so new that I dare scarce venture to prophesy what development it is likely to take, whether it is going to expand into a great national danger, or whether it is going to be limited to the evil which I fear it has already inflicted.

"But of this you may be absolutely sure, that in the alliance of trusts and tariffs there is a danger to the enterprise of this country which threatens not mainly the capitalist, for he is at liberty to establish his business in those countries where tariffs will benefit his industry not injure it, but which will fall with the heaviest weight upon the artisan and labour classes of this country, who have no methods, or no methods known to me, by which they can protect their interests against this particular danger."—Sheffield, Oct. 1st, 1903.

TRUE FREE TRADE AND SO-CALLED FREE TRADERS - "I understand that the opponents of fiscal reform peculiarly pride themselves on being the representatives of true free trade doctrines. I dispute that proposition, and I appeal to their own practice to show how incorrect it is. Free trade, as I understand it, advocates unrestrained commercial intercourse between nation and nation in which neither those who export nor those who import attempt by artificial stimulants or artificial barriers to modify the natural course of trade. That is free trade, and I wish to Heaven we had it.

"The question I desire to put to these psuedo free traders is this-If they believe in this doctrine, how can they watch with uncomplaining patience its utter repudiation by every manufacturing country in the world but ourselves? They talk as if free trade was enjoyed by every country which refrained from putting a duty upon imports. They forget that true free trade doctrine requires freedom not only for the imports to a country but for the exports from it.

"If they can watch with this indifferent philosophy the complete repudiation of this doctrine by the world at large, what claim have they to be regarded as true free I admit that they do not in words deny that the heavy tariffs put upon our goods by foreign countries is in itself an evil, but they pass it by as an evil which after all may be neglected, as a disease so slight that it must be more tolerable than almost any remedy that can be proposed;—and I notice that in fact the only remedy which they do propose is education. I am the last person in the world to underrate the value or importance of education. But though I do not underrate education, was anything in this world ever heard so utterly ridiculous as the theory that technical education or secondary education, or any other form of education, would neutralise an 80 per cent. duty upon your staple manufactures? The idea that we can cure the ills inflicted by foreign tariffs merely by increasing the number or the excellence of our technical schools, is so intrinsically absurd that I almost feel the sacred cause of education is made ridiculous by such advocacy."—Bristol, November 13th, 1903.

Freedom of Negotiation.—"My request to you is that the people of this country should give to the Government of this country, from whatever party that Government may be drawn, that freedom of negotiation of which we have been deprived, not by the force of circumstances, not by the action of overmastering forces, not by the pressure of foreign Powers, but by something which I can only describe as our own pedantry and our own self-conceit."—Sheffield, Oct. 1st, 1903.

"I have seen nothing to alter in what is now known in the technical language of political controversy as 'The Sheffield Programme.' I still believe that all the recommendations that I then made to my countrymen with regard to an alteration in the traditional fiscal policy of this country were sound recommendations. believe that they are consistent with the most scientific teaching of political economy, as well as with the instincts of practical statesmanship. They have, so far as I know, been but rarely directly challenged by our opponents. A frontal attack has not been found easy. Indirect methods have been preferred."

-Edinburgh, Oct. 3rd, 1904.

"Free-trader and protectionist may surely alike agree that our commercial interests are likely to be furthered by some power to negotiate effectively with those-countries which have erected against us so high a ta-iff wall. That does not touch any of the prejudices of either one party or the other; it is an interest common to both."—Albert Hall, June 2nd, 1905.

Its Value.—"I have been asked by friends of mine whether there really is any ground for supposing that we should make better bargains if we had the freedom of negotiation which I ask you to give us. I confess that the very question seems to me to show that the questioner lives in a world of economic phantasunagoria, with no relation whatever to the realities in which, fortunately or unfortunately, our lot is cast. Are commercial bargains different from all other bargains? Are negotiations between nations which deal with duties upon manufactured goods different in essence and in character from other negotiations carried on for other purposes? Did any mine ever hear of a country going into negotiations for these other purposes which cameout of these negotiations with success unless it had in the course of these negotiations something to give, which, in case of necessity, it was at liberty to withhold?"—

Sheffield, Oct. 1st, 1903.

How WILL IT BE USED?—"I have stated the fundamental proposition which I with to affirm, but I agree that it is necessary for me that I should answer some questions which will inevitably be askel as to the manner in which that freedom for which I ask is going to be used.

regard as highly unreasonable. I suppose there is not a man in this room who denies that we ought to have a fleet; but am I, or is any other Minister, to tell you how that fleet is to be used in 1904, or 1905, or 1906, or 1907? That is a prophetic calculation which neither I nor any other man can make.

"All you can say is this—that it is absolutely necessary for this country to have at its command in case of need a great navy, and it is necessary, in my judgment, that this country should also have at its command those instruments of negotiation for which in general terms I have already pleaded. How either of these instruments of national policy is to be employed must necessarily depend on the exigencies of the moment.

"But though I think the question is thus put very often in a most unreasonable fashion, I am perfectly ready to answer it, so far as in my judgment it can be answered in general terms.

"Now you will ask me how I mean to carry out, or how I contemplate should be carried out, that liberty of negotiation for which I ask in respect of foreign countries.

"Well, there are a great many people who seem to think that if we ask for liberty of negotiation in respect of tariffs with foreign countries we mean to enter into a general tariff war with the whole world. No such idea, no such expectation is entertained, at all events by myself.

"I do not know whether most of you are acquainted with the practice of foreign countries in their tariff negotiations. What they commonly do is to have what they call a combative tariff, that is to say a very high tariff placed upon all foreign goods, which they then proceed to reduce for the benefit of those nations which give them something in return. So that they start with a heavy duty on all manufactured imports, which they are prepared to reduce for consideration received. I contemplate no such procedure with regard to this country. I think it would involve too great a disturbance of our practice, and might risk the disorganisation of our trade.

"But I see no such objection to our proceeding, so to speak, from the other end, and if we thought we could do it without disadvantage to ourselves—which, after all, is the guiding consideration in these matters—we might inform any foreign country which we thought was treating us with our ageous unfairness, that unless they modified their policy to our advantage we should feel ourselves compelled to take this or that step in regard to their exports to our markets.

"I do not for a moment suggest that foreign countries are animated by a desire todestroy our trade simpliciter. What they want to do is to improve their trade at our expense, which is rather a different thing; but in any case are you not trying themtoo high by your present system? Are you not throwing an unnecessary temptation in their way? Supposing they want to do us justice, is it fair to go to their negotiators and say: 'Well, we have nothing to give you, we have nothing to take from you; our principles are such that you may kick us round the room, and we will only say—please treat us as well as you can.' I do not think that is fair to the foreign negotiator, who has to consider public opinion in his own country. He will find it far easier to come to a fair 'give and take' arrangement if he knows that behind our request for justice there is a method of exacting it."—Sheffield, October 1st, 1908.

Not a Half-way House.—"They say that the Sheffield programme may be plausible as a compromise; but that, after all, looked at in its essence, it is but a half-way house to something else, to something further and worse; in short, to protection naked and undisguised. The fiscal policy that I recommended at Sheffield is not a compromise, and is not a half-way house. It is a logical, self-contained whole, defensible in itself, and not carrying within it the seeds of any necessary development in a direction which either protectionist or free trader may either hope for or fear.

"The argument of the Opposition I understand to be this. They say the present policy of the country is free trade. The Sheffield policy is antagonistic to the existing policy of the country. Protection is antagonistic to the policy of the country, therefore the Sheffield programme is protectionist. This is an example of a kind of fallacy which a professor of logic gives to his youngest class as an easy exercise for beginners. This is really so childish that I do not propose to deal with it in that form."—Edinburgh, Oct. 3rd, 1904.

What Protection is.—"I should like to put the subject before you in a shape which will, I think, make even those who do not take the trouble to think very accurately upon these questions, gauge the value of this criticism on the Sheffield policy.

"It is said to be protective.

"What then is a protective policy? A protective policy, as I understand it, is a policy which sims at supporting or creating home industries by raising home prices. The object of protection is to encourage home industries. The means by which it attains that object is by so arranging import duties that the prices obtained in those industries are increased. If home prices are not raised, industry is not encouraged. If industry is encouraged, it is by raising prices. That is, in a nutshell, protection properly understood.

"Now, that may be a good or a bad policy—but it is not the Sheffleld policy, and it has no relation whatever to the Sheffield policy.

"You can always distinguish, if you desire to think clearly upon these subjects, you can always, I say, distinguish between a protective policy and a fiscal policy which is not protective by asking whether raising home prices is or is not essential to its success. There are countries which are universally recognized as free trade countries, but which yet have a general Customs tariff, for revenue purposes which is not balanced by a corresponding Excise.

"Are these protective countries or are they not? They are not, because the object of putting on the Customs tax was revenue, and the fact that those countries do not put on a corresponding Excise tax is due to other causes, and not due to a desire to encourage their home industries by raising their home prices.

"Take another illustration. I have always been in favour—that is part, indeed, of the Sheffield programme—of using our power of taxing foreign goods for the purpose of enabling us to negotiate arrangements with foreign countries upon a basis favourable to international free trade.

"Is that a protective policy or is it not?

"It is not a protective policy, because if, unfortunately, it required us to impose a tax on any foreign imports such tax would fulfil its purpose not worse, but better, if through the play of international competition it fell entirely on the foreign producer and left home prices unaffected."—Edinburgh, Oct. 3rd, 1904.

MOST-FAVOURED-NATION CLAUSE.—"The most-favoured-nation clause, as, let us say, between England and Austria, provides that, if Austria gives Italy, for example, favourable terms for any Italian import into Austria, Austria shall be obliged to give us the same terms.

"In other words, it in appearance gives us every advantage which France or Germany or America in the course of their tariff negotiations have been able to extract from Austria. Now observe that our opponents, these so-called free traders, are quite ready to accept the good things thus obtained by bargaining, provided only the bargaining is done by other countries and not by us.

"They have to admit, therefore, however inconsistently, that bargaining is useful, and useful to this country. But, if so, had we not better do our own bargaining? Is it credible that the accidental by-products of other people's bargaining for their interests should prove the best way of securing our own? We know in fact that it is not. We know by actual experience that when two countries take the trouble to come to an understanding on fiscal matters with each o her, the understanding is usually of a kind that does as much good as possible to themselves and as little good as possible to anybody else.

"When Germany, for example, in 1891, was negotiating commercial treaties, she set to work so to arrange their terms that under the most-favoured-nation clause weshould capture as small a part as possible of the advantages she was conferring upon her Continental neighbours—not out of any malevolence to this country, but simply because, as she was probably paying these nations for what they gave her in the way of tariff relaxation, she did not see why she should also pay us, who, in the way of open markets, had already given her all we had to give. And this diplomatic operation, although highly unfavourable to this country, is not one of which in existing circumstances we can complain, nor can it be regarded as in any way a breach of the comity of nations. So much for the security to our export tradeprovided by the much-vaunted operation of the most-favoured-nation clause.-Bristol, November 13th, 1903.

PROTECTION NOT THE BEST POLICY .- "Nevertheless, I am of opinion -- and I desire to say it with very great distinctness - I am of opinion that for this country in its existing circumstances protection in the true sense of the word, protection as I have endeavoured to define it to-night, is not the best policy.

"It is not one I have ever recommended, directly or indirectly, either to my colleagues in the Cabinet, to the House of Commons, or to the country.

"It is a policy which I do not believe to be expedient, and though I should never think of diminishing the zeal and earnestness of my support of a Conservative and Unionist party should that party take up a protectionist line, I do not feel that I could with advantage in such circumstances be its leader. A man can only lead his party if he believes in the party's policy; and although I do believe in the general scheme of politics which we in this room represent, I think I should have to leave it to others to carry out protection if the party hould decide that protection was in its opinion expectation." country should decide that protection was in its opinion expedient."—Edinburgh, October 3rd. 1904.

II.—IMPERIAL TRADE.

FREE TRADE EMPIRES.—" I do not think it is to our credit, and I confess that when I hear criticisms—criticisms with which I sympathise taken by themselves upon the American and the German system, under which those great industrial nations have accompanied their narvellous commercial expansion with protective duties which must have thrown a most heavy burden upon the consumer, I feel that they have a retort to which I, at least, have no reply.

"They may well say to us that, although their external policy has been thus protectionist, at all events within the limits of their own country they have established permanent free trade, and that at this moment within the circuit of the German Empire and within the vast ambit of the American Commonwealth all duties, all restrictions which can hamper free exchange, have been abolished by their patriotism and their foresight.

"And they may well ask us whether we in the British Empire can point to a similar picture, and whether at this moment that free trade of which we talk so much, and of which we boast so loudly, is free trade extending beyond the narrow limits of the four seas, and whether it even includes those great self-governing Colonies which we proudly boast are to be the great buttresses of our Empire."-Sheffield, October 1st, FISCAL UNION PRECEDES POLITICAL UNION.—" I think we have in this country been strangely blind to the anomalous situation in which the British Empire is placed in matters fiscal. You will find many cases in which fiscal union has been the prelude to that closer and more intimate union which is the basis of national strength.

"I may mention, as a Scotsman, the case of England and Scotland. If any of you will consult your histories you will see what reconciled the smaller kingdom to union. with the greater kingdom was no love of being under a British Parliament, but the sense that it was absolutely necessary for national existence, or, at all events, for national prosperity, that England and Scotland should be fiscally one. But that Union, originally based on mere material considerations, now depends on the yet stronger bond of sentiment; and it has welded the two peoples together into an inseparable whole, which it will not be possible for any hostile force to divide.

- "And if I wished further to load my speech with historical illustrations I might, of course, point to the case of Germany. For Germany resembles Scotland in this respect, that fiscal union began before that political union which had been the greatest incident in modern European history.
- "We, on the other hand, have been content, apparently, as far as our Empire is concerned, to see fiscal divisions growing with our growth, and at the very moment when the population and wealth of our Colonies are greatly increasing, and the sentiment of common interest, common blood, and common institutions is daily gaining strength, we see these fiscal divisions deepening and broadening, with results which no man can prophesy, but which I venture to say no man of sober judgment or any knowledge of history can contemplate without disquiet."—Sheffield, October 1st, 1903.

COLONIES DESIRE CLOSER UNION.—"We have Lord Rosebery telling us that, in his opinion, the Colonies do not want an arrangement—telling us that he has no reason to think that the great ideal which Mr. Chamberlain has put before the country with such extraordinary force is one which is at present worth white considering.

- "I cannot take that view.
- "It surely is wrong that we should now be using the Imperial sentiments of our great self-governing colonies as counters in a political game, and that from one platform to another we should be throwing confident statements that the Colonies want this, or that the Colonies do not want it, that the Colonies are earnestly degrous of a closer union, fiscal and otherwise, with this country, or, again, that the Colonies have no such wish—that their one aim is to be left alone.
- "I do not believe it is possible, consistently with our duty as the head of a great Empire, to leave this question in the doubt in which it now inevitably stands. I am one of those who believe firmly that the great communities of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, the Cape, do desire some closer union."—Edinburgh, Oct. 3rd, 1904.

An Imperial Conference.—" In my view we should meet—by we I mean the representatives of the free governing Colonies, with India and ourselves in this country—we should meet free and unfettered to discuss with each other, in the first place, whether this ideal of closer union is one which commends itself to us; in the second place—for I have no doubt as to what the answer to the first question will be—in the second place, to consider how it can be carried out.

- "Freedom in this case, free interchange of ideas, is of the very essence of success, and without it success I believe to be impossible."—Edinburgh, Oct. 3rd, 1904.
- "It is to be judged, not on economic grounds alone, but on Imperial grounds; but whether you judge it on economic grounds or on Imperial grounds, it is not, in my mind, in conflict with the doctrines of either of the two historic opponents—free traders or protectionists. It is, in truth, beside and beyond that ancient controversy, it deals with problems never contemplated when that controversy was at its height, it deals with issues which are, as it were, of yesterday, but which, though they be of yesterday, are destined to modify to the most remote generations the future of the country to which we belong.
- "I have asked that a question which touches nearly the whole Empire should be dealt with by a Conference representing the whole Empire—that that Conference should be a free Conference, and that the inhabitants of these islands, as well as our fellow-subjects in the self-governing Colonies and in India, should suspend their judgment as to what can be done, as to what plan can be proposed by such a Conference, until they see."—Albert Hall, June 2nd, 1905.

Two Appeals to the People.—"I do not believe you will induce either this country or Canada, or Australia, or New Zealand—I do not think you will induce them to join in such a conference unless these various self-governing communities have the right to appeal to their respective electorates as to any scheme which may be hammered out.

- "Of course, if they claim that liberty, as I am sure they will, that liberty must almost of necessity be equally claimed by us.
- "My view, therefore, is that the policy of this party should be, if we come into power after the next election, to ask the Colonies to join a conference on these lines—a conference whose discussion shall be free, but whose conclusions shall not commit any of the communities concerned to any large plan of Imperial union on fiscal or other lines, unless their various electorates have given their adhesion to the scheme."—

"I have never suggested and I have never thought that the plan of a double election . . . should have any force or operation unless we were returned to power at the next general election, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman tells me explicity or implicitly on every decent occasion that there is no chance of such a result. It, therefore, does not matter to him, and from one point of view it does not matter to us. If he is right, and if we are not going to be returned to power at the next general election, the whole scheme which I ventured to adambrate at Edinburgh of a double election of course falls to the ground. We deal with a new situation under new conditions."—
Albert Hall. June 2nd, 1905.

QUESTION NOT TO BE HURRIED.—"What we are aiming at is the consolidation of the British Empire. The British Empire was not born yesterday. It is not a thing of to-day. It will not perish to-morrow. What we should all aim at is to proceed to this great end with a wise caution, which will enable every man to feel that he is engaged in erecting no temporary structure which a passing wave of public opinion may sweep away, but that he is building for all time a great edifice, which neither winds nor floods can threaten, which shall be solidly based upon the common consent of free communities, aiming at no particular or selfish ends, but at the realisation of a great ideal.

This then is the policy I would recommend to the Unionist party."—Edinburgh, Oct. 3rd, 1904.

THE RADICAL POSITION.—"This great problem, if I understand them rightly, they have bound themselves to put on one side. They have deliberately said that this country is not to occupy the place in the commercial system of the Empire which our Colonies desire that she +hould occupy. Can they complain—can the country which returns them to power complain—if, in such circumstances, our Colonies say: We made you, the mother country, in all honesty, an offer which we thought not less to your advantage than to our own. You have refused to accept it; you have refused even to discuss it. Can you blame us if the place which you have deliberately left vacant we now proceed to give unto another? May no such calamity befall this people."—Albert Hall, June 2nd, 1905.

III.—A CLEAR SUMMARY.

- "1. I desire such an alteration of our fiscal system as will give us a freedom of action impossible while we hold ourselves bound by the maxim that no taxation should be imposed except for revenue.
 - "I desire this freedom in the main for three reasons.
- "It will strengthen our hands in any negotiations by which we may hope to lower foreign hostile tariffs.
- "It may enable us to protect the fiscal independence of those Colonies which desire to give us preferential treatment.
- "It may be useful where we wish to check the importation of those foreign goods which, because they are bounty-fed or tariff-protected abroad, are sold below cost price here.
- "Such importations are ultimately as injurious to the consumer as they are immediately ruinous to the producer.
 - "2 I desire closer commercial union with the Colonies.
- "I do so because I desire closer union in all its rest modes, and because this particular mode is intrinsically of great importance, and has received much Colonial support.
- "I also think it might produce great and growing commercial advantages both to the Colonies and the Mother Country by promoting freer trade between them.
 - "3. No doubt such commercial union is beset with many difficulties.
- ¹⁴ Those can best be dealt with by a Colonial conference, provided its members are permitted to discuss them unhampered by limiting instructions.
- "I recommend, therefore, that the subject shall be referred to a conference on those terms.
- "4. And last, I do not desire to raise home prices for the purpose of aiding home productions."—Manchester 26th, 1905.

CONSERVATIVES AND LABOUR.

A Record of Work.

"They (trade unions) must continue their noble work of ameliorating the conditions of employment of their fellow toilers; of protecting their lives and limbs in their employment; of securing compensation for all who were maimed or killed at their work; of improving the conditions of their homes and surroundings; of securing the best system of education for their children so that the nation could have the service of its best brains; of promoting temperance amongst their class; of securing for their wornout industrial warriors a well-deserved retiring allowance."

With these words, Mr. Bell, M.P., ended his address at the Trades Union Congress. 1904. Conservatives do not quarrel with his programme. They support it—as they have supported it in the past. EVERY ONE OF THE AIMS MENTIONED BY MR. BELL. HAS BEEN THE SUBJECT OF CONSERVATIVE ACTION. Let us take Mr. Bell's remarks sentence by sentence, and the statement will soon be clear.

THEY MUST CONTINUE THEIR NOBLE WORK:-

 Of Ameliorating the Conditions of Employment of their Fellow Toilers.— Since 1802, about 40 Acts dealing with employment in factories and workshops have been passed, and two-thirds of these, including those of the greatest importance, have been the work of the Conservative Party. Since 1886, the Conservatives have passed the following Acts:-

Agricultural Labourers' Wages Act, 1886, gives wages the first claim in case of an employer's bankruptcy.

Cotton Cloth Factories Acts, 1889 and 1897, protect the workers from damp Factories and Workshop Act, 1891, improves the conditions in factories.

Conciliation (Trade Disputes) Act, 1896, enables disputes to be settled in a peaceful Truck Acts Amendment Act, 1896, abolishes illegal fines. As a result fines are done away with in many places. Seats for Shop Assistants Act, 1899, makes employers provide seats.

Factory and Workshops Act, 1901, amends the law in the interest of the workers.

Shop Clubs Act, 1902, does away with unregistered clubs. Shop Hours Act, 1904, provides for shorter hours in shops.

Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905, provides organisation for dealing with the workman out of a job through no fault of his own.

2. Of Protecting their Lives and Limbs in their Employment.—Conservative legislation includes :-

Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, restricts employment of children and increases safeguards against accidents.

Railway Regulation Act, 1889, for the safety of railway workers.

Alkali Works Act, 1892, protects the worker.

Merchant Shipping Act, 1892, provides for the health and safety of sailors.

Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1896, protects the miner from accidents and makes sure that his interests are looked after in disputes.

Chaff-Cutting Machines Act, 1897, provides for the safety of the worker by fencing dangerous parts.

Dangerous Performances Act, 1897, prohibits young persons from taking part Railway Employment Act, 1900, better prevents accidents to railway servants.

Employment of Children Act, 1903, regulates child labour.

Shipowners Negligence (Remedies) Act, 1905, detains foreign ships whose owners are liable for injuries caused by want of care.

3. Of Securing Compensation for all who were Maimed or Killed in their WORK .- In 1897, the Conservatives passed the Workmen's Compensation Act, which gives compensation in the case of accidents to workers on railways and buildings, in mines, quarries, and factories, and to engineers. In 1900, the benefits were extended so as to include agricultural labourers. More than 7,000,000 workers are benefited by these Acts. The Conservatives appointed a committee to inquire into the working of the Act, and last Session a Bill was brought in on the subject. It could not be passed through want of time, however.

4. Of Improving the Conditions of their Homes and Surroundings.—The Conservatives have passed the following measures:-

Dwellings of the Working Classes Acts, 1885-90, ensure healthy houses and promote the erection of cheap dwellings.

Allotments and Cottage Gardens Act, 1887, gives allotment holders compensation for improvements and labour.

Labourers' Allotments Acts, 1887-90, give labourers an opportunity of acquiring allotments.

Infectious Diseases Act, 1890, enforces disinfective and preventive measures. Allotments Rating Act, 1891, reduces the sanitary rates on allotments to the same scale as those on market gardens.

Small Agricultural Holdings Act, 1892, makes it easier to get these holdings.

Small Dwellings Acquisition Act, 1899, enables the worker to borrow money on easy terms to buy his house with.

Housing Act, 1900, gives local authorities extended powers to build houses. Housing Act, 1903, makes it easier for working class dwellings to be built.

Aliens Act, 1905, keeps out undesirable aliens and stops them from contaminating the homes and surroundings of British citizens.

5. Of Securing the Best System of Education for their Children so that THE NATION COULD HAVE THE SERVICE OF ITS BEST BRAINS.—The Conservatives have always given great attention to popular education, as the following record will show:-Technical Instruction Acts, 1887-89, enable local authorities to establish or aid schools for teaching trades.

Technical Instruction Act, 1890, gives the local authorities power to supply such instruction out of the rates.

Museums and Gymnasiums Act, 1891, enables local authorities to provide these means of instruction and recreation.

Elementary Education Act, 1891, gives free education to the people.

Technical and Industrial Institutions Act, 1892, makes it easy for local bodies to establish schools for this kind of education.

Education Act, 1902, puts education on a systematic footing, controlled by one local authority. Makes complete the ladder from Board School to University. London Education Act, 1903, does the same thing for London.

6. Of Promoting Temperance amongst their Class.—This is a brief record of what the Conservatives have done for temperance :-

Inebriates Act, 1898, makes it easy for this class to try to reform.

Licensing Act, 1902, protects the wife or husband of an habitual drunkard, and provides for the registration of clubs.

Licensing (Scotland) Act, 1903, reforms the licensing law in Scotland.

Licensing Act, 1904, provides for the reduction of unnecessary licences and the public control of future licences.

7. OF SECURING FOR THEIR WORN-OUT INDUSTRIAL WARRIORS A WELL-DESERVED RETIRING ALLOWANCE.—The Conservatives have always shown themselves in sympathy with Old Age Pensions. A practical scheme has yet to be found. But until that is done, the Conservatives have done their best to protect and extend Friendly Societies and Savings Banks:-

Trustee Savings Banks Act, 1887, enables official enquiry to be made into the state of doubtful banks.

Savings Banks Act, 1891, imposes stringent securities against frauds and ensures complete inspection of their accounts.

Collecting Societies Act, 1896, consolidates the law.

Friendly Societies Act, 1896, consolidates the law.

Savings Banks Act, 1904, provides for the better control of these institutions.

Outdoor Relief (Friendly Societies) Act, 1904, provides that recipient: of 5s.

a week or less from Friendly Societies are not to have any outdoor relief lessened because of such pay from Friendly Societies.

This is a brief record of what Conservatives have done for labour in recent years. It shows that they are the real friends of the workers. What they have done in the past is a proof of what they will do in the future. Every elector should support them in furthering this work.

RADICALS AND HOME RULE.

Try how they can Radicals are unable to shake off Home Rule. Just when they are congratulating themselves that the question is dying out Mr. Redmond speaks; and the past and the future rise up to confront them.

A selection of recent statements on the question fully bears out this contention.

Mr. Redmond Threatens.—Going back to December, 1903, we come across an angry speech by Mr. Redmond delivered at Bunninaden:

NOTHING SHORT OF HOME RULE WILL EVER BE OUR POLICY FOR A SETTLEMENT . . . We will not listen to any policy as an alternative of the Irish Question. to Home Rule, whether it comes to us from the present Government or from any Government that may be named in the future by the fusion of different sections of the Liberal party."—Freeman's Journal, Dec. 21st, 1903.

Again, in the House of Commons, Mr. Redmond rubbed it in:—
"The Nationalists accepted no alternative policy to Home Rule. statement of the right hon. gentleman (Mr. Herbert Gladstone) made it necessary, therefore, for the Irish Members to define their position once more, if not for the Government of to-day, at least for the benefit of those who hoped to be the Government of to-morrow, and who, for all he knew to the contrary, might be hugging the comfortable delusion at this moment that they could obtain Irish support on this alternative policy. THERE WAS NO SUCH THING FOR IRELAND AS AN ALTERNATIVE POLICY TO HOME RULE."—Times, Feb. 4th, 1904.

Not content with these threats, Mr. Redmond returned to the attack at Manchester.

He was even more precise in his demands than before. He said :-

"Before any Liberal Government could hold office by virtue of Irish votes, Home Rule must be its Irish policy."—Times, March 21st, 1904.

THE CAUSE OF THE ROW.—What was the cause of all this? Why did Mr. Redmond speak so plainly to the Radicals?

He did so because he thought the Radicals were backing down.

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, the Radical Whip, wrote a letter, at the end of 1903, in which he said :-

"So far as I am concerned, I am a Home Ruler, but, as I have frequently said to my constituents, the Nationalist party has accepted, at any rate for the present, the alternative policy of the Conservative party; and it is essential that we should see what result that policy is likely to have on Irish opinion, and what are to be its further developments."—Daily News, Dec. 19th, 1903.

This was not good enough for Mr Redmond. He is not going to let the Radicals give Home Rule the go-by if he can help it. Doubtless some Radicals would like to forget that Home Rule ever existed. But they dare not quarrel with their allies.

C.-B. CLIMBS DOWN.—So afraid were they that the Nationalists would not give them their help in the future, that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman took an early opportunity of eating humble pie On 4th May, 1904, in the House of Commons, he sold himself and his party to the Nationalists in the following words:-

"The self-government of Ireland, that was the remedy which they (the Radicals) would apply."—Hansard, vol. 134, p. 477.

Lest Mr. Redmond might get nasty again, Sir Henry reminded him later that the Radicals still supported Home Rule. In the House of Commons, he spoke of :-

"Those who, like myself, have supported and still continue to support a policy of thorough and fundamental alteration in the whole system of Irish Government."— Times, Feb. 22nd, 1905.

FURTHER EVIDENCE.—If further evidence be needed as to the adoption of Home Rule by the predominant section of the Radical party, we shall not have to go far to find it.

First we have Mr. John Morley, speaking at Manchester. He said:—

"Whether they had that or a settlement which had been called by the name of administrative Home Rule, in either case he thought, and hoped, he was not far wrong in saying for that great assembly, representing so much, that when the Liberal party was asked to unsay all it had been saying with such vehemence, fortitude, steadfastness, and constancy for all these years—to unsay all these things was what would not be, what could not be, and what ought not to be."-Times, May 14th, 1904.

And more recently, at the Queen's Hall (March 20th, 1905), Mr Morley expressed opinions on the Irish question that can only be interpreted as carrying on his former pinions

Sir Robert Reid, the Attorney-General in the last Radical Government, has also expressed himself in favour of Home Rule:—

"It is quite unnecessary to enter on an argument in favour of this policy of Home Rule, or upon any question of machinery, or how such a policy was to be carried out. It was a question of principle. The policy was brought forward, not as a matter OF PLAIN EXPEDIENCY BUT AS A MATTER OF SACRED DUTY."-House of Commons, Feb. 3rd, 1904.

And last, but not least, we have the Radical leader in the House of Lords pronouncing for it. Speaking at Wandsworth, Lord Spencer said :-

"That unless they gave more self-government to Ireland, the state of the country would be as bad in the future as it had been in the past."—Times, March 8th, 1905.

THE LIBERAL IMPERIALISTS.—But it may be urged that the Radicals are so divided on the question that the matter cannot safely be acted upon by any Radical Govern-The party are divided it is true. But the Home Rulers are the predominant Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Lord Spencer have control of the organization of the party. They, in fact, are the official section, and they support Home Rule.

As for the rank-and-file, we may suppose that many would willingly be rid of the But whether they would repudiate Home Rule in the event of a Radical Government dependent upon the Irish party, is a problem that cannot yet be solved.

However, at the present time they do not disdain the Irish vote at bye-elections as the following paragraph will show. At a meeting of the United Irish League, held

"It was unanimously decided to call upon the Irish electors of Devonport and the Harborough Division to support the Liberal candidates, Mr. J. W. Benn and Mr. P. Stanhope, whose pledges on the Home Rule question were regarded as satisfactory." -Times, June 18th, 1904.

Sir Edward Grey, who speaks presumably for the Roseberyites, said at Northallerton

"If the Liberal party had not a majority over the Unionist party, his opinion was that they had better not get into power at all." — Westminster Gazette, March 16th, 1905.

He leaves his hearers to infer that, if the Radicals in some future House of Commons outnumber the Conservatives, but do not outnumber the Conservative and Nationalist parties, they will not hesitate to form a Government, But, as they will be liable to defeat by a combination of Unionists and Nationalists, it is very evident that they will have to bribe the Nationalist support.

This, as we know, can only be done at the price of Home Rule.

ROSEBERY v. REDMOND.—More than ten years ago Lord Rosebery rejected Home Rule.* He rejects it to-day. Speaking in the City of London on 9th of March, 1905, he said that:—

"You may do much for Ireland, you may do her inestimable good by proceeding on grounds of administrative reform, but there is one thing to which no statesman will ever expose his country, and that is the curse of dual government at the heart

what are the results of dualism—a vulture gnawing at the very vitals of the Empire, and we at any rate may be forgiven who will not expose our Imperial heritage and our Imperial future to any such danger."—Times, March

Such insolence could not be passed over in silence by Mr. Redmond. He at once assumed a threatening attitude. Speaking in London at a banquet in honour of St. Patrick, he said of Lord Rosebery's speech:—

"Lord Rosebery's denunciations of Home Rule had no more effect upon the progress of Ireland's cause than the voice of the cuckoo had on the sequence of the seasons.

He supposed that that speech was intended to embarrass the Liberal party. He did not himself think that Lord Rosebery's speech was likely to intimidate the Liberal party; BUT IF IT DID, THEN SO MUCH THE WORSE FOR THE LIBERAL PARTY.

"They would support and keep in office in the next Parliament no Liberal party, no Liberal Government, which took the Rosebery view of Home Rule for Ireland.

-Times, March 17th, 1905.

Meanwhile Lord Rosebery replied to Mr. Redmond. At Epsom, on March 18th, 1905, he said :-

"An independent Parliament in Dublin and the Parliament that exists in London do, in their strictest sense, represent my idea of duality. If Mr. Redmond is in favour ^{*} In what is known as the "predominant partner" speech, in the House of Lords on March 12th, 1894, Lord Rosebery said: "The noble Marquess (Lord Salisbury) made one remark on the subject of Irish Home Rule with which I confess myself in entire accord. He said that before Irish Home Rule is conceded by the Imperial Parliament, ENGLAND AS THE PREDOMINANT MEMBER OF THE PARTNERSHIP OF THE THERE KINGDOMS WILL HAVE TO BE CONVINCED OF ITS JUSTICE AND EQUITY. That may seem a considerable admission to make, because your lordships will know that the majority of English members of Parliament, elected from England proper, are hostile to this measure.

Parl Day Vol Xvii Para 32 -Parl. Deb., Vol. xxii., Page 32.

of that, I venture to tell him explicitly that he has yet to win over not merely the majority, but the great mass of the nation that inhabits Great Britain, to his views. — Times, March 20th, 1905

THE POLICY OF "ARMED REVOLT."—The Radical position was further shown upin the debate in the House of Commons on April 12th, 1905 (see Parliamentary Summary, p. 300). Mr. Redmond, the Irish leader, laid it down that the Nationalist party:—

"Had not departed one hair's breadth from the position which was taken up in 1866 by Mr. Parnell, and after his death in 1893, by the Irish members of that day."—

Times, April 13th, 1905.

It is a point to be remarked that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. Redmond are in agreement as to the ground upon which separation is based. For convenience we put their utterances in parallel columns:—

SIE H. CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN.
"What was the principle at the root of this policy? It was the right of the Irish people to manage their own domestic affairs."—Times, April 13th, 1905.

MR. REDMOND.
"They based their demand not upon grievance, but upon the inherent and inalienable right of the Irish nation to govern itself."—Times, April 13th, 1905.

But here the agreement would seem to end. For Mr. Redmond considers the Home-Rule question:—

"An urgent and vital question to-day before both the country and the House of Commons.'

But to Sir Henry it is not so urgent, and he said that Home Rule was:—
"A policy which in no sense can be said to be before the country."

Indeed the Radical position was never more neatly put than by Mr. Balfour:-

"If the honourable gentlemen are returned in a large majority, then the members for Ireland nay whistle, but if they are returned in a small majority, then, in Heaven's name justice for Ireland."—Times, April 13th, 1905.

But there is one sentence above all in Mr. Redmond's speech to which the attention of every elector should be drawn. It shows one of the dangers to which this country may be exposed under a Radical Government with a leaning towards Home Rule. Mr. Redmond said:—

"If he believed that there was the smallest reasonable chance of success, he would have no hesitation in advising his fellow-countrymen to endeavour to end the present system by ARMED REVOLT."—Times, April 13th, 1905.

Nobody can pretend that, under a Conservative and Unionist Government, Home Rule has that "smallest reasonable chance of success" that is to be the prelude to an "armed revolt," and an Ireland drenched in blood. If proof were wanted of the truth of this assertion it is to be found in Mr. Balfour's explicit declaration:—

"There is, I believe, not a single man on this side of the House who does not hold as the cardinal article of his political faith that Home Rule for Ireland would not be a gift fatal to Ireland and fatal to England. We stand now one and all of us, as far as I know, exactly where we stood on this matter in the year 1886, when the first Home Rule Bill was introduced, and in the year 1893, when the second Home Rule Bill was introduced; and if . . . the Radical party opposite should attempt again for the third time, to try the same unhappy adventure, I promise them they will find on this side of the House opponents absolutely unanimous, and strenuously resolved to say that the unity of the kingdom shall be preserved."—Times, April 13th, 1905.

THE DANGER STILL THERE.—After reading these extracts, no doubts, we think, can exist as to the vitality of the Home Rule danger. But if they do, we venture to claim attention for a moment longer. There is in every constituency the Irish vote. In some places numerous; in others small. But whatever may be the size, it is a very useful commodity to possess, as it represents so much solid voting power.

it is a very useful commodity to possess, as it represents so much solid voting power.

That vote is purchasable. The price is Home Rule. Many Radicals will freely buy; others will perhaps be more reluctant. The effect on a Radical policy can be easily imagined.

Mr. Redmond has perhaps put the situation as concisely as possible:—
"They (the Irish) would be asked to give their votes irrespective of the English parties, for the interests of ireland alone, and he was perfectly sure that no circumstances could possibly arise which would justify the Irish leaders in asking Irish Nationalists to vote for men who took the Rosebery view of Home Rule."—
Times, March 20th, 1905.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor spoke even plainer words:-

"He said he did not believe that the Liberal party, if returned to office, would trample on the grave of Gladstone. If it did, then the Irish party were ready to break it down."—Times, March 20th, 1905.

Again it is to be remembered that the Nationalists are busy collecting funds for the struggle as the following telegram from Mr. W. Redmond from Sydney to Mr. J. Redmond shows:-

'Authorised by vast meeting City Hall, presided over by Cardinal Moran, to send greeting to party and promise support resolution for Home Rule. One thousand pounds subscribed; thousand more guaranteed."—Times, July 29th, 1905. Any proposals for Home Bule will come from a Radical Government. Not, perhaps, because the Radicals believe in that particular policy but because of the political exigencies of the time, under the terror of Mr. Redmond's "armed revolt." every elector who values the unity of the United Kingdom, the course is plain—he must support the Conservative party, for by it alone can Separation be defeated and Unity preserved.

REDISTRIBUTION.

"Your attention will be directed to proposals for diminishing the anomalies in the present arrangement of electoral areas, which are largely due to the growth and movement of population in recent years.'

When this paragraph was read from the King's Speech, Radical papers expressed considerable amusement, loudly prophesying that they would defeat the Government long before any redistribution resolutions were introduced.

As usual, they were wrong. Mr. Gerald Balfour issued his redistribution memorandum.* and the resolution was set down for discussion in the House.

RADICALS WART IT .- Before coming to the proposals themselves and the objections brought against them, it may be useful to give the opinions of one or two Radicals upon the necessity for redistribution.

On an amendment to the Address on January 29th, 1902, Mr. Asquith said :-

"In the first place, I think we are all agreed that the existing state of our representation as regards distribution is anomalous and indefensible, and CALLS FOR SPEEDY BENEDY."—Parl. Deb., Vol. 101, p. 1,332.

Mr. Bryce, on the same day, said :-

"Of course, there are what are called anomalies in OUR REPRESENTATIVE SYSTEM. WHICH IS NOT PERFECT."—Parl. Deb., Vol. 101, p. 1241.

And in the debate on the Address in the House of Lords, at the beginning of 1905, Earl Spencer said :-

"No one will find the Party to which I belong in opposition to a just and comprehensive measure for this purpose. I quite agree that the great movement of population and other changes require legislation from time to time."-Parl. Deb., Vol. 141, p. 26.

THE RESOLUTION.—The resolution introduced into the House of Commons by

Mr. Gerald Balfour, on July 13th, 1905, is as follows:-

"(1) That it is expedient, by reason of the present disparity in the population of Parliamentary constituencies, to revise the existing distribution of seats in accordance with the following principles:-

"(a) The number of Members of the House of Commons shall not be materially altered.

" (b) New Members shall be given as follows:-

"(i) A municipal borough or urban district with a population exceeding 65,000 shall become a separate constituency;

"(ii) A county or borough with a population exceeding 65,000 multiplied by the number of its Members shall have an additional Member for every complete 65,000 of the excess.

"(c) Mem'ers shall be taken away as follows:-

"(i) A borough with a population of less than 18,500 shall cease to exist as a separate constituency; and a county or borough with two Members and a population of less than 75,000 shall (except in the case of the City of London) lose one Member; and

"(ii) A county or borough with more than two Members and a population of less than 65,000 multiplied by the number of its Members shall have one less Member for every complete 65,000 of the deficiency;

"(d) The county and the borough shall, as far as practicable, be made co-extensive with the administrative county and the municipal borough respectively, but the boundaries of a borough shall not be curtailed except when thepopulation affected is inconsiderable;

"(e) In London each metropolitan borough shall be treated as if it were a borough returning the number of members returned by the present boroughs or divisions to which it most nearly corresponds.

"(2) That Commissioners be appointed to report what changes of boundaries are necessary or advisable for the purpose of giving effect to these principles, and whether any division or re-division of any county or borough is necessary or advisable for that purpose, or for the purpose of remedying any disparity in the population of the divisions of that county or borough.'

THE SPEAKER'S DECISION.—It may be useful here to give an account of the events which led to the withdrawal of the Resolution.

Mr. Redmond had asked the Speaker whether it would be in accordance with the rules of procedure and of precedent to take the redistribution resolution as one resolution, or whether it ought not, as has been done in similar cases, to be submitted to a Committee of the House?

Mr. Gibson Bowles also asked whether a resolution containing different propositions should not be divided, and each proposition put separately?

The Speaker gave his decision on July 17th, 1905. He said :-

"I have come to the conclusion that to offer the resolution which stands in the name of the President of the Local Government Board and to take it in the ordinary way-that is, en bloc-after the first amendment has been moved, would not afford to the House a sufficient and adequate opportunity for discussing the various matters. and principles which are contained in that resolution. I think, therefore, the resolution ought to be divided into at least eight, and probably nine, resolutions.

"When that point is reached I have further to consider whether in taking a series of resolutions like these, eight or nine in number, the proper procedure is that they should be taken seriatim by the House with myself in the chair, or whether they should be referred to a Committee. It may be said that the old system of referring these resolutions to a Committee of the whole House is obsolete. The last time in which it was employed, I think, was about the year 1868. But I cannot undertake myself to say that a system of that kind has become obsolete in the course of less than 40 years.

"The question then arises—How are these resolutions to be dealt with? form of proposing these resolutions, although not obsolete, is antiquated; but I feel I am driven back when this form is adopted to follow former precedents; and, looking at almost the last precedent—the year 1867, when Mr. Disraeli introduced his reform resolutions, which were somewhat of this character, partly for the extension of the franchise, and partly for redistribution of seats, which numbered some 13, I find that the procedure then adopted was to set up a Committee of the whole House and to refer these resolutions to that Committee, where they would, in the ordinary course have been discussed. It so happened that on that particular occasion they were not discussed, because another method of procedure was adopted, and the principles set out in the resolution were embodied in a Bill. But that does not concern the House on the present occasion.

"What really does concern the House is, what the procedure then adopted was; and the procedure was, as I say, to set up a Committee and refer these resolutions to it. (An Opposition member: 'A Committee of the whole House?') Yes, certainly, a Committee of the whole House. That was the same procedure as was adopted in 1858 upon the resolutions relating to the Government of India; and those twoprecedents seem to me to be strictly in force, and I cannot take upon myself to set aside those precedents on this occasion.

"I can only repeat what I said on Thursday as to the precedent of the Irish Church resolutions, which I do not think is for our guidance, and so need not be considered on this occasion, for, by reason of a certain Standing Order then in existence, all matters. dealing with religion were referred to a Committee.

"But following the precedents of 1858 and 1867, my opinion is that these resolutions." ought to be divided, and, when divided, that they ought to be considered by a Committee of the whole House."—Times, July 18th, 1905.

RESOLUTION DROPPED.—In consequence of this ruling, Mr. Balfour was not able to proceed with the consideration of the resolution. He said:—
"It must be perfectly evident to every member of the House who has listened" to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, that unless the two sides of the House come to some agreement as to the length of time to be occupied in these discussions, an agreement, which, of course, in view of the pressure of other business upon us, would not involve a very large expenditure of Parliamentary time, I cannot go on with them, and as no suggestion has reached me that any such agreement is likely to be considered, as, indeed, it was openly derided by the hon. gentleman (Mr. J. Redmond), who has put the question to me, I propose to found my course upon the same precedent as you, Mr. Speaker, have founded your ruling; and, as Mr. Disraeli in 1867 withdrew his resolutions and proceeded with his Bill, I mean to withdraw my resolution and proceed with my Bill."

Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman: "Does the right hon. gentleman mean a Bill during the present Session?"

Mr. Balfour: "Oh, no."—Times, July 18th, 1905.

WHAT MR. BALFOUR WILL DO.—Speaking at the Foreign Office to a meeting of the Party, Mr. Balfour detailed the steps he intended to take to further his proposals.

According to the official report :-

"In his opening statement, Mr. Balfour explained the circumstances which had led to the withdrawal of the redistribution resolution. A Bill would be brought in early next Session; and, following former precedents, a committee or Commission would be appointed in the autumn to consider and report upon the proposals of the Government. On the whole, Mr. Balfour saw no disadvantage in the situation which had arisen through the Speaker's decision. In answer to questions, the Prime Minister said that such a Commission or committee would not be bound hard and fast by the terms of the Government resolution, but that the starting point of their inquiry would be founded on the general principles of the resolution."—Times, July 19th, 1905.

In reply to various questions addressed to him in the House of Commons, Mr. Balfour said that investigation by a committee or Commission would not be deferred until next Session; he would not be disposed to limit the labours of this body if he thought that by extending their scope information would be obtained useful to the House when the Bill was introduced.

In reply to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, who had asked whether there was any precedent for a boundary commission, or, anything in the nature of a boundary commission, being appointed without the authority of Parliament, except in a case where there was an agreement in the House of Commons on the subject, Mr. Balfour said that he was not aware of any precedent to the contrary.

In the case, for example, of the first Reform Bill of 1831, Lord Russell, or the Government of the day, did ask to put the names of the Commissioners in that Bill, and se far asked for Parliamentary powers. But the Bill was thrown out in the Lords, and Lord Russell proceeded to appoint the Commissioners without the authority of Parliament.

Mr. Gladstone's investigations in 1866, under Lord Russell's Government, were carried on without Parliamentary authority. In 1867 Mr. Disraeli brought in resolutions which did ask for House of Commons authority, but he withdrew his resolutions, and such investigations as he desired to carry out were carried out without the mandate of Parliament.

In 1884 Mr. Gladstone, before the concordat, appointed what he called a committee to look into these questions of redistribution. There was then a concordat, and then Parliament was summoned together, and then he announced to Parliament, in introducing his Redistribution Act of 1884, which ultimately became law, that the commission had been some time at work and had made important advances in their labours.

When a Bill was introduced dealing with redistribution, it would be very desirable that the House should have all the information at the disposal of the Government; but that the House would be coerced by that information to carry out the recommendations of the commission, as Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman suggested, was wholly inconsistent with tradition.

As to whether the Bill of next Session would be substantially on the same lines as the resolution, and whether the limit of 18,500 was to be maintained, Mr. Balfour said that that must, of course, in part depend upon the information derived between now and the introduction of the Bill next Session. Any Committee appointed would start with a general knowledge of the views by which the Government reached their proposals. But it would be impossible to say whether those views would be changed in the course of investigation by the committee.

When asked why the redistribution resolution should have been introduced at all, Mr. Balfour said it would have been extremely inconvenient both to the House and the country if the general lines on which the Government based their policy had not been made public and the subject of general criticism.

THE COMMITTEE.—Later, Mr. Balfour said :-

"We propose to follow very closely the example set up by Mr. Gladstone in 1884. Mr. Gladstone, as the House knows, appointed a committee in the early days of the recess. That committee carried on investigations and made a confidential report to the Government. They were then, with the addition of one or two members, turned into a Commission. The Commission held public inquiries, and the result of those investigations, both public and private, both confidential and not confidential, were embodied in a Bill and subsequently passed into law."—Times, August 9th, 1905.

The resolutions introduced during July, 1905, are to form the basis of any inquiry which the committee make. It does not follow that the Government may not amend the resolutions as the result of recommendations on the part of the committee.

On September 9th, 1905, the Local Government Board made the following announcement:—

"Mr. Gerald Balfour has appointed Colonel Duncan Alexander Johnston, C.B., R.E., late Director-General of the Ordnance Survey Department, Mr. Alexander Glen, K.C., and Mr. Howel Thomas, of the Local Government Board, as a Committee to obtain information for the guidance of the Government in framing a scheme for the redistribution of seats at Parliamentary elections.

"The offices of the Committee are at 49 and 50, Parliament Street, S.W., and Mr.

Charles Knight is their Secretary."

THE MEMORANDUM SUMMARISED.—There are eight general rules upon which the scheme of redistribution is based. The rules, with the various results, are as follows:—

Number of Members.—(1) The number of Members of the House of Commons shall not be materially altered.

The proposed changes do not affect the total number of Members in the House. The effect of the various changes is as follows:—

GAINS.

England 17 seats.

Wales 1 seat.

Sootland 4 seats.

SEATS GAINING ADDITIONAL MEMBERS.—(3) A County or Borough with a population exceeding 65,000 multiplied by the number of its Members shall have an additional Member for every complete 65,000 of the excess.

Total gain

The following illustrate this rule:— Portsmouth, with 188,923 inhabitants, at present returns two Members:—

 $65,000 \times 2 = 130,000$.

Wa

Portsmouth, therefore, has an excess of 58,923 over 65,000 multiplied by the number of its present representatives; but, as 58,923 falls short of a complete 65,000 it is not entitled under the Scheme to an additional Member.

Surrey, with 519,766 inhabitants, at present returns six Members.

 $65,000 \times 6 = 390,000$.

519,766 - 390,000 = 129,766.

Surrey, therefore, has an excess of 129,766 inhabitants over 65,000 multiplied by the present number of its representatives. This excess covers one complete 65,000, and therefore Surrey is entitled to one additional Member. If the excess had amounted to 130,000 (that is, 65,000 x 2), Surrey would have been entitled to two additional CONSTITUENCIES LOSING PART REPRESENTATION.—(6) A County or Borough with more than two Members and a population of less than 65,000 multiplied by the number of its Members shall have one less Member for every complete 65,000 of the deficiency.

The following examples illustrate this rule:-

The County of Oxford, with a population of 137,124, at present returns three Members. $65,000 \times 3 = 195,000$.

195,000 - 137,124 = 57,876.

Oxfordshire, therefore, has a deficiency of 57,876 inhabitants, as compared with-65,000 multiplied by the number of its present Members. But as this deficiency falls short of a complete 65,000, Oxfordshire does not lose a Member, and its representation remains unchanged.

Devonshire, with a population of 415,085, at present returns eight Members. $65,000 \times 8 = 520,000$.

520,000 - 415,085 = 104,915.

Devonshire, therefore, has a deficiency of 104,915 inhabitants, compared with 65,000 multiplied by the number of its Members. This deficiency covers one complete 65,000, and accordingly Devonshire loses one representative.

A Welcome Reform.—(7) The County and the Borough shall, as far as practicable, be made co-extensive with the Administrative County and the Municipal Borough respectively, but the boundaries of a Borough shall not be curtailed except when the population affected is inconsiderable.

'In connection with this rule, the Memorandum draws attention to the fact that, since the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, numerous alterations have been made in the boundaries of Counties by the operation of the Local Government Acts. The Local Government Act, 1888, provided generally that in England and Wales the Administrative County, under a County Council, should coincide with the Parliamentary County, subject to this, that if a Municipal Borough or other Urban District was in more than one County, it should be deemed to be within that County which contained the largest portion of the population according to the Census of 1881. Some alterations have also been made in Administrative Counties since the Act of 1888 passed. None of the alterations mentioned have taken effect for Parliamentary purposes. Further, the boundaries of many Municipal Boroughs have been extended, with the result that in a good many instances the area of the Parliamentary Borough. is now less than that of the corresponding Municipal Borough.

Alterations of a similar character have been made in Scotland and Ireland.

It is proposed that a simplification of electoral areas should be effected by assimilating, as far as practicable, the boundaries of Parliamentary Counties and Administrative-Counties, and making the latter and better known area the County for Parliamentary purposes, and also by enlarging the area of the Parliamentary Borough where necessary so as to comprise the entire area of the extended Municipal Borough.

LONDON SEATS.—(8) In London each Metropolitan Borough shall be treated as if it were a Borough returning the number of Members returned by the present Boroughs or Divisions to which it most nearly corresponds.

As regards London the Memorandum says that the case is so peculiar that it seemed best to deal with it by a separate rule. The effect of this rule will be that the Metropolitan Boroughs will be Parliamentary Boroughs also, each with its appropriate number of representatives computed as if it were a pre-existing constituency.

As a result the following seats are gained —

REPRESENTATION ON A POPULATION BASIS.—Mr. Gerald Balfour, dealing with population as the measure of representation, points out that prior to 1832, population as a determining element in representation was practically ignored.

The Acts of 1832 and 1868 did much to remove the gross anomalies of the system ; but they did not follow any rule or method capable of exact expression.

The Act of 1885 proceeded on a more or less definite numerical plan. The lineson which this plan was framed were never formulated, either in a resolution or in a They have to be collected from statements made in Parliament while the subject was under discussion. The average population to each Member, calculated on the Census of 1881, and allowing for the additional twelve seats created by the Act itself,

This standard was not strictly adhered to. Towns and districts possessing a population between 15,000 and 50,000 were allowed one Member only. A population between 50,000 and 165,000 became entitled to two Members. A population of over-165,000 became entitled to three Members. The further addition of population required to give a claim to an additional Member or Members beyond three appears to have ranged somewhat indefinitely between 50,000 and 60,000.

The resemblance between this scheme and the present one is obvious. and standard figures of population play the same part in both schemes; but to meet the increase of population that has taken place in the interval, the standard figurehas been raised to 65,000, and the minimum in the same ratio to 18,500. figure justifying the retention of two Members has been fixed at 75,000 instead of 50,000. In this case there has been a distinct departure from the 1885 model; but even a minimum of 75,000 cannot be regarded as otherwise than favourable to counties and boroughs now returning two Members.

As regards constituencies returning more than three Members, the two schemes differ principally in the more or less rigid application of a definite standard of population in each case. Some latitude seems to have been allowed in this respect in 1885, whereas the present scheme is absolutely precise.

The City of London is the only exception, and it received exceptional treatment under the scheme of 1885 also.

REDISTRIBUTION—continued.

EFFECT OF THE SCHEME.—The anomalies and inequalities which the scheme will correct or mitigate are those which have arisen since 1885, in consequence of the increase or movement of population.

How rapidly inequalities have grown since 1885 is shown by the subjoined tables, which give particulars of the six largest and the six smallest single-membered constituencies, (a) after Redistribution in 1885, (b) at the present time, (c) as they will be under the proposed scheme.

Rhondda 113,735	Rutland 19,709
Hammersmith 112,239	Salisbury 20,185

From these tables it is calculated that the "ratio of greatest disparity" (the difference between the value of a vote in the largest of these constituencies and the value of a vote in the smallest) which was 5.8 to 1 immediately after redistribution in 1885 has now risen to no less than 16.5 to 1, and would be again reduced under the present proposals to 6.8, very nearly the 1885 figure. The ratio of mean disparity between the mean of the six largest constituencies and the six smallest which was 5.5 immediately after redistribution in 1885 is now 11.9, and would be reduced under the present proposals to 6.

It may be of interest to note that as between the different parts of the United Kingdom, if representation was in strict proportion to population, England and Wales would return 518 Members, Scotland 71, and Ireland 71, exclusive in each case of the Universities; in other words England and Wales would gain 28 seats and Scotland 1 seat, while Ireland would lose 30 seats. Under the proposed scheme the actual gain to England and Wales is 18, and to Scotland 4, Ireland losing 22.

THE TWO PRINCIPLES IN VIEW.—The scheme keeps two principles in view.

It seeks to lay down numerically definite rules for adjusting representation to population, which can be uniformly applied to Counties and Boroughs alike throughout the United Kingdom, and at the same time to leave sufficient room for other considerations connected with history and prescription and the character of the communities represented, which have always powerfully influenced our constitutional system.

It is evident that within limits numerical inequalities are a necessary incident of any scheme of local representation in which these two principles are recognised.

Boundary Commissioners.—As regards the Commissioners proposed to be appointed in pursuance of the Resolution, the memorandum says that they are not empowered to report in favour of changes in the boundaries of Counties or Boroughs except in accordance with the rules. For instance, they would not, as the Rules stand, be authorized to recommend that the boundaries of a Borough should be extended so as to include a part of a division of a County not already included within the numicipal area. Their principal function would be to report on the readjustment of divisions within the limits of a County or Borough where such readjustment is rendered mecessary or desirable in consequence either of a change in the number of its Members or of an important increment of population in one of its divisions as compared with another.

THE TRANSVAAL CONSTITUTION.

Mr. Lyttelton, in his despatch enclosing the text of the Transvaal Constitution (Cd. 2,400), first reviews at length the circumstances which influenced the Government in their decision.

He points out that it was never the intention of the Government that the new Colonies should be for any length of time governed as Crown Colonies. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking in the House of Commons on the 7th December, 1900, said :-

"I believe we can promise that there shall be throughout South Africa equal laws, equal liberty—not, indeed, political independence. In the first instance, that must be more restricted in these two Colonies than it is in the Colonies of the Cape and Natal, but a liberty and constitution, leading ultimately to self-government which we all desire to see established as soon as possible."—Parliamentary Debates, Vol. 88, p. 262.

THE SUCCESSIVE STEPS.—The terms of Peace contained an article promising that:—
"Military administration in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony will, at the earliest possible date, be succeeded by civil government, and, as soon as circumstances permit, representative institutions leading up to self-government will be introduced."

The intentions of the Government were more precisely stated by Mr. Chamberlain. in the House of Commons on the 29th July, 1902, when he said, in speaking of Crown Colony government:—

"That is the first step. But we have always, from the very first, declared that that was only the first step, that we should go on gradually, and that the next advance would be to add to the official element a non-official element, which would be, in the first instance, a nominated non-official element. Then we should go on from that probably to substitute for the nominative element an elective element, and after that nothing would separate us but the circumstances of the time, from that full selfgovernment, which is, and always has been, our ultimate goal."-Parliamentary Debates, Vol. 112, p. 40.

STEPS ALREADY TAKEN.—Mr. Lyttelton points out that considerable progress towards self-government has already been made:-

After the abolition of martial law, a nominated Legislative Council containing a minority of non-officials was established in each Colony. In municipal affairs great advances had been made. Elective municipalities or local boards have been established in all the towns and larger villages of the Transvaal, while in the Orange River Colony, where similar institutions existed before the war, they have been in full operation since its conclusion. In all their domestic affairs the urban centres of the new Colonies are completely self-governing communities. The extension of elective boards to rural districts in the Transvaal has, it is understood, only been suspended because a deputation of the Farmers' Congress expressed apprehensions that the system might prove too expensive."—Cd. 2,400, p. 2.

SELF-GOVERNMENT NOT ADVISABLE YET.—On the 21st July, 1904, it was announced in the House of Commons that the Government had decided to give elective representative institutions to the Transvaal, and to substitute an elective element for the present nominated element in the Legislature.

Full self-government, Mr. Lyttelton points out, implies Party Government; that is, the control both of administration and legislation by the political leaders of the Party which holds a majority in the Legislature. The Government do not think that the Transvaal would find at the present time that the system of Party Government would be beneficial:-

"Parties in the Transvaal must for some time yet mainly coincide with the line of races, and Party Government would most probably mean government by one race or the other. It will become more practicable when the two races have, with equal rights of citizenship, lived and acted somewhat longer together, and when bitter memories have become softened by the healing effect of time."—Cd. 2,400, p. 2.

OTHER COLONIES.—Other Colonies have passed through representative government to full self-government. This was the history of Upper and Lower Canada before the union of 1840, and for some time after it; of the Australian Colonies and New Zealand; of Cape Colony and Natal.

With regard to Canada, the disorders, which preceded Lord Durham's mission nd the subsequent grant of self-government to that country, could not compare in any way with a wa: like that of 1899 to 1902.

What is Done.—The Government, therefore, do not think that the immediate grant of full self-government is practicable. Nor do they think that the substitution of the existing nominated non-official minority in the Legislative Council by an elected minority would be entirely satisfactory, especially as they are anxious to give the utmost liberty compatible with safety and with the stability of the Administration.

They think that the Transvaal should have such an elective majority as will give them an effective control of legislation.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.—The system, therefore, which they have decided to adopt, is as follows:-

A Legislative Assembly consisting of—

(1) The Lieutenant Governor.

(2) Six to nine official members.

(3) Thirty to thirty-five elected members.

The official members will be persons holding office and members of the Executive Council as may be appointed. They will hold office during the King's pleasure.

THE FRANCHISE.—The voters are every white male British subject over the age of 21 who is qualified as follows:-

(1) Enrolled on the latest list of Burghers of the South African Republic and entitled to vote for members of the First Volksraad.

(2) Has occupied for not less than six months before the date of registration, premises and land to the value of £100, or of the annual value of £10.

(3) Is in receipt during a period of not less than six months of a salary or wages of £100 a year, bona fide, earned within the Colony.

The following persons are not qualified:

(1) Those convicted since 31st May, 1902, of treason, or at any time of murder, unless they have received a free pardon.

(2) Convicted within three years of registration date of an offence and imprisoned without the option of a fine, unless they have received a free pardon.

(3) In receipt of relief from public funds; but relief by way of repatriation or treatment in a hospital, maintained wholly or partly out of public funds, does not disqualify.

ELECTORAL DISTRICTS.—The Lieutenant Governor, when the final list of voters is made, is to appoint three Boundary Commissioners, who will map out not less than 30 nor more than 35 districts, each district to return one member.

The Commissioners are to give due consideration to:—
(1) Existing boundaries of local electoral and other districts.

(2) Community and diversity of interest.

(3) Means of communication.

(4) Physical features.

In dividing the number of voters by the number of districts, the Commissioners, having regard to the consideration set out, may adopt a margin of allowance of not more than 5 per cent. either way.

REGISTRATION.—There is to be a biennial registration of voters, to be commenced not later than the 31st March.

After every alternate registration Commissioners may be appointed to re-divide the Colony into election districts as may be necessary.

Powers of Assembly.—The Lieutenant Governor shall preside at all meetings of the Legislative Assembly, unless prevented by illness or grave cause. In his absence, such member as he may appoint, or if no one has been appointed, the senior member of the Executive Council shall preside.

The Legislative Assembly are to make the laws required, subject to the assent of the Governor, who may reserve it for the signification of the King's pleasure, or may amend it. Amendments will be sent to the Assembly for their consideration.

A law may be disallowed by the King within two years after the official copies have been received, even if assented to by the Governor.

To the Governor is reserved the right of recommending alterations in the revenue. The Lieutenant Governor may prorogue or dissolve the Assembly by Proclamation whenever he thinks fit. The Assembly in any case is to be dissolved every four years. Debates are to be conducted in English. But, by permission of the President, any member may speak in Dutch.

Every member must take the oath of allegiance.

THE CIVIL LIST.—The Civil List, which includes £6,000 for the Lieutenant Governor's salary, £22,000 for the salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court, and £20,000 for persons holding office under the Government of the Colony, who are or may be members of the Executive Council, in addition to any sums payable out of the revenues of the Colony to the Inter-colonial Council, is reserved in accordance with the practice in similar constitutions.

THE EX-BURGHERS.—Upon these Letters Patent, of which the above is an outline, Mr. Lyttelton makes certain observations.

First, as regards the franchise, he points out that the inclusion without proper qualifications, of ex-burghers, whose names were in the voting lists under the South African Republic, will confirm in the electoral privileges a class which the misfortunes of war have, it is hoped, only temporarily impoverished.

THE NATIVES.—The Government have been unable, having regard to the terms of peace signed in 1902, to make provision for the representation of coloured subjects. As a protection, however, for the interests of those sections of the population, which are not directly represented in the Legislature, the Governor will, as now, be required by his instructions to reserve any Bill, whereby persons not of European birth or descent may be subjected to any disability or restriction to which persons of European birth are not also subjected.

THE NUMBERS OF MEMBERS.—With regard to the numbers of the Assembly, Mr. Lyttelton states that a smaller number of elected members would be insufficient to ensure a Legislature thoroughly representative of the various interests of the country, whilst a larger number would seem to involve for the present too great a demand upon the community, especially in view of the fact that the system of automatic redistribution which has been adopted will inevitably lead to a considerable increase in the number. ्रत्ते । एतः । । वे प्रद्या वे स्वरात्त्र स्व भाषान्त्री । स्वीती 🚮 🖼 🖫

THE OLD CONSTITUENCIES.—The very serious inequalities between the old constituencies made it impossible to preserve them. For instance, at one end of the scale is Barberton, with a white population of 2,642, of whom 1,143 are adult males; at the other end Standerton, with a white population of 11,192, of whom 3,267 are adult males. The whole policy of the late South African Republic was in the direction of giving altogether disproportionate power to the country population, of which a striking proof is afforded by the disfranchisement of towns in 1886. Even in the last year of the Republic only one representative was allotted to Johannesburg, with a population at that time of 76,500, while the districts of Rustenburg and Lydenburg, with populations of 13,000 and 3,500 respectively, each possessed two.

Population v. Electors.—The question whether the electoral districts should be framed on the basis of the number of voters or on the basis of population has also been carefully considered.

It was found that in some regions the adult male population was much larger in proportion to the rest of the population than in others.

The reason for this is that in the rural districts early marriages and large families are the rule, while in the rapidly increasing industrial and urban districts there are at present a great number of young unmarried men.

It was found therefore that if the whole population was taken as a basis, a vote in one district would be out of all proportion to a vote in another. Moreover, if population were taken as a basis, redistribution must be governed by census, which would delay automatic redistribution to every ten years.

THE WAR CONTRIBUTION.—The final part of Mr. Lyttelton's despatch deals with the £30,000,000 contribution of the Transvaal towards the cost of the war.

After pointing out that it would be competent to the Government to ask the existing Legislative Council to pass the necessary legislation for the purpose of raising a war contribution loan, and that the issue of the first instalment of £10,000,000 might then be made as soon as the financial position of the Colony enabled it to meet the charges of the additional debt, Mr. Lyttelton goes on to say that the Government are anxious to avoid any appearance of imposing or exacting this contribution by compulsion; therefore, they have decided not to press forward the necessary legislation in the Legislative Council which is so shortly to expire, and have deliberately left the matter to the new Representative Assembly, in the assured belief that they will do what is right and just.

ORANGE RIVER COLONY.—With regard to the Orange River Colony, Mr. Lyttelton says that the grant of representative government is a less urgent one, and that it appears to the Government that there will be advantage in allowing a short period to intervene before elective representative institutions are granted to the last-named Colony, because this will permit the Government to observe the experiment, and, if need be, to profit by the experience so gained.

THE FUTURE.—The Government recognise that the grant to the Transvaal may be regarded by some as a step not unattended by risk. But they trust that those of British origin in the country will do their best to promote the welfare of the country and the smooth working of its institutions.

From the Dutch, the despatch concludes:-

"As from a people of practical genius, who have learned by long experience tomake the best of circumstances, His Majesty's Government expect co-operation in the task of making their race, no longer in isolated independence, a strong pillar in the fabric of a world-wide Empire. That this should be the result, and that a complete reconciliation between men of two great and kindred races should, underthe leading of Divine Providence, speedily come to pass, is the ardent desire of His Majesty the King and of His Majesty's Government."—Cd. 2,400, p. 6.

THE RADICAL ATTITUDE.—The debate in the House of Commons on July 27th, on the Transvaal Constitution (see Parliamentary Summary, p. 266), was remarkable for the fact that the Radicals determined to treat the matter in a purely party spirit.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman announced that he took "exactly the opposite view" from granting representative government—"a restricted constitution" he called it—and went on to say that there was-

"Only one way to gain the confidence of the population of the Transvaal, Briton and Boer, and that is to take the people of the country with you and to show that you trust them in all respects."—The Times, July 28th.

This was naturally taken to mean that he was in favour of granting responsible government at once. But Sir Henry denied that his words bore such construction, and said that he did not say "it should be done immediately." When it was suggested that he was, therefore, against immediate self-government, he shook his head.

Such action may be the embodiment of all Radical sagacity. But nevertheless it obscures his opinion. The opinion of the Radical press, however, is known—it is to make the working of the new constitution as difficult as possible by playing the same old game that years ago resulted in Majuba—the game of stirring up discontent among the Boers by promises of fulfilling every desire should Radicals come into power. The following elegant extracts are culled from the Daily News:-

"We cannot congratulate the Government on the instrument they have put into the hands of the inhabitants of the Transvaal."

This botched and clouted constitution.

"This half-way house with its legend 'Put not your confidence in the people' over the door.

That such plans can bring neither peace nor prosperity to the Transvaal goes without saying; they are humiliating to a free country, and one of the first duties of a Liberal Government will be to supersede them by a measure of complete self-government."—Daily News, July 28th.

These extracts show clearly that if the new constitution succeeds in the Transvaal, it will not be the fault of the Radical press. The lesson of Majuba preceded by Radical promises lightly thrust aside when they were of no further help, does not deter the Radicals from a similar folly.

THE EDUCATION QUESTION.

The Radical Nonconformists, regardless of the children's welfare, are still fighting the Education Act. It should be particularly noticed that the Conservatives are being assailed by the Nonconformists as members of their Free Churches, and not as members of the Radical party. Indeed, official Radicalism is nowhere in the controversy. The Free Church Councils, the chapels and their pastors have eclipsed the orthodox party attitude. Every pulpit and every chapel is for the time being turned into a political organization working against Mr. Balfour.

THE "FREE CHURCH" DEMANDS .- It is interesting to note the attitude of the orthodox Radical party towards this political agitation of the Free Churches. We have it on the authority of Dr. Clifford that "the Liberal party cares nothing for Passive Resistance." (Daily News, July 25th, 1904.) Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman has, we believe, carefully abstained from praising or blaming the zeal of the "martyrs." And at the same time it should be noticed that he and his principal followers have never given more than a vague indication of what amendments they would introduce into the Education Act.

What the official Radical programme is with respect to the amendment of the Education Act is not so certain as the programme of the Free Church party. They have laid down their demands with considerable clearness.

The "Free Church" demands are contained in four questions, which "have been put to all candidates, whether they were Liberal, Conservative, or Labour candi-

These questions are:—

Are you in favour of immediate legislation in order to secure—

(1) Complete popular control for the elected representatives of the people over all schools maintained by the State?

(2) The abolition of sectarian tests for all teachers employed in such schools?

(3) The omission of sectarian teaching from the public curriculum of Statesupported schools?

(4) The establishment of a system of secondary education and of colleges for the training of teachers which shall be unsectarian and under popular control?"*

Although the Free Church Council call these questions "four plain questions," there is considerably more in them than at first sight appears. This will be seen when they are examined in some detail.

"COMPLETE POPULAR CONTROL."—The first question is "Complete popular control for the elected representatives of the people over all schools maintained by the State?"

This question requires considerable examination. In the first place, what is meant by "complete popular control?" We shall have to go to some of the Free Church leaders' writings for a definition. Mr. George White, M.P., President of the Baptist Union 1903-4, defines it as the "control of the people as against the control of the priest."* By this we see that the question is aimed against the voluntary schools, which the Free Church allege are under the "control of the priest." This is made clearer by Mr. White, who says that "full powers" (or "complete popular control") "must be extended to the whole of the schools maintained by the public, and include possession or control of all the school buildings."† The Free Church therefore intend to get "possession or control" of the voluntary schools. How to do it? Mr. White says "by rent or purchase." The Free Church Council say likewise, but with this reservation, "Due regard being had to the existing rights of the public in such buildings." We shall refer to this later.

POINTS FOR EXAMINATION.—Before we sum up, three points require further examination. They are:—

(a) What do the Free Church mean by "control of the people"?

(b) What position do the "priests" hold with regard to the "control" of the voluntary schools?

(c) What is to be the cost of fairly renting or purchasing the voluntary schools?

What is "Control of the People"?—"Control of the people" is control by the local authority elected by the people. In non-provided voluntary schools the local authority have complete control over:—

(1) Secular education.

(2) Appointment and dismissal of teachers on educational grounds.

(3) Right to inspect schools.

The only rights the managers have not given up are:—

(1) Right to give religious instruction in accordance with the trust deed.

(2) Appointment and dismissal of head teachers on religious grounds.

Appointment of assistant teachers and pupil teachers may be made (and are made) without reference to religious belief.

So we see this, that the Radical Nonconformist clamour for "control of the people" narrows down to a cry for the destruction of religious instruction in non-provided schools.

But what reason is there to suppose "that control of the people" is really represented by the abolition of distinctive religious instruction. "The people" are the whole body of the people—not merely the Radical Nonconformists. Members of the denominations who have built and for years subscribed to the maintenance of the voluntary schools—Church of England, Catholic, and Wesleyan—are also "of the people." They pay rates towards local education expenditure, and by doing so they have a right to say what policy shall be followed. The undenominational teaching of the provided (Board) schools satisfies the Radical Nonconformist, but it does not satisfy Churchmen, Catholics or Wesleyans. And as they are citizens, so they have a right to say what shall be taught to their children. They recognise that the parents should decide. For years they have paid their rates to support the Board Schools, although they did not approve of the absence of distinctive religious teaching in those schools, but they knew that certain parents did approve and they recognised toleration.

schools, but they knew that certain parents did approve and they recognised toleration.

We see then that the claim for "control of the people" is purely a desire to force on the children religious teaching of which the parents disapprove.

THE "PRIESTS."—The next point is: What position do the "priests" hold with regard to the non-provided (Voluntary) schools. Mr. George White, as we have pointed out, defines "complete popular control" as the "control of the people as against the control of the 'priests." We are to assume from that that these non-provided schools are under the "control of the priest." Whereas the truth is that except as regards religious instruction and the appointment and dismissal of head teachers on religious grounds, the control is in the hands of the local authority (i.e., "the people"). The control of religious instruction and the appointment and dismissal of head teachers is in the hands of a body of managers usually six in number, who have also to carry out the orders of the local authority. Of these six managers, two are appointed by the local authority and four are foundation managers. Of these four managers only one can be a "priest." This dreadful bogey of "the control of the priest" reduces itself on examination to one solitary clergyman as a member of a body with very limited powers! So much for Radical imagination.

"Renting of Purchasing."—The third question is this—what is to be the cost of fairly renting or purchasing the voluntary schools. We have reason to doubt whether it would be done fairly. The cost of such a policy as we shall show would be high and the Radical Nonconformists would have the ratepayers as a body in arms against them. So the Free Church Council save their face by adding:—

"Due regard being had to the existing rights of the public in such buildings."*
This apologia for robbery is further explained by Mr. George White, M.P., who says:—

"A very large number of the 14,000 schools affected are not private property, but held in trust for educational purposes, and would be used for these purposes under public management."†

Apart from this excuse for sheer destruction let us see what the policy of renting: or purchasing the voluntary schools would come to. The cost of purchasing the schools has been variously estimated at sums varying from £20,000,000 to £40,000,000. Probably £30,000,000 is nearer the mark; the cost of renting them would be £700,000 per year.

We see then that any fair scheme for taking over the voluntary schools would involve saddling the ratepayers with a debt of £30,000,000, or an annual charge of £700,000.

To such an extent are the Radical Nonconformists ready to burden the ratepayers in order to gratify their hatred of religious education.

ABOLITION OF TESTS.—The other heads of the Free Church Council's demands will not require so long an examination, as they are all more or less dependent upon the conclusions arrived at in the first demand. For instance, the second request is for—

(2) The abolition of sectarian tests for all teachers employed in such schools

(i.e., Schools maintained by the State).

Of course if the first demand ("complete popular control") be obtained, this naturally follows. The argument against it is that adopted against the previous demand—that the Radical Nonconformists have no right to force their own peculiar views on the whole nation. Remember head teachers and pupil teachers in provided (Board) schools are appointed without any regard whatever to their religious convictions. So also may be teachers and pupil teachers in non-provided (Voluntary) schools. As a matter of fact the only teachers from whom any religious qualification is required are the head teachers in non-provided (Voluntary) schools. Now it is manifestly impossible so long as definite religious instruction forms part of our educational syllabus to permit head teachers to be of a different religious belief to that of their scholars. For example, how could a Baptist teach Catholic doctrines in a Catholic school; a Catholic in a Wesleyan; or an agnostic in a Church of England school?

Two Errors Corrected.—In this connection it is also alleged by the opponents of the $\operatorname{Act}:$

(1) That these head teachers are appointed "because of their special religious beliefs rather than educational fitness.";

(2) That the Act "shuts out the sons and daughters of Free Churchmen from the best educational posts on the sole ground of their religious convictions." §

Neither of these statements are true. To the first the answer is that a head teacher's educational qualifications have to meet with the spp oval of the local authority who have not to consider for a moment what his religious qualifications may be. To the second the answer is that the average accommodation in council schools is 510 scholars; in voluntary schools 230 scholars.

The larger the school the larger the salary is a truism which no one will dispute. It follows therefore that the larger salaries and the best educational posts are in the council schools. But in the council schools "religious convictions" play no part in the appointment of teachers. Therefore the statement (2) is not true.

Abolishing Religious Traching.—(3) The omission of sectarian teaching from the public curriculum of State supported schools.

It is curious to note that this policy of repression is advocated by upholders of "liberty of conscience" and "freedom." We may well ask what peculiar right they have to dictate to parents what religion their children shall or shall not be taught. It is easy for Dr. Clifford and his Radical Nonconformist associates to talk of omitting definite religious instruction, but what we have to ask is what teaching are they prepared to put in its place. Here divisions in the party begin to be seen. There are apparently two schemes (we are of course speaking of religious instruction during school hours).

(1) Undenominational Bible teaching.

(2) Secular instruction purely and simply.

The first scheme—Undenominational Bible teaching—is to be much after that system adopted by the late London School Board. It is believed to have the support of the majority of Nonconformists. The Radical member for the Barkston Ash Division of Yorkshire, voiced this view in a phrase "The Bible in the schools and the priest outside."

The extremists, such as Dr. Clifford and the British Weekly,* will have none of it however.

Their scheme is one of-

(2) Secular instruction, purely and simply.

The British Weekly says :-

"The enly solution . . . is that secular education should be in charge of the State, and religious education of the churches."-Sept. 28th, 1905.

Dr. Clifford's statement is even plainer. He says :-

"The Labour Party has voted recently in overwhelming numbers for a policy which entirely excludes the churches as churches and the clergy and ministers as The Free Churches are more and more clergy and ministers from State education. convinced that only along this path can we find justice for all, efficiency for education, and peace for the churches and the nation. We are going forward to a purely civic method, and the sooner we reach the goal the better.—Times, Sept. 29th, 1905.

It is a strange thing that a minister of the Gospel should express a desire to see the teaching of God's word publicly banished from the schools. It may be that those who are of his way of thinking count upon the ability to teach the children religion at other times, after school hours or in Sunday school. But that is a delusion which they should be rid of as soon as possible.

There can be no doubt as to the attitude of the Conservative Party on this question—they will resist to the uttermost any of these attempts to destroy religious instruction and to dictate to Churchmen, Catholics and Wesleyans what instruction their children shall or shall not receive.

THE LAST DEMAND.—The last demand of the Free Churches is :-

(4) The establishment of a system of secondary education, and of colleges for the training of teachers which shall be unsectarian and under popular control.

It is strange to find this a demand by the Free Church as it shows a remarkable ignorance on the part of the compilers. Can it be that they have allowed the religious teaching agitation to monopolise their minds to the exclusion of anything else? This demand has already been met by the Act. It provides-

(1) That the local education authority must consider the educational needs of their area, and take steps to supply or aid the supply of higher education including the training of teachers.

(2) That in all secondary schools and colleges for the training of teachers provided by the local education authority there shall be no distinct religious denominational teaching.

But apparently Dr. Clifford and his followers will not be satisfied until they have destroyed the religion in the Church of England and other non-provided training colleges, just as they want to wipe it out of the non-provided (Voluntary) schools.

These are the demands of the Radical Nonconformists. Their ultimate goal is the Disestablishment of the Church of England. By the destruction of religious education they see they will be striking a blow at the Church. That the Education Act is acknowledged by every educationist to be of immense value to the children's welfare is nothing to them.

 ²⁸th September, 1905.

WHAT THE ACT DOES FOR EDUCATION.—It may be useful to put brisfly what the Act does towards providing the children with good education:—

- (1) It sets up one local body to control every kind of education—elementary, secondary and technical—there is no more overlapping; no quarrels between rival bodies as there were before.
- (2) It provides that the best teaching, the best books, and the best trained teachers shall be used in every school, and gives every child an equal chance.
- (3) It connects elementary education with technical and secondary, so that clever children can pass easily from one grade to another, by scholarships, if the parents are poor, to a University.
- if the parents are poor, to a University.

 (4) It makes every local body look after the training of its teachers, and by doing so takes care that the children are well taught.

This in a few words, is what the Education Act does for the children's education and their weifare in after-years.

OUR NEW AGREEMENT WITH JAPAN.

Our new Agreement with Japan was signed at London on 12th August, 1905.*
Lord Lansdowne in his despatch to our Ambassador at St. Petersburg says that:—

"It would have been made public immediately, but for the fact that negotiations had at that time already commenced between Russia and Japan, and that the publication of such a document whilst those negotiations were still in progress would obviously have been improper and inopportune."

The new Agreement is "in substitution" for that of 30th January, 1902. That Agreement, it will be remembered, was in the ordinary course of events to remain in force for five years. But it might be terminated by twelve months' notice on either side, and if either party were at war when the five years expired or the notice terminated, the treaty was to remain in force until peace was concluded.

THE OBJECTS OF THE AGREEMENT.—The three objects of the new Agreement are set out in the preamble. They are:—

- (a) The consolidation and maintenance of the general peace in the regions of Eastern Asia and of India.
- (b) The preservation of the common interests of all Powers in China by insuring the independence and integrity of the Chinese Empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China.
- (c) The maintenance of the territorial rights of the High Contracting Parties in the regions of Eastern Asia and of India, and the defence of their special interests in the said region.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.—The Articles of the Agreement are as follows:—

Article I.—It is agreed that whenever, in the opinion of either Great Britain or Japan, any of the rights and interests referred to in the preamble of this Agreement are in jeopardy, the two Governments will communicate with one another fully and frankly, and will consider in common the measures which should be taken to safeguard those menaced rights or interests.

Article II.—If by reason of unprovoked attack or aggressive action, wherever arising, on the part of any other Power or Powers, either Contracting Party should be involved in war in defence of its territorial rights or special interests mentioned in the preamble of this Agreement, the other Contracting Party will at once come to the assistance of its ally, and will conduct the war in common, and make peace in mutual agreement with it.

Article III.—Japan possessing paramount political, military, and economic interests in Corea, Great Britain recognises the right of Japan to take such measures of guidance, control, and protection in Corea as she may deem proper and necessary to safeguard and advance those interests, provided always that such measures are not contrary to the principal of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations.

Article IV.—Great Britain having a special interest in all that concerns the security of the Indian frontier, Japan recognises her right to take such measures in the proximity of that frontier as she may find necessary for safeguarding her Indian possessions.

Article V.—The High Contracting Parties agree that neither of them will, without consulting the other, enter into separate arrangements with another Power to the prejudice of the objects described in the preamble of this Agreement.

Article VI.—As regards the present war between Japan and Russia, Great Britain will continue to maintain strict neutrality unless some other Power or Powers should join in hostilities against Japan, in which case Great Britain will come to the assistance of Japan, and will conduct the war in common, and make peace in mutual agreement with Japan.

Article VII.—The conditions under which armed assistance shall be afforded by either Power to the other in the circumstances mentioned in the present Agreement, and the means by which such assistance is to be made available, will be arranged by the Naval and Military authorities of the Contracting Parties, who will from time to time consult one another fully and freely upon all questions of mutual interest.

Article VIII.—The present Agreement shall, subject to the provisions of Article VI., come into effect immediately after the date of its signature, and remain in force for ten years from that date.

In case neither of the High Contracting Parties should have notified twelve months before the expiration of the said ten years the intention of terminating it, it shall remain binding until the expiration of one year from the day on which either of the High Contracting Parties shall have denounced it. But if, when the date fixed for its expiration arrives, either ally is actually engaged in war, the alliance shall, ipso facto, continue until peace is concluded.

To Maintain Peace.—Lord Lansdowne, in his despatch, expresses the hope that the Russian Government will recognise that the new Agreement is:—

"An international instrument to which no exception can be taken by any of the Powers interested in the affairs of the Far East."

Further Lord Lansdowne says :-

"His Majesty's Government believe that they may count upon the good will and support of all the Powers in endeavouring to maintain peace in Eastern Asia, and in seeking to uphold the integrity and independence of the Chinese Empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in that country."

"On the other hand, the special interests of the Contracting Parties are of a kind upon which they are fully entitled to insist, and the announcement that those interests must be safeguarded is one which can create no surprise, and need give rise to no misgivings."—Cd. 2,690.

IMPORTANT ARTICLES.—Lord Lansdowne calls especial attention to the wording of Article II., which lays down distinctly that it is only in the case of an unprovoked attack made on one of the Contracting Parties by another Power or Powers, and when that Party is defending its territorial rights and special interests from aggressive action, that the other Party is bound to come to its assistance.

Article III., dealing with the question of Corea, is also deserving of especial attention. It recognises in the clearest terms the paramount position which Japan at this moment occupies and must henceforth occupy in Corea, and her right to take any measures which she may find necessary for the protection of her political, military, and economic interests in that country. It is, however, expressly provided that such measures must not be contrary to the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of other nations. The new Treaty no doubt differs at this point conspicuously from that of 1902 (see below). It has, however, become evident that Corea, owing to its close proximity to the Japanese Empire and its inability to stand alone, must fall under the control and tutelage of Japan.

This point, it will be remembered, was readily conceded by Russia in the Treaty of Peace recently concluded with Japan. There is every reason to believe that similar views are held by other Powers with regard to the relations which should subsist between Japan and Corea.

THE OLD AGREEMENT.—It may be useful here to give a summary of the terms of the old Agreement. The preamble laid it down that the two countries were moved by a desire to maintain the status quo, and by their special interest in the independence of China and Corea, and in securing equal commercial opportunities for all nations.

It was accordingly agreed as follows :-

Article I.—The Contracting Parties recognise the independence of China and Corea and disclaim any aggressive tendencies. Having in view their special commercial interests in China, and also the political and commercial interests of Japan in Corea, they recognise it will be admissible for either of them to take measures to safeguard those interests if threatened by the aggressive action of another Power or disturbances in China or Corea, which may necessitate protection for the lives and properties of the subjects of either of the Contracting Parties.

Article II.—If Great Britain or Japan in defence of their interests should be at war with another Power, the other Contracting Party will remain neutral and use its efforts to prevent interference from other Powers.

Article III.—If, under the circumstances of Article II., other Powers join in hostilities, the other Contracting Party will assist its ally, and make "war in common and make peace in mutual agreement."

Article IV.—The Contracting Parties agree not to enter into arrangements with other Powers without mutual consultation.

Article V.—When the interests of the Parties are in jeopardy the two Governments will communicate with one another frankly and fully.

Article VI.—The Agreement remains in force for five years from date of signature, but can be terminated before then by either party giving twelve months' notice. If, however, either party is at war when the expiration of the original period or of the notice occurs, the treaty continues in force until peace is concluded.

THE TWO AGREEMENTS COMPARED.—In comparing the two Agreements, the following changes will be noticed :-

Recognition of Japanese paramountcy in Corea.
 Extension of Agreement 'to the regions of Eastern Asia and India."

(3) Mutual assistance in case of war in defence of interests mentioned in preamble in place of neutrality (if ally attacked by one Power) and assistance (if attacked by two or more Powers).

(4) Terms of new Agreement, 10 years; old Agreement, 5 years.

An Instrument of Prace.—In the concluding paragraph of his despatch, Lord

Lansdowne says that the Government :-

"Venture to anticipate that the alliance thus concluded, designed as it is with objects which are purely peaceful and for the protection of rights and interests, the validity of which cannot be contested, will be regarded with approval " by the Russian and French Governments.

He continues:-

They (the Government) are justified in believing that its conclusion may not have been without effect in facilitating the settlement by which the war has been so happily brought to an end, and they earnestly trust that it may, for many years to come, be instrumental in securing the peace of the world in those regions which come within its scope.—Cd. 2,690.

That will also be, it goes without saying, the earnest trust of everybody in this country.

GLOSSARY OF POLITICAL TERMS.

Address, The, in answer to the King's Speech, was formerly a series of resolutions passed by both Houses echoing the language of the Speech, but in recent years its form has been much modified, and it is usually now a simple expression of thanks to His Majesty. An amendment to the Address is one of the forms of expressing approval or disapprobation of the policy of the Government, and if carried is incorporated in the Address and presented to the King. The passage of a hostile smendment usually involves the resignation of the Government.

Addresses to the Crown proceeding from individuals are presented through the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Adjournment.-See Prorogation.

Adullamites.—See Cave.

Ad valorem Duty.—(Lat. valor, value). A duty charged at a certain rate per cent. on the value of goods, leases, &c. The system, as applicable to customs duties, &c., has been condemned by Mr. Gladstone and other Chancellors of the Exchequer.

Advowson.—The right of presentation to, or the patronage of, a benefice. "An advowson is of the nature of a temporal property, and a spiritual trust."—(Wharton.)

Affirmation (Parliamentary) is made by Quakers and others who have religious objections to taking the cath. (Generally) a solemn declaration without an oath.

Alabama Claims.—The damages (£3,196,875) awarded to the United States in 1873 as compensation for the injuries inflicted upon American commerce by the Confederate cruiser Alabama, which had been fitted out in England.

Alaska Tribunal.—The International Conmission, 1908, on which Great Britain, Canada, and the United States were represented, for the settlement of the boundaries between Canada and the United States in the Alaska region. The President was Lord Alverstone, Lord Chief Justice of England.

Alien.—A subject of a foreign state who has not obtained a certificate of naturalisation.

"All the Talents."—A nickname applied to the Grenville Administration, 1806-7.

Ambassador.—In ordinary parlance often signifies any diplomatic envoy. Strictly, however, it is only an envoy of the highest class who is called an Ambassador. See Plenipotentiary; Chargé d'Affaires.

Appropriation Act.—Carries into effect the resolutions of the Committee of Ways and Means, authorising the application of a sum out of the Consolidated Fund and appropriating to each separate service the several funds voted by the Committee of Supply. It is among the last of the Bills introduced during a Session of Parliament.

Appropriation in Aid.—An appropriation in aid of a Vote is the sum received (e.g. for fees, proceeds of sales, repayments, &c.) in connection with the service to which the vote is applicable, and taken in reduction of the gross amount that would otherwise have to be voted by Parliament.

Articles of War.—Ordinances for the government of Troops, Samen and Camp Followers. Prior to 1689, the year in which the Mutiny Act was passed, they were issued for each Campaign. Those issued in 1878 were consolidated with the Mutiny Act, in the Army Discipline Act, 1879, now replaced by the Army Act, 1881.

Naval Articles of War are of a similar nature.

Naval Articles of War are of a similar nature. They have been incorporated in the Naval Discipline Act. Ashbourne Acts.—The Land Purchase (Ireland) Acts, 1885 and 1888, under which a sum of £10,000,000 was set apart to be advanced to tenants for the purchase of their holdings, being repayable in 49 years.

Ashburton Treaty, concluded in 1842 between Lord Ashburton, representing England, and President Tyler, of the United States, defining the boundaries of the United States and Canada, &c.

Assessed Taxes.—The term now applies only to the land tax and house duty.

Balance of Power.—A principle much discussed in the early years of the present century, and invoked to secure the independence and integrity of states, and control the ambition of sovereigns.

and £4,500,000 in 1803-9.

(f) Including £80,000 repaid to Revenue out of Telegraph Loan.

(g) Including £3,200,000 for Alabama Claims.

(h) Including £200,000 for Localisation of Military Forces, and £76,565 for charges connected with the purchase of the Suez Canal Shares, not covered by money raised.

(k) Including Extraordinary Expenditure on account of Russo-Turkish War.

(l) Including Extraordinary Expenditure on account of War in South Africa.

(m) Exclusive of the proportion of the Death Duties, and of the proceeds of certain Licence duties, and since 1890-91 of the portion of the Beer and Spirit duties, assigned to the relief of Local Taxation.

(n) This includes £2,009,958 on account of the Debt Conversion operations, which, though not provided for in the Budget Estimates, was met out of Revenue. But for this special expenditure the surplus in the last column would have been £2,798,940.

^{*} Excluding Expenditure out of Loans raised for Fortifications and Military Barracks and for the purposes of the Imperial and Naval Defence Acts, &c.

(a) Norz.—The amounts stated above for the years for 1882-3 to 1902-5 are not properly comparable with those given for previous years, the Army and Navy Extra Receipts and the Indian Contributions for Military Charges, formerly paid into the Exchequer, being now taken in aid of Expenditure. If these sums, and the payments made from them, had been included, the amounts in cols. 1, 2, 4, and 5, for the years referred to, would each have been considerably larger than stated, and the proportions per head of the population would, of course, have been somewhat increased.

(c) Including £764,829 for War in New Zealand.

(d) Including additional Income Tax, £840,000, imposed in December, 1867.

(e) Including Smplemental Votes for Abyssinian Expedition and other Services, £2,862,000 in 1867-8, and £4,506,000 in 1868-9.

Revenue.—Gross Amount received from each of the Principal Branches of Revenue in each of the undermentioned years (In thousands of pounds-000's omitted.)

* Amount of New Estate Duty and of old Probate and Account and Temporary Estate Duties collected, exclusive of proportion due to Local Taxation Account. See also note †† below.

† Imposed in 1889 (one per cent. on all property, real or personal, in the case of estates exceeding £10,000 in amount) one-third in 1888-9, and one-half subsequently.

Exclusive of the proportion of receipts from Probate Duty due to Local Taxation Accounts one-third in 1888-9, and one-half subsequently.

1† NOTE.—The amounts of property subjected to Duty, stated above, are not properly comparable with the amounts stated for earlier years, on account of the great changes introduced into the system of the Death Duties by the "Finance Act, 1894." The New Estate Duty, which is in substitution of the former Probate and Account Duties and the old Estate Duty of 1898 (see note i above), applies to the estates of all persons dying after the 1st August, 1894; but while the Probate Duty applied only to personalty, the New Estate Duty applies to ALL PROPERTY, real or personal, settled or unsettled, passing at death. A further difference between the old and new systems is to be found in the provisions of the "Finance Act, 1894," permitting, in certain circumstances, property to be declared and taken into consideration in fixing rates of duty on which duty may not actually be paid until subsequent years. The gross amount of capital of which the inland Revenue Department had notice as passing at death in 1904-1905 was 298,244,455.

Under the "Finance Act, 1894," the Local Taxation Account receives 1½ per cent. on all personalty in the United Kingdom passing by will or under Intestacy.

Death Duties.—Numbers of Estates and Net Amounts of Capital upon which Probate and Account Duties were paid in the year 1904-1905; with similar particulars in regard to Estates subject to Estate Duty of which the Inland Revenue Board had notice as passing at death in the same year. Nozz.—The figures in the above table are exclusive of the Army and Navy for the years up to 1831, inclusive.

A Approximate.

A Exchasive of the Isle of Man and Channel Islands.

The excess in the number of females is partially attributable to the fact that men serving n the Army, Nasy, and the Merchant Service, abroad, are excluded from the reckoning.

A different method of arriving at the number of houses in Section from that previously used was adopted in 1861. In that year and at the subsequent enumerations every dwelling with a distinct outside entrance, or with a door opening directly into a common stair, was treated as a house

Note.—Owing to the change in area of the German Customs Union in 1839, when Bremen and the greater part of Hamburg came within the scope of the Union, the details for the years 1830-1888 have been estimated. The effect of this change appears to be that the bulk of the articles formerly included in the official German Trade Accounts as E ports to the Hanse Towns appears subsequently as Exports to oversea countries. In the above Table the value of the articles exported to the Hanse Towns in the years 1830-1838 has been apportioned to each of the above Groups of countries in the following proportions:—

* Exclusive of the value of ships exported and also of the " ${\it Veredelungsverkehr}$ " for home account.

^{*} In the years prior to 1874-5 net figures only were returned for Ireland under this Schedule. The full annual value of land assessed under Schedule B is given for all the years included in the table.

[†] The assessments on quarries, mines, ironworks, fisheries, canals, railways, gasworks, &c., were transferred from Schedule A to Schedule D from the 5th April, 1866.

 $[\]dagger$ All assessments on interest of Municipal and Corporation Stocks are included under Schedule D in 1892-3 and subsequent years instead of partly under Schedule C and partly under Schedule D, as in former years.
